

Congressional Record

PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 106^{th} congress, second session United States of America

Vol. 146

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2000

No. 7

House of Representatives

The House met at 10 a.m.

The Chaplain, Rev. James David Ford, D.D., offered the following pray-

Oh, gracious and loving God, as we come together in this time of prayer, we celebrate the diversity of our own lives and in the lives of the people around us.

As we see the differences in our own heritage and in our own histories, we are grateful that we can learn from each other, tell our stories and ideas and traditions and deepen our understanding of our shared humanity.

Even as we see that which makes us distinctive, so at that moment we marvel at the beauty of Your mighty creation and the grandeur and the miracle that You have made us as one people. Bless us this day and every day we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentlewoman from Washington (Ms. DUNN) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Ms. DUNN led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL FOR THE REAGANS

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, next week, the gentlewoman from Washington (Ms. DUNN) and I will introduce legislation to award the Congressional Gold Medal to former President and First Lady, Ronald and Nancy Reagan, in recognition of their distinguished record of service to the United States.

I encourage my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join us in commemorating the Reagans and their service to our great Nation.

Under President Reagan's leadership, the United States experienced unprecedented economic growth and gained a renewed sense of national pride.

Known as the Great Communicator, Ronald Reagan maintained his unique poise and uncanny wit during his tenure in office and throughout his life.

His wife, Nancy, served as gracious First Lady and as the tireless leader of the well-known anti-drug "Just Say No" campaign. She held her own.

Together, the Reagans have been dedicated to promoting national pride and improving the quality of life in America. Ronald Reagan will celebrate his 89th birthday this weekend. Awarding the Congressional Gold Medal to the Reagans would certainly make a wonderful birthday gift; but more importantly, the award would be a fitting tribute for their contributions to our country.

DEPLORING NEOFASCISM IN AUSTRIA

(Mr. LANTOS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his re-

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, on whatever side my colleagues were last night in the New Hampshire primary, I am calling on all of them to join me as I introduce a resolution this morning respect to the outrageous neofascist developments in Austria.

Austria for decades paraded as Hitler's first victim, when in point in fact Austria was Hitler's first ally. Now, the neo-Nazi leader is about to be admitted to the Austrian government. All other 14 nations of the European Union are downgrading diplomatic relations with Austria, and my resolution calls for a voluntary boycott of tourism to Austria, the purchase of Austrian products, the use of Austrian Airlines, and the downgrading of our own diplomatic relations with Austria.

Mr. Speaker, this is not a time to introduce fascism into the New Europe. I applaud the European leadership for denouncing this outrageous neofascist development.

MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

(Mr. KNOLLENBERG asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to remind my colleagues of the fact that the Committee on Ways and Means is marking up marriage penalty relief and also to talk about the negative impact of the marriage pen-

Under current law, 21 million couples are required to pay on average an additional $1,400 a year in taxes simply because they are married. The marriage penalty is a ridiculous policy that is undermining the institution of marriage and making it harder for working families to get ahead.

Mr. Speaker, the marriage penalty is especially hard on the family's second wage earner, often the wife's salary, because their income is taxed at higher marginal rates. In response to these higher rates, many people, especially the second earners, choose not to work or to work less. This not only makes these couples worse off because of their decreased income, because it also reduces the national output. In short, the marriage penalty punishes success.

This symbol represents the time of day during the House proceedings, e.g., 1407 is 2:07 p.m.

Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.

I commend the leadership for making the marriage penalty relief a top priority, and I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to pass this commonsense legislation.

HONORING MONROE SWEETLAND

(Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BLUMÉNAUER. Mr. Speaker, as the voters of New Hampshire salvage some dignity from the presidential nominating process, it was keenly observed in Oregon by Monroe Sweetland, the father of Oregon's modern Democratic Party.

Last month in Portland, we gathered to celebrate his 90th birthday. Although a partisan Democrat, he was introduced at this gathering by his good friend, Republican Senator Mark Hatfield.

Monroe was a confident of Eleanor Roosevelt and ally of President Truman. He was in Indonesia during "the year of living dangerously" and then returned to the United States to be political director for Western States of the NEA for over a decade.

Monroe is a journalist, State senator, and small businessman who last year ran a very competitive race for State senate. Legally blind for years, his slogan was that his eyesight may be dim, but his vision is clear. I am proud of the many contributions of this great man and look forward to his next decade of public service. He shows how politics should be conducted while living life to the fullest.

ELIAN GONZALEZ AND FAITH

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, weak and thirsty, Elizabet spent the last hours of her life praying to God to protect her son, Elian; to guide him to safety in the land of liberty. She shaded Elian with her own body, gave him bottled water so he would not dehydrate, did everything humanly possible so that he would live.

As darkness enveloped her frail body and before she disappeared into the depths of the Atlantic, she turned to Elian and said to him, "My child, remember that prayer I taught you? Pray to your guardian angel. Ask him to watch over you, for you are in God's hands now."

Elizabet succumbed to the power of the sea, but Elian continued to pray and; on Thanksgiving Day, he would be saved under what one of his rescuers has classified as miraculous circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, one cannot help but wonder if there was divine intervention. As former President Ronald Reagan has said: without God, there is no prompting of the conscience.

So I ask my colleagues to search their conscience and consider what is right and just before making a decision on Elian's case. We can still hear his mother's last wishes from the depths of the sea

IRS INVESTIGATED

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, after destroying lives and ruining families for years, reports now say that the IRS is being investigated for targeting political opponents. Being one, I find it amusing that all of the sudden files are missing, agents have amnesia, and evidence just cannot be found.

Truth is, the IRS has been lying through their teeth for so long, they need braces. Think about it. Little Punxsutawney Phil can find his shadow, but the big bad IRS cannot find their laptops.

Beam me up, Mr. Speaker.

It is time to abolish both the income tax and the IRS. Replace it with a national retail sales tax.

Mr. Speaker, one last thing. I yield back the lies, crimes, dental needs, and amnesia of the "Internal Rectal Service."

CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL FOR RONALD AND NANCY REAGAN

(Ms. DUNN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, on February 6, Ronald Reagan will be celebrating his 89th birthday. To commemorate this occasion, I will be joining my colleague, the gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS), in introducing legislation to award the Congressional Gold Medal to Ronald and Nancy Reagan.

Together with his devoted First Lady, Ronald Reagan believed in the promise of the American dream. In an era of growing cynicism, the Reagans worked in their own optimistic, upbeat way to make America a place where everyone can rise as high and as far as her ability will take her.

In 1989, I had an opportunity personally to thank Ronald Reagan for his contributions to America. This was shortly after the Berlin Wall was taken down and the land he once declared an "evil empire" began to be dissolved. Now is the time to broaden this "thank you" so that it comes from all the American people.

Mr. Speaker, we can begin this process here in the Congress in a bipartisan way by awarding him and his First Lady the Congressional Gold Medal.

Mr. and Mrs. Reagan, this "thank you" is long overdue.

GOOD POLICY MAKES GOOD POLITICS

(Mr. KIND asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the winners in the New Hampshire primary yesterday: Vice President AL GORE and Senator JOHN MCCAIN. Let us be truthful, there are consistencies in their message that the voters are obviously responding to, one of which is the need to clean up the campaign finance mess that exists here in Washington, D.C. The other is their fiscally responsible message that I believe both of these individuals are delivering to sustain economic growth.

Mr. Speaker, it is a message that says before we get carried away with these projected budget surpluses, we still have existing obligations that we need to take care of. Obligations such as shoring up Social Security, Medicare, paying down the $5.7 trillion national debt, before we embark on large new tax cuts or large new spending programs.

In short, good policy is making good politics in these campaigns. Perhaps it would be wise for us Members in this chamber to wake up and realize what the American people are responding to and embracing, and work in a bipartisan fashion to address these very crucial issues before we embark on irresponsible fiscal policy in the coming year.

CIVILIANS MURDERED IN INDONESIA

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to talk about what is happening to the people of Ambon in Indonesia. Over 2,000 people have been killed in the past few months; hundreds have been severely wounded; dozens of churches have been burned, all as a result of fighting in Ambon and approximately 1,000 extremists having traveled to the area to wage jihad on the inhabitants.

Unfortunately, the Indonesian military has played a role in the death and terrorizing of civilians. In one report, a church was being guarded by its congregation when soldiers arrived. The military went into the church, started shooting, killed 24 men, dragged the bodies outside and burned them beyond recognition. The soldiers apparently belonged to the elite strategic reserve command and the paramilitary police.

Observers in local hospitals have heard numerous stories of people shot by soldiers of the Indonesian army.

Mr. Speaker, I commend President Wahid for his efforts to end this violence and I urge him to take the needed steps to bring the military under control and to bring to justice those responsible for brutally murdering innocent civilians.

OAK CREEK, WISCONSIN, HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS WANT TO SEE CHANGE

(Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, at a time when many adults question the seriousness and maturity of high school students, it is important for us to take a moment to pause to commend the group of high school students in Oak Creek, Wisconsin, who not only are doing something to improve our democracy, but I think challenge this very chamber to act in a responsible way.

A group of students in Oak Creek, Wisconsin, have formed their own political action committee entitled the Oak Creek High School FECA Fighters, for the Federal Election Campaign Act. They are collecting dollars and coins in a 5-gallon drum and will contribute it to presidential candidates who are supporting ways to change the way elections are financed. They do not like the law and want to see it changed.

Mr. Speaker, I commend these young students for getting involved in the democratic process, because this democracy only works as well as we make it work. It is the ultimate participatory sport, and these young people recognize that for this sport to continue, for this democracy to continue, they have to be involved. They are challenging us to reform the campaign laws. Let us follow their challenge and pass Shays-Meehan and make it law.

MARRIAGE PENALTY: TAX CODE PUNISHES TRADITIONAL, TWO-PARENT FAMILY

(Ms. PRYCE of Ohio asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, at a time when the traditional two-parent family becomes increasingly rare, the Internal Revenue Service continues to punish this important institution. Studies consistently confirm what common sense already has told us: more two-parent families mean healthier children with a much greater hope at success in school, on the job, and in life.

The marriage penalty affects about 28 million working couples. They pay an average of $1,400 in additional tax burden simply by saying "I do."

That is money that could be used to purchase a family computer, save for a child's college education, or make the car payments. Congress must address this immoral tax and strengthen the two-parent family, not punish it.

Mr. Speaker, I urge President Clinton to help Republicans enact significant relief from the marriage penalty this year. Republicans will not rest until the marriage penalty tax has been eliminated once and for all.

THE IMPORTANCE OF FISCAL RESPONSIBILITY

(Mr. SHERMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues in the New Democratic Coalition in addressing the House today on the importance of fiscal responsibility. There is huge pressure on us. Pressure to adopt the huge tax cuts proposed by George W. Bush, the governor of Texas; pressure to adopt hundreds of new government programs. With today's surplus, we can afford some responsible tax cuts and we can afford some additional efforts to deal with intractable social programs.

1015

But we should remember that the economic expansion that we are in now has already done more for the poor than 100 Great Society programs and has already done more for business than every tax gismo put into the 1981 tax bill that was designed to use the Tax Code and tax cuts to incentivize business expansion.

Mr. Speaker, we need fiscal responsibility and to pay down the debt for our seniors to keep Social Security solvent; for our children, so that we do not leave them a mountain of debt. But even perhaps, more importantly, we need fiscal responsibility. We need to be paying down the national debt in order to continue this unprecedented economic expansion.

MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY RELIEF

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, last year this Congress passed legislation to end the unfair marriage tax penalty. Regrettably, President Clinton chose to veto it. If he had signed our legislation into law, 28 million married couples could have had up to $1,400 in additional tax relief this year. Especially, this extra money would have meant a lot to couples just starting out together.

Instead of having the choice to invest this money for their future or use it for everyday expenses they are forced to hand this hard-earned money over to the IRS. And this tax hits average wage earners the hardest. This is unfair

Mr. Speaker, this House is still committed to ending the tax on married people. This year we will fix the marriage tax penalty.

I urge the President to work with us this time to make it happen.

DISCRIMINATION CLAIMS AGAINST LOCKHEED MARTIN

(Ms. McKINNEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. McKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, I thought Southern good ol' boys were a dying breed. How mistaken could I have been? They must have all just been hiding in Lockheed Martin's management suites.

Now, why do I say this? Just imagine a black woman having to get a bathroom pass from her white coworkers and then one of them having to escort her to the rest room to make sure she actually tinkles in the toilet.

And if you are in need of Ku Klux Klan robes and membership cards, I know where you can find some.

Just imagine coming to work and finding a noose hanging around your tool box.

Also, seems Lockheed has found the fountain of youth. How else could they have so many 50-year-old black boys working for them? Not surprisingly, discrimination claims are being filed against Lockheed Martin all across the South from Alabama to North Carolina

Mr. Speaker, if John Rocker needs a job, I think I found the perfect place to hide him.

TOTAL U.S. DEBT

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I bring this chart because I think if we do nothing else, we should be up front, very honest. We should not continue to hoodwink the American people in talking about reducing the debt of this country.

I bring this chart, the total debt of this country is $5.72 trillion. I divide it in three segments: The Social Security debt, which is now about a trillion; the other trust fund debts are about a $1.1 trillion; and the debt held by Wall Street or the debt held by the public is now $3.6 trillion.

What we are doing, when we are saying everybody in Washington says we are paying down the debt, we are borrowing from Social Security; that is why the Social Security debt gets bigger.

Mr. Speaker, we are using those dollars borrowed from the Social Security trust fund to pay down the Wall Street debt, so the net total debt, subject to the debt limit, the total debt of this country that we are passing on to our kids continues to go up.

Let us be honest about it. Let us try to achieve a real balanced budget, and that means the total debt of this country does not continue to rise.

REPUBLICAN LEADERSHIP CONTINUES TO STALL ATTEMPTS TO PASS MEASURES HELPING MIDDLE CLASS FAMILIES

(Ms. DELAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, last year the Republican majority failed to act on the basic issues facing hard working Americans. Time and time again, they sided with special interests over the public interest.

Today, the Republican leadership continues to stall attempts to pass measures that would help middle class families such as saving Social Security and Medicare, improving our public schools and passing real HMO reform.

The American public wants to protect Social Security and Medicare first. We should also be paying down the debt, instead of giving tax breaks to the top 5 percent. We need to pass a real Patients' Bill of Rights that lets doctors and patients make medical decisions, not HMO bureaucrats. And we need to provide a prescription drug benefit for all seniors. These should be our top priorities.

The Republican leadership needs to put the public's interest ahead of the special interests. Our families and our communities deserve a Congress that fights for them. We need the opportunity to address the real needs of the American people.

BIENNIAL BUDGET PROCESS WOULD ELIMINATE ELECTION YEAR GRIDLOCK

(Mr. STEARNS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, I support the biennial budget process. That is that we should have: The budget process every 2 years and not every year. I have a bill, H.R. 493, to provide such a process. Senator DOMENICI, in the Senate, has a companion bill.

Why is this an improvement over the current process? I believe that by adopting such a measure we would remove all this political in-fighting partisanship every year, plus all the pork barreling that occurs so often.

What I would like to see is that in the first session we pass the first 13 appropriations bills, then in the second session we do oversight to find out what has happened with all this legislation that we passed. Is it working? The second session could also be reserved for looking at the emergency spending.

I think the current process is very partisan and we should remove it. So please support H.R. 493, the biennial budget process.

CONGRESS SHOULD PUT ITS FINANCIAL HOUSE IN ORDER

(Mr. MOORE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, it is time we put our financial House in order. We have the opportunity for the first time in a generation to do the right thing for ourselves, for our country, and for future generations.

We must begin to conduct our financial affairs in this country the way families across America have for years and years. For years they have observed three very simple but unspoken rules: Number one, do not spend more money than is made. Number two, pay off debts. And number three, take care of basics.

The basics for our country, Mr. Speaker, are Social Security, Medicare, national defense, and a number of other things that we could all talk about here.

Our willingness to do the right thing now will pay tremendous dividends to us now and to our children and grand-children in the future in terms of lower interest rates, and in terms of $243 billion that we paid in 1998 as interest on the national debt.

If we do this now, Mr. Speaker, we will do a tremendous thing for our country, and I ask all of my colleagues in Congress to join with me in an effort to begin the debate to pay down our national debt.

DO AWAY WITH MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

(Mr. WELLER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WELLER. Mr. Speaker, over the last several years many of us have asked a very fundamental question, and that is, is it right, is it fair that under our Tax Code if individuals get married they pay higher taxes than if they stay single? Is it right, is it fair that under our Tax Code that 28 million married working couples pay on average $1,400 more in higher taxes just because they are married?

Well, this House, under the leader-ship of the Speaker, is going to do something about that. Today, the House Committee on Ways and Means is going to have committee action on H.R. 6, legislation which will wipe out the marriage tax penalty for the vast majority of those who suffer it, providing marriage tax relief for 28 million married working couples; couples such as Shad and Michelle Hallihan, two public school teachers from Joliet, Illinois, who suffer the marriage tax penalty just because they are married.

Now, their marriage tax penalty is about $1,000, just below average. But Michelle Hallihan told me, she said, "Tell your friends in Washington that the marriage tax penalty is real money for real people." That thousand dollar marriage tax penalty that Shad and Michelle suffer, they just had a baby, and she pointed out that that $1,000 would purchase for her and her husband and her child 3,000 diapers.

Let us eliminate the marriage tax penalty. I am pleased a dozen Democrats have finally joined with us. We are going to make a bipartisan effort and wipe out the marriage tax penalty.

NEW DEMOCRATIC BUDGET

(Mr. CROWLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, last week the Congressional Budget Office released its latest estimates for the budget surplus. The CBO laid out three different on-budget surplus estimates ranging from $800 billion to $1.9 trillion.

Depending on the actions of this Congress, we can use the surplus wisely or it can be unwisely spent, without paying off the debt, shoring up Social Security, or funding desperately needed programs, such as providing prescription drug coverage for Medicare recipients and school construction and modernization of our schools.

Mr. Speaker, it is imperative that that we pay down the national debt. I fully support the President's goals stated in his State of the Union Address to eliminate public debt by 2013.

As has been indicated, this Congress, and implied by my colleagues on the other side of the aisle, the Republican leadership will not adhere to the spending caps in the fiscal year 2001 budget. For this reason, it is imperative that we use the surplus to ensure the long-term solvency of Social Security and pay off the national debt.

Once we have done this, we can then use the remaining surplus and the money saved in interest payments on our debt to enact a voluntary prescription drug plan so that seniors do not have to choose between food and medication. We can help our crumbling schools and build new classrooms to relieve a system bursting at its systems. And, yes, we can even give targeted tax cuts to help hard working American families make ends meet.

ELIMINATE THE MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

(Mr. KINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, 20 years ago my wife, Libby, and I walked down the aisle. And we were lucky, we had a lot of family and friends there, who showered us with gifts. My wife seemed to have written thank you notes for a month or two afterwards trying to catch up.

Now, we got married in October. Well, come April we got a little notice from Uncle Sam. It was not a wedding gift, though. It was the marriage tax penalty. Because we decided not to live with each other; because we decided to get married, we had to pay more money. And just like Michelle and Shad Hallihan in Joliet, Illinois, we in Savannah, Georgia, had to pay extra.

Now, as the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Weller) said, Michelle is pregnant. She is going to have a baby. Uncle Sam is going to take away about $1,000 worth of diapers because of the marriage tax penalty. But they will also be having to buy diaper changing tables and cribs and all kinds of other things, such as car seats and so forth. Why? Because they are doing the right thing. Because they are making a lifetime commitment.

Because they are going to become property taxpayers, to send their kids to the schools, they are going to contribute to the United Way and to all the charities and the churches, for that Uncle Sam is penalizing them. Common sense says we need marriage tax relief. It is a good bill. I hope that we can pass it soon.

WHEN AND HOW MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY IS ELIMINATED IS IMPORTANT

(Mr. MINGE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MINGE. Mr. Speaker, it appears that the debate of the day is over the marriage tax penalty, and we have had a very attractive picture of a young couple at their wedding and an indication of what it costs that young couple. I do not think there is any real disagreement in this body over the importance of eliminating the marriage tax penalty. The real question is when do we do it and how do we do it.

There have been estimates circulating in Washington that the plan that the Republican leadership will be trotting out this week will cost three times as much as would be necessary to eliminate the marriage tax penalty if it were limited to moderate income taxpayers, such as the couple whose picture we have seen.

Also, there is a great deal of concern as to how we avoid simply being caught up in the enthusiasm of doing something by Valentine's Day. Well, for one thing, we ought to at least be adopting a budget in this body on a timely basis and making sure that our elimination of the marriage tax penalty fits into the budget that we are dealing with.

So, Mr. Speaker, I think that we would do well to admonish ourselves to proceed in a very deliberate fashion, to consider the alternatives, and to make sure that by the time we are done we are proud of our product and we are proud of our process.

1030

MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

(Mr. MORAN of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, the problem is there is no surplus. Even though CBO has projected a $1.9 trillion surplus over the next 10 years, they made false assumptions in coming up with that surplus.

For example, if we project the current level of appropriations and only increase by the rate of inflation, not assuming population changes or any attempt to improve quality of life of the American people, then more than a trillion dollars is going to be used up in meeting just the need to increase by inflation. It does not assume that we will sustain any of the tax extenders.

Obviously, we are going to do that. It does not assume that we will fix the alternative minimum tax. If we do not do that by 2009, we are going to have more than 15 million people paying the alternative minimum taxes. It is going to reach down to people with incomes below $50,000 a year. That has to be fixed.

It is going to cost as much as $230 billion just to sustain the kind of rational tax cuts that are necessary. We want the marriage penalty fixed but not when half of the people that are benefited are now getting a marriage bonus. Because they get married, they pay less taxes. Half of the money in today's bill that is being marked up would go to those families. That is not of the best use of our resources.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2005, WORKPLACE GOODS JOB GROWTH AND COMPETITIVE-NESS ACT OF 1999

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, by the direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 412 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 412

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2005) to establish a statute of repose for durable goods used in a trade or business. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the fiveminute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII and except pro forma amendments for the purpose of debate. Each amendment so printed may be offered only by the Member who caused it to be printed or his designee and shall be considered as read. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Burr of North Carolina). The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. Pryce) is recognized for 1 hour.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my friend, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. All time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 412 is a modified open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 2005, the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act. The rule provides for one hour of general debate, equally divided between the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

After general debate, the bill will be considered under an open amendment process, during which any Member may offer any germane amendment as long as it is preprinted in the CONGRES-SIONAL RECORD.

And the minority will have an additional opportunity to change the bill through the customary motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

So I think it is fair to say that this rule encourages a full debate and accommodates any Member who wants to improve upon the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, this act is a bipartisan bill that creates a uniform statute of repose for durable goods. In layman's terms, that means that 18 years after a product is sold, durable goods manufacturers will have some protection from the liability for injury caused by use of their products.

The thinking behind this legislation is that if a product has been used safely for a substantially long period of time, it is not likely that it was defective when it was originally purchased. If an injury occurs after almost two decades of use during which time the manufacturer had no control over the product, it is more likely that the product was either misused or not well maintained. In such cases, it is unfair to hold the manufacturer liable.

The encouraging news is that, in most cases when manufacturers are sued for injuries caused by old products, the manufacturer wins; but this justice is not won without a price. The costs of defending a case involving an old product are more burdensome because establishing a strong defense may involve tracking down an employee who has long since retired, indeed may no longer be alive, digging up old records, and recalling events that occurred many, many years ago.

The time and money required to litigate such cases divert resources that could otherwise be spent on developing innovation, increasing production, creating jobs, or providing benefits to employees.

¹ H.R. 2005 strives for a balance by providing remedies for legitimate claims and at the same time protecting manufacturers from the cost of unreasonable and unnecessary litigation.

The bill is narrow in its application of the liability protection it provides. The death and personal injury section of the bill is limited to those eligible for Worker's Compensation.

The bill also takes into account latent injuries, which may not manifest themselves for years, by exempting cases where harm is caused by toxic chemicals. Exemptions are also provided for cars, boats, aircraft, or passenger trains.

Further, if a product is covered by a warranty that exceeds 18 years, the bill allows suits to be filed until the end of the warranty period.

Establishing a national statute of repose for durable goods is not a new idea. Bills containing a national statute of repose have been considered by every Congress for almost 2 decades. And currently 19 States have statutes of repose laws covering a variety of products and ranging from 6 to 15 years.

But durable goods are often sold nationally, which creates a disparity of results for claimants and manufacturers in different States. The provisions of H.R. 2005 would preempt State law, thereby extending the 18-year time limitation for workers and States that have statute of repose laws and creating a uniform law in the 30 States that do not have these laws on the books

Statute of repose laws are not unique to the United States. European and Japanese manufacturers benefit from statute of repose laws that provide a competitive advantage in the amount of time and resources they save, which then can be used to grow their businesses and market their products.

These are many of the arguments in favor of H.R. 2005. But this legislation does not have its opponents. And while the Committee on Rules did not hear from the Members who have concerns about this bill, the committee recognizes that some disagree with the provisions, which is why the rule allows for a full debate and a limited number of amendments.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would urge all of my colleagues, regardless of their views on H.R. 2005, to support this fair and open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. PRYCE) for yielding to me the customary 30 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I am a cosponsor of the underlying bill, the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act, H.R. 2005. This bill establishes a uniform nationwide 18-year time limit on the civil liability of manufacturers of durable goods, such as machine tools.

Under the measure, civil suits for damages against durable goods manufacturers could be brought only within 18 years after the product enters the stream of commerce. This is a common sense reform proposal that would promote the competitiveness of American manufacturers while simultaneously protecting U.S. workers.

My district in Rochester, New York, is a large manufacturing district. We are the proud birthplace of a number of Fortune 500 companies, such as Eastman Kodak, Xerox Corporation, Bausch & Lomb, and Johnson & Johnson. Indeed, we are the largest per capita exporting city in the United States. This region exports more than all but nine States. We are among the top 10 exporting areas in the entire country.

But the durable goods manufacturing industry is subject to frequent product liability lawsuits targeted against products that are often decades old and have been resold or modified without the original manufacturer's knowledge or control. The potential liability in these products is literally endless.

Wasting money on everyone but the injured parties in these lawsuits is inefficient and does little good. In fact, it hurts American workers, businesses, and consumers. And our foreign competitors do not have the same risks and costs as the United States manufactur-

The European Union and Japan both have a 10-year statute of repose, so they maintain a distinct cost advantage from pricing products. And implementing the 18-year limit would help to even the playing field.

Moreover, the measure would not harm workers on the ability to be justly compensated in the event of injury. In fact, the measure guarantees the worker would be eligible for Worker's Compensation. The worker could also have a cause of action for negligent maintenance of the machine.

The bill provides a valid solution to a problem facing durable goods manufacturers while ensuring the injured claimants will recourse to benefits in the Worker's Compensation system. It is a modest, targeted bill that deserve Congress' support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, we are going to hear a lot of talk today about the details in this bill. I would like to offer just a few general thoughts.

It is important for us to recognize that this bill will not cause injured parties to go uncompensated. The bill does not apply unless injured parties are covered by Worker's Compensation. This bill does not override more protective, more generous express warranties that these products might have. And this bill is very limited in terms of both the time period and the goods that it covers.

What this bill does do, importantly, is it separates out the least productive portion of the cost, the price, of goods and services in this country, the litigation-driven costs. It separates those out and tries to get a handle on them out and tries to get a handle on them. The National Association of Manufacturing Technology says that one-third of respondents say they have been sued in these types of lawsuits, suits against manufacturing equipment; and while it is true that only five percent of these claims actually make it to trial, and of those that actually make it to trial, the vast majority result in favor of the manufacturer, the fact that they have to constantly defend these suits is a litigation-driven cost, it is a litigation tax not borne by these employers but borne by consumers because it raises the cost of all of their products.

And unless we create a national standard, those manufacturers who have to deal with a multitude of States also have to follow a multitude of liability provisions, increasing their costs.

So this is a tax on every good and service. It makes our goods less competitive worldwide. As my colleagues have already heard, the European Union and Japan have a more limited statute of repose. This is a tax, a drag on the economy. It costs us jobs.

I would urge all of my colleagues to support not only this very reasonable rule but also the underlying bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding, and I rise in support of this rule and the legislation it deals with.

1045

This bill before us today is about helping create American jobs. I represent the town of Vero Beach, Florida, the home of Piper Aircraft. Let me share with my colleagues what has happened to this company and their employees over the past 15 years. In 1988, Piper had about 3,000 employees and produced more than 500 aircraft per year. Just 3 years later, in July of 1991, Piper Aircraft was forced into Chapter 11 bankruptcy and the workforce had declined from 3,000 to 400.

What happened? Why did 2,600 Americans lose their jobs? Yes, 2,600 Americans lost their jobs. They lost their jobs because of excessive lawsuits. The courts held Piper liable for every aircraft that they had produced since 1937. Piper may not have seen an aircraft since it was sold and left their facility since 1940, yet they were being held liable in courts, even if the plane had been significantly altered or had been poorly maintenanced for 50 years. This was wrong. Yet it was happening.

Piper could not purchase liability insurance. No one would insure that kind of liability. Piper had to pay for lawsuits and settlements out of their own pocket. This led to their having to file Chapter 11 bankruptcy and the loss of jobs to more than 2,600 Americans.

Around this same time, a French airplane manufacturer made significant gains in providing aircraft to the U.S. market. Aerospatiale gained a significant share of the U.S. market because U.S. manufacturers of small aircraft had been forced into bankruptcy. Our liability laws had resulted in the destruction of jobs here in the U.S. and the creation of jobs in France. I believe our business in Congress should be to create U.S. jobs, not jobs for foreign competitors.

In 1994, the Congress passed legislation limiting liability to 18 years for aircraft produced in the United States. What has this done for Piper Aircraft? These liability limitations have resulted in the creation of over 1,000 jobs in Vero Beach, Florida. Today, 5 years after Congress passed that liability limitation, Piper now employs 1,500 people; and I believe they will continue to grow in the years ahead. This year, Piper will again produce 500 aircraft, four times what they had produced 5 years ago.

Liability reform creates jobs. Do we want to create more jobs here in America by establishing reasonable liability limits? H.R. 2005 will do this for the rest of American industries like the reforms that were passed in 1994 and have worked so well. If Members want to create more jobs here in the United States, support this rule and support the underlying bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In closing, I would just repeat that this is a modified open rule which only limits amendments through a preprinting requirement that the gentleman from California (Mr. Dreier) announced last Thursday. All of the Members who wish to participate in debate or offer thoughtful amendments may do so under this process. I urge support for this fair rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks and to insert extraneous material into the RECORD on H.R. 2005, the legislation under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BURR of North Carolina). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

WORKPLACE GOODS JOB GROWTH AND COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 412 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2005.

The Chair designates the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LATOURETTE) as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole, and requests the gentleman from New York (Mr. QUINN) to assume the chair temporarily.

1049

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2005) to establish a statute of repose for durable goods used in a trade or business, with Mr. QUINN, Chairman pro tempore, in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT).

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would first like to thank the bipartisan cosponsors of this bill, the gentlewoman (Ms. Kaptur), a Democrat; the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Shimkus), a Republican; and the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Slaughter), another Democrat, for their strong support of this bill.

Our bill, the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act of 1999 is a straightforward, commonsense product liability reform measure that limits frivolous lawsuits while ensuring that no injured party ever goes uncompensated. This modest proposal is critically needed to encourage economic growth, maintain the competitiveness of American durable good manufacturers and keep U.S. manufacturing jobs from moving overseas.

I hope that today we can engage in an honest and principled debate over this very important issue. However, I should warn my colleagues that opponents of this bill may, and I want to emphasize may, try to cloud the debate with anecdotes that do not hold up under closer scrutiny.

In the Committee on the Judiciary, for example, we heard opponents allude to various cases to make their points, but they did not tell us all the facts. In one case, they did not tell us that as the technology improved, the company developed a new safety device and began to retrofit their products. They did not tell us that the company sent out 13 notices to past purchasers to inform them of the new safety technology. They did not tell us that the printing press in question was 20 years old or had been resold five times and that the current owner, a leasing company, did not make the safety repairs. They did not tell us that the company leasing the machine deliberately altered the press and removed other safety guards. And they certainly did not mention that the employee who was injured was injured when he deliberately and inexplicably reached into the moving printing press.

So I ask that Members consider this bill on its merits and not be swayed by unreliable stories from those who continue to support frivolous lawsuits, lawsuits that are devastating to small business owners, devastating to their employees, and ultimately very expensive to consumers and to taxpayers.

Our bipartisan bill would help remedy this problem by recognizing that after a reasonable length of time, 18 years, manufacturers should not bear the burden of capricious litigation over products that have functioned safely for many, many years. It is essentially a statute of limitations past which a company cannot be sued for an injury caused by an overage product.

However, unlike a statute of limitations, a statute of repose measures the time available to file a claim for personal or property injuries from the date of the initial sale of the capital equipment. This limitation would not apply in any case where the injured party is not eligible to receive workers' compensation, ensuring that all employees retain the ability to seek compensation. I want to emphasize that, that if workers' comp does not cover the employee, this statute has absolutely no effect at all, so we are not jeopardizing anybody's right to recover here.

This is a reasonable proposal, based in part on the General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994 which created a similar 18-year statute of repose for the general aviation industry. The General Aviation Revitalization Act overwhelmingly passed Congress and was signed by the President. It is now the law of the land. It is also important to note that 19 States have already enacted some form of a statute of repose, all of them shorter than 18 years. Our bill will create a uniform standard that will discourage forum shopping by creative trial lawyers.

Mr. Chairman, even though manufacturers of durable goods are targeted as deep pockets, the vast majority of these product liability cases never actually go to trial or are won by the defendant manufacturers. However, these suits result in extremely high costs for small businesses and for their employees, with most of the money going to trial lawyers and expenses, not to the injured plaintiffs.

These suits involve decades-old equipment, once considered state of the art, which has been modified without the original manufacturer's knowledge or products that are not even being used for their intended purchase oftentimes. Obviously, lawsuits related to these overage products, some of which have been out of control of the original manufacturer for 20, 50 or even 100 years, can be endless. They are unfair.

I ask my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to join us in our efforts to help small businesses and workers and consumers and taxpayers by supporting the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act which is a commonsense reform measure that ensures compensation for all employees while seeking to end frivolous lawsuits.

Mr. Čhairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to observe that the danger of the legislation before us is that it would cut off the right of workers to hold wrongdoers accountable when they are injured by a defective product that is more than 18 years old, regardless of how long the product was built to last and regardless of whether or not the potential plaintiff has suffered an injury yet.

So while this bill is a dangerous piece

So while this bill is a dangerous piece of tort reform, the most egregious aspect of this measure is that it singles out American workers injured or killed on the job and prevents them from recovering damages from manufacturers of the defective workplace machinery. How can we start off the 21st century in the United States of America under such prosperous circumstances by the first thing we handle out of the Committee on the Judiciary in the year 2000 is a measure to further limit the right of recovery of workers injured by defective products that may be more than 18 years old?

I suggest this is a return to the middle ages. We are turning the clock back rather than moving into the new century. The measure that we are discussing today is inherently unfair to American workers, because under this measure they would only have access to their State workers' compensation system which typically only allows for lost wages and medical expenses. But if an innocent bystander, who happens to be nearby and is injured by the same piece of machinery under the same circumstance as the worker, the bystander can sue for lost damages for medical expenses, for future lost wages and for pain and suffering, loss of limb and permanent disfigurement.

What we are creating is a measure that the bystander can receive full compensation while the worker's recovery can be drastically limited. Are we seriously about to do that here today in the House of Representatives? This is why the working families are currently permitted under State law to sue the responsible third party, the manufacturer, and under the measure before us this bill cuts off that right.

And so the bill is unfair to workers, but it is also unfair to employers. Here we get both the employees and the employers. The employers will suffer how? First, they will not be able to recover for any property damage they suffer when older equipment fails and damages the workplace.

Secondly, the employers would no longer be able to recover the funds paid to an injured employee through workers' compensation. Currently, employers can recover these workers' compensation payments for many damages awarded employees in court.

1100

Now, the bill also raises concerns that deal with the issue of Federalism. This measure may run afoul of the commerce clause limiting congressional authority to the regulation of interstate commerce and the 10th Amendment, which reserves all of the enumerated powers to the States.

So here we have before us a measure, the first out of the Committee on the Judiciary in the year 2000, a measure that takes away the rights of working families, the rights of their employers, and the rights of States all at once. Is there any surprise that the labor movement in the United States opposes the measure? The AFL-CIO, the United Auto Workers, the Communication Workers, the Machinists, the Teamsters all oppose this measure, and it is very significant that the White House has issued an advisory that suggests that the President will veto this measure.

Now, the measure before us is not about growth or competitiveness; it is about limiting in a mean-spirited way the rights of American workers and their employers in a very important area. So I hope that as the Members of the House listen to this debate, that they will join with those of us who have vowed to oppose it and to vote against it.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Scott), a senior member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to oppose H.R. 2005 because it establishes a partial statute of repose. I say "partial" because it only applies to suits brought by employees. Supposedly they are covered by Worker's Compensation, but Worker's Compensation only covers 40 percent. Anyone else injured, killed or maimed by defective products can get full recovery. This partial statute of repose only applies to employees; and is, therefore, a mean-spirited application, just hurting the employees and nobody else.

Now, the statute of repose is generally a bad idea because it gives a disincentive to manufacturers to make sure that their products are safe, and when they find out those products are not safe, they have a disincentive in repairing them. If you are late in this time period, say 17 years, you are better off just running out the clock, just letting the time run, because you know that you will not have the responsibility after 18 years. If you try to fix it, then you find the situation where the 18-year clock starts all over again, and therefore there is a disincentive to come and fix dangerous materials and let people know and recall the goods so that the workers will be protected.

But this is just another mean-spirited attempt to deny opportunities for workers, and applies the statute of repose so that those employees who are killed or maimed will not be able to get full recovery.

It is for that reason, Mr. Chairman, that I would hope that we would defeat this bill, and let the law stand as it is.

Mr. CÓNYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH), who has worked on labor issues and is the former mayor of the largest city in Ohio.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in defense of workers and in defense of injured workers. I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 2005. With its title it implies job growth or encouragement of competitiveness. The bill instead deprives Americans of their rights when they are at work

H.R. 2005 is a radical change from current law. It turns all American workers into second-class citizens. Under this bill, if you are working when you are injured by a defective piece of equipment, you can no longer seek compensation for your pain and suffering, loss of limb or loss of life.

This bill actually bars injured workers from being fully compensated for injuries caused by a manufacturer's defective product after an 18-year period.

H.R. 2005 takes away rights of workers when they are on the job. It discriminates against workers and their families by depriving them of the right to remedies granted to all other citizens under State law. This bill could be called the "Workers' Right to a Safe Workplace Repeal Act."

Everyone here knows, or ought to know, that intrusion into the availability of State tort remedies is grossly inappropriate absent compelling evidence that the manufacturers need this bill's special protections. This bill fails to demonstrate legally why manufacturers should receive privileges outweighing current law that entitles workers to be fully compensated for their injuries.

This bill also fails morally in attempting to deprive injured workers of just recourse due to faulty equipment. If after 18 years a manufacturer is still making money from the use of old equipment, then the manufacturer should be held liable for injuries to workers using the equipment. If a manufacturer gets a benefit, they should also pay when workers are hurt.

The bill's sponsors have failed to identify a liability crisis or widespread pattern of abuse of costs associated with defending product liability cases. In fact, according to their own 1998 product liability survey, only six product liability cases went to trial, and in only one case did the jury find for the plaintiff.

U.S. manufacturers do not need H.R. 2005 to be competitive. What they do need is enforcement of our trade laws that prevent dumping, something that I have been on this floor on their behalf for, and they need laws that ban the import of products made by child and prison labor, something I also support.

In conclusion, there is virtually no reason to believe that H.R. 2005 will benefit manufacturers to the extent that would be worth depriving American workers of their rights and of their ability to be fully compensated under existing State laws.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote no on H.R. 2005.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Scott).

Mr. SCOTT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding me

Mr. Chairman, there is one point that I think needs to be made, and it can be made very briefly, and that is when you deny the employee the right to recover, if the Worker's Compensation had been paid by the employer and there is a recovery from the manufacturer of the dangerous product, the employer gets his Worker's Compensation back. So we are shifting the burden of the loss from the employee, who would get full recovery, and the employer, who would get his Worker's Compensation back, and the entire benefit of this goes to the manufacturer of the dangerous product, who could have in fact known of the danger, but because of this legislation did not bother to tell anybody that there was a fix that was needed.

This not only hurts the employee, but it also hurts the employer, and the bill should be defeated.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Chairman, although today the sun is shiny and bright outside, it is a rainy, dreary day for American workers. We have left workers out to dry while the umbrellas of safety and seller-manufacturer responsibility have been folded. American workers, whose productivity make for the great part of our economic growth, deserve better.

Mr. Chairman, I am opposed to H.R. 2005 for many reasons. First, it does not adequately protect injured workers. Second, it provides more protection for machines than people. Third, this bill hurts small businesses, as well as employees.

Mr. Chairman, the heart of this debate is not about frivolous lawsuits. We all stand opposed to frivolous lawsuits. I personally stood opposed to frivolous lawsuits as an attorney, judge, and county prosecutor. Really, as I stand here on the floor in Congress. I want to stand up on behalf of trial lawyers, because trial lawyers are the people who work on behalf of the injured and the sick and the lame. We all recognize and realize that frivolous lawsuits are extremely costly and burdens our legal and judicial system. H.R. 2005 is not about frivolous lawsuits; it is about responsibility.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 2005 is misguided and misplaced. We have State laws that work. Sellers and manufacturers have a duty to ensure equipment or defective products under their care are safe. This duty is not an extreme one. It is the part of the trade-off between workers and producers.

Mr. Chairman, I submit that H.R. 2005 is truly about manufacturers and sellers not taking responsibility. Basically, manufacturers and sellers are abdicating their responsibility for their equipment under this rule.

Mr. Chairman, is it not ironic that in these same hallowed chambers we often speak of civic responsibility, family responsibility, and financial responsibility; but yet today we stand muted to the basic responsibility owed to the workers of America.

This bill will allow some manufacturers to escape responsibility for allowing dangerously defective products in the workplace. We cannot stand idly by and allow injured workers and their families to suffer this fate.

Workers' rights are cut off if they are injured by a defective product that is more than 18 years old, regardless of how long the product was built to last, its useful life. Working people are singled out. They stand to lose rights while their employers gain rights dealing with the same defective product.

H.R. 2005 is also devastating to small business. As a member of the Committee on Small Business, we must realize that this bill eliminates the rights of business owners. This legislation extinguishes a business owner's right to hold the manufacturer of a defective workplace product responsible for the property losses the products caused or the business's Worker's Compensation deductible.

Damage to property arising out of the accident is cut off. Who then will pay to renovate or refurbish property?

In closing, Mr. Chairman, just imagine the countless factory workers and American citizens who use industrial machinery and construction tools injured at work or at home from defective products which may be 18 years old or older. I represent the 11th Congressional District of Ohio, a district filled with both manufacturers and workers. We cannot turn a deaf ear on workers who keep this Nation strong.

I want it said that I am not antimanufacturer; but I also believe, as my parents often told me, it is better to be safe than sorry. Let us be safe for American workers.

In closing, our society, traditionally the number 18 symbolized a greater degree of freedom. At 18, many young people receive their driver's license; at 18, young people register to vote; at 18, young persons receive a greater degree of freedom in and around their homes.

However, H.R. 2005 takes the number 18 and snatches freedom, limits rights of injured workers and does not even allow employers to recover for property damage by older equipment.

Mr. Chairman, I remember 18, and it was a time of bad decision making and risk taking. H.R. 2005, with this statute of repose of 18 years, is a bad decision. It is bad for workers, it is bad for America. I wholeheartedly oppose H.R.

1115

Mr. CHABOT, Mr. Chairman, I vield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS).

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) for yielding the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the proposition that we ought to be defining a statute of repose and ought to bring about an enactment of an end to litigation wherever we can, always keeping in mind the rights of the pursuant of rights, the litigants, the plaintiffs, et cetera.

The statute of limitations and the statute of repose have come down to us here in our time from well-developed and historic beginnings both in England and later in American law. It says in pure language there comes a time when no longer is it feasible, nor does it do a societal good, to allow litigation to occur.

The statute of limitations is one where we know that after 2 years or 4 years or 6 years, whatever the particular issue might require, there comes an end to the litigation. Yet we still hear people saying, well, why can we not open it to somebody who was injured after 2 years or had a contract dispute after 6 years? Why can we not open it?

The courts have time and time again said, the end of litigation is just as important to our society as is the beginning of legislation and litigation. So just as it is a right for everyone to sue and to gain benefits, there is a concomitant right in people to resist that right when it becomes too ancient in time, too removed from the evidence that prompted the suit, to allow a societal good to emerge.

So that is why the statute of limitations and the statute of repose are a part of the body of law. There has to come a time for the good of the entire civilized world of law for an end to litigation in a particular field.

For that reason, I support the effort of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) to bring about this sensible legislation.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2005, the Workplace Goods, Jobs Growth, and Competitiveness Act. This legislation would create a national statute of repose for 18 years, providing American manufacturers with much needed protection.

This legislation is simple, and I commend my colleague from Ohio for his common-sense approach to this problem.

Although older machines may appear old, obsolete and inefficient when compared to modern manufacturing processes, they often represented state-of-the-art technology at the time they were sold. For example, I ask my colleagues, particularly those who question the wisdom of this legislation, to take a walk through the Smithsonian's Museum of American History, and look at the older manufacturing machines. Although many of the machines in the exhibit look like they belong in a museum, rather than still in use, they may have been considered modern miracles when compared to the technology of the time-and those are, in many cases, precisely the machines that we are talking about in this legislation. We are not talking about state-of-the-art, modern miracles of science and technology, but machines that may have been developed and manufactured in the 1940's, 50's and 60's, or even prior to that. These machines have operated for years without any problems, and vet opponents of this legislation would propose that they be held to today's manufacturing standards. This is unrealistic and expensive and blatantly unfair.

This legislation would give the manufacturers of those older machines protection from product liability suits based on the theory that there was a defect in the machine. If a machine has worked flawlessly for over 18 years, it should be presumed that the machine is safe and free of defects, and therefore the manufacturer should be shielded from product liability claims.

I would also like to take a moment to speak in opposition to an amendment that may be offered later today by my colleague from Nebraska, Mr. TERRY.

Mr. TERRY's amendment unfortunately would substantially weaken the underlying legislation. What this legislation seeks to accomplish—i.e., protect manufacturers from suits over older machines, would be stripped by this amendment. If enacted, this amendment would require defendants to litigate not only what the definition of "state of the art" for any particular product is, but would result in extensive discovery over what was and is the state of the art, increasing legal fees, costs, and time wasted in defending this type of suit. Thus, rather than protecting small businesses from frivolous suits, this amendment would expand the number of these types of suits.

I hope that my colleagues will join me in supporting this fair, common-sense reform to help ensure America's competitiveness, here and abroad

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Mr. Chairman, I have been very touched by the notion of my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GEKAS), that we need the time to cut off litigation is very important. But should we cut off the litigation of an injured employee who is the victim of a defective product that was supposed to last far longer than 18 years, because today we have a bill on the floor that says 18 years will be the limit and after that one is on their own?

I say no. I say that we do not cut off the right of a person to sue under those circumstances. In many other cases, I would be inclined to agree with my colleague from the Committee on the Judiciary about the time that we need to cut off and limit litigation, but not here.

Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Oregon (Ms. HOOLEY).

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition of H.R. 2005. Regardless of what we are being told today, this legislation will not help people back in Oregon or anywhere else in the United States find safer or better paying jobs. We have worker safety laws to ensure that people are not exposed to dangerous machinery at their place of employment; and, frankly, whether this equipment was bought last week or during World War II it should be up to our State government, not Congress, to decide what is best for their citizens and to regulate the statute of limitations as they pertain to industrial machinery.

Mr. Chairman, in Oregon we already have workplace product liability laws and statutes of repose for durable goods in the workplace and they have done a terrific job in protecting the millions of people in my State that work with their hands for a living.

So with that in mind, I will oppose this legislation and urge my colleagues to join me in saying that it is okay for our State governments to run their own affairs, not Congress telling them what to do.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROGAN).

Mr. ROGAN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) not just for yielding to me but for his leadership on this important legislation.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 2005 is designed to free manufacturers from unnecessary legal costs and litigation costs and to enhance America's manufacturing competitiveness around the world. This bill will accomplish these goals by limiting product liability suits against durable good manufacturers after 18 years.

Faced with the threat of potential lawsuits, many innocent manufacturers settle these suits rather than face the expense and uncertainty associated with protracted litigation that could be decades old. The cost to our society in the forms of higher prices on products, the flight of American manufacturers abroad and higher insurance rates, are already too high to American workers. No longer should lawyers and their clients be able to make a quick buck on the back of hard working peonle.

This bill also will help promote competitiveness in the American manufacturing market, creating more jobs for skilled American workers. Currently, American durable good manufacturers are liable indefinitely for products they sell to the public. Japanese and European durable good manufacturers operate under a 10-year statute of repose in their home markets. This shorter period of exposure to litigation decreases their operating costs.

Finally, this bill will protect the Finally, this bill will protect the safety of American workers, and the public, should injuries occur as a result of defective products. This bill only will apply if a claimant receives worker's compensation. If a claimant is not covered by worker's compensation, he can sue the manufacturer of a durable good under existing law. This bill ensures that claimants will absolutely be able to recover for their lost income and medical costs.

This is a good bill for American workers. It is a good bill for our economy. It is a good bill for our national competitiveness, and I want to thank my colleague again for his leadership on this measure.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas

(Mr. Doggett).

Mr. DOGGÉTT. Mr. Chairman, what better way to begin this Congress in the new millennium, when we have a leadership here in the House that is engaged in a perpetual debate, should the Congress do nothing or should the Congress do just a little?

With plans for doing so little, perhaps absolutely nothing for the typical American working family, it should come as no surprise that one of the first pieces of legislation, indeed the first piece of major legislation, that this House would take up in the new millennium is one that says the House is not going to do anything for working people; and we want to be sure that another branch of government cannot do anything for working people either.

We want to say to the judge and jury across America that has the audacity to suggest that just because a product is old a manufacturer ought to be responsible for the harm done by a defect in that product, no, let us throw that out and let us substitute the views of a do-nothing House to totally insulate from any accountability, any sense of personal responsibility, that manufacturer for the damage that is done.

They say that 18 years is the cutoff. I do not know why it should be 18 years and why they do not lower it to 6. We have had Republicans in charge of this House for 6 years. That seems interminable to some of us, and though it is soon going to come to an end they have pulled 18 out of the air.

Currently, a judge and a jury can consider as a part of determining whether a product is defective how old the product is. They apply the standard of knowledge that was available when the product was manufactured.

Who are some of the people that are going to be impacted by the decision today? They are going to be the delivery person who just happens to be walking through the manufacturing setting at the time the product blows up, no right of recovery under this bill. They are going to be the repair person who happens to be there repairing another piece of equipment and when a fire begins as a result of a defective product, no right of recovery.

It is wrong and this legislation should be rejected.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR).

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) for his leadership on this very important, commonsense issue that is currently before the House today.

Despite the immediate preceding remarks by the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), in an effort to throw out all of the little partisan slogans that their polsters and focus groups tell them to use, this is not a partisan issue. It is not even a political issue in any sense of the word. It is a commonsense issue that simply brings some rationality and uniformity to a problem that is facing our courts all across this land and facing manufacturers and workers all across this land.

It is a very limited, very focused, very directed piece of legislation that has been very carefully crafted and very thoroughly thought out by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) and others on the Committee on the Judiciary in particular who have looked at it.

Let us first start, Mr. Chairman, with what this legislation does not do. It does not take rights away from anybody. It does not apply to all goods. It does not void express warranties. It does not take the ability of a worker who is truly injured without recourse away. It is not inconsistent with existing policies in some States. It simply, though, brings uniformity within the realm of Federal jurisdiction to all the States.

Nobody is pulling anything out of thin air, as the former speaker, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), indicated. The years that are contained in this piece of legislation, 18 years, is well established. It has precedent, and it actually extends further than the years that are provided for in some nearly 20 States, I believe, Mr. Chairman, who already have statutes of repose similar to this.

So in many respects, it is providing additional relief, a longer period, within which an action can be brought than is established under the laws of all of the different States that have addressed this

The fact of the matter is, Mr. Chairman, this is a national problem. This is a problem that currently gives rise to very lengthy, very costly, very unfair litigation, without anything approaching uniformity across the land for products such as these that move in interstate commerce, for example.

In our district, in Georgia, Mr. Chairman, as probably in almost every district across the country, we have manufacturing plants; and I, as I am sure most if not all Members have done. have toured those manufacturing plants to shake hands with the workers, to meet with management, to simply tour the physical plant and get a better feel for the products produced and the men and women who are producing those products in their home districts.

Much of the equipment in some of those plants that I have visited is very old. One can tell. These are magnificent pieces of machinery, but in many instances they are very old pieces of machinery. In many instances, one can tell, even through the untrained eye, that these pieces of manufacturing equipment, these durable goods, have been modified extensively over the years. They have to be. In the course of normal business, when a machine breaks down, one fixes it, one modifies

To say that a piece of equipment that might have been in this particular plant or any number of plants but has simply fortuitously wound up in one particular plant that might have been manufactured a hundred years ago or 75 or 80 years ago, and has been modified many, many times since then, clearly and obviously unbeknownst to the manufacturer of that product, to now say that in all instances the manufacturer of that product is liable for all subsequent injuries, without any limitation whatsoever. notwithstanding the fact that they may have no control and almost always have no control over modifications to the machinery, is absolutely unfair.

1130

This legislation says nothing to limit the liability of any person or company that may modify that piece of equipment, and through that modification or through that misuse of the equipment, cause injury and be liable for it.

So I think the starting point, Mr. Chairman, for the debate and my urging our colleagues to vote for this piece of legislation is to recognize, as I have said and as the proponent has said, what it does not do, and to focus, instead, on the fundamental fairness, not only to American workers and American businesses of this piece of legislation, but also the rationality that it brings to our court system, and that it is not at all inconsistent with existing laws and existing procedures and public policy.

So I commend the gentleman from Ohio for thinking through this legislation, for working on it so diligently, and for those Members who have spoken out for it here today and in com-

I urge our colleagues to pass this very, very limited, targeted, commonsense, fair piece of legislation. Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA), a former member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Čhairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, it is somewhat eerie that just two days after the Alaska Airlines disaster, where an MD-80 jetliner crashed and killed some 88 passengers, we are now talking about absolving companies that manufacture defective products of their liability for those products.

California, January, 1995, Reginald Gonzalez, 47 years of age, was operating a printing press designed and manufactured in 1973, 22 years earlier, by Heidelberg, Incorporated, when his hand became caught in the rollers, resulting in the traumatic amputation of his arm at the shoulder.

Testimony during the trial revealed that the company that manufactured the product had added safeguards to the printing press model in 1974 after it had been manufactured initially, and again in 1980, yet never took steps to notify the prior owners of the machine's dangerous defect.

It was also learned in 1995 that at least eight other pressmen had their arms amputated or crushed while operating those pre-1974 presses. A jury found in favor of Mr. Gonzalez in the amount of $4 million for the loss of his ability to work.

North Dakota, 1983, Todd Hefta was crushed to death while working for the city of Williston. Hefta was standing behind a 12-ton earth packer machine when another worker started the packer in gear. The packer, which was manufactured in 1963, 20 years earlier, by Ingraham Company, suddenly lunged backward at a rapid rate of speed, crushing Mr. Hefta.

In both of those cases, if this bill were law, none of those individuals would get any compensation whatsoever. They would be having to rely, if they happened to have survived, on workers compensation. In the case of Mr. Hefta, who passed away, he is out of luck.

If we pass this legislation today and if it were signed by the President today, any product manufactured prior to February 2, 1982, would now be absolved of any type of liability. That means any earth-moving machine, any assembly line machine that happens to cause damage to the workplace and certainly injury or death to the worker would be allowed to go forward without any type of liability. We cannot do that. Let us not pass this legislation. Vote against H.R. 2005.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from California referred to the Gonzalez case. That particular case is an example of why H.R. 2005 should be enacted.

The Gonzalez case involved a manufacturer that designed, built, and marketed the printing press in question in 1973 to the prevailing standards of the time. The next year it retrofit subsequent printing presses with a guard over the area that Mr. Gonzalez was injured by, to comply with revisions in German safety standards that required all running nib points to be guarded.

Contrary to assertions that were made, there had been no reported injuries on the pre-1974 model when the new barrier guard was added, and several years later injuries were reported on these models, and Heidelberg began sending out a series of retrofit notices, 13 in total, between 1986 and 1993.

The printing press in question had been resold five separate times, and it was only by chance that the current owner, which was a leasing company, received the notice because they had purchased a similar press from the manufacturer in the 1970s.

The leasing company failed to initiate the repairs and did not forward the warnings to its lessee, Mr. Gonzalez's employer. Next, Mr. Gonzalez's employer deliberately altered the press and removed or bypassed other factory-installed guards. Mr. Gonzalez, the injured claimant in that particular case who had worked as a pressman operator for 26 years, informed his employer before the accident that the press guards were missing from the machine. The company never bothered to order or replace the missing equipment.

Finally, Mr. Gonzalez, contrary to his extensive experience in manufacture, warnings, and job training, deliberately reached into the running printing press that was rotating at speeds between 8,000 and 10,000 times per hour to remove a spot of debris.

After the accident, OSHA issued numerous citations and fines against Mr. Gonzalez's employer, including failure to have an injury prevention program in place. Heidelberg, after having no control over the printing press for over 20 years, after having sent out 13 retrofit notices, and because a negligent employer was protected from liability by the workers compensation system, ended up paying out $2.5 million to an injured worker who engaged in risky and unsafe work practices.

This is precisely why a statute is needed.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHABOŤ. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

 $\mbox{Mr.}$ DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me

Do I understand, without getting into all the factual context of that particular case, that if you have a situation where the manufacturer knows without a doubt that there is a defect, a hidden danger in their product, and they have an inexpensive way to fix and prevent that defect, and they receive reports that dozens of other workers have been maimed or killed as a result of that defect, and the manufacturer simply sits on their hands and does absolutely nothing, that as long as the product is 18 years old, under those conditions it will totally absolve the manufacturer from its responsibility?

Mr. CHABOT. Reclaiming my time, that is not the point of the bill at all. Mr. DOGGETT. That is the effect, is it not?

Mr. CHABOT. Under workers compensation, that is the only time under which this particular bill would have any effect at all. The employee is covered under workers compensation. That is the only time a statute of repose would have any effect at all.

Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY).

Mr. OXLEY. I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, Mr. Chairman.

Let me first say to my good friend, the gentleman from Hamilton County, how proud I am of the work he has done in leading this effort from the Committee on the Judiciary.

As one who has been a member of the Committee on Commerce for a number of years, and have had many issues with the Committee on the Judiciary, I want to congratulate him on this effort.

I think it is important to point out that this is a very limited effort that the gentleman from Ohio is putting forth. It is limited to capital goods in the workplace. It does not really affect planes and automobiles for hire that would not be covered by the act.

No injured party will go uncompensated, because if he is not covered by some form of workers compensation in that particular State, then the action will be exempted from coverage by the statute.

This is also important from the standpoint of the commerce clause. As I stand here as a member of the Committee on Commerce, it is important to point out that clearly Congress does have the authority to step in and legislate in this area because of the need to do this. The need arises from forum shopping, in which very clever lawyers file suits in States where they can get the best deal. This would certainly eliminate that possibility.

A national statute of repose will also help improve our competitiveness here in the United States. While a typical U.S. company in many cases has liability exposure for machines, machine tools up to 100 years, our foreign competitors in many cases have only that exposure for 20 years, and the competitors in many cases in Europe and in Asia have a 10-year statute of repose in their home markets.

I also want to point out that not only is this a competitiveness issue for American manufacturers, but it is indeed a commerce issue, as well. This American manufacturing machinery industry, which has had a huge presence in our home State of Ohio, is the very foundation of our industrial economy. They make the tools that make the tools. That is why it is so important to our economy.

Lastly, Mr. Chairman, this legislation is similar to the General Aviation Revitalization Act, which passed this Congress and was signed by the President. As a result of that kind of reasonable legislation, over 25,000 new jobs have been created in the general aviation industry, so we have an indication of how successful that legislation can

Once again, the gentleman from Ohio has done the American economy a service by sponsoring this legislation. I would ask all of my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER).

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, this malicious bill threatens workers' safety and strips injured workers of their rights.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) did not want to answer the question, but if a manufacturer under this bill knew his product was unsafe, knew it was killing workers, knew it was injuring workers, and sat on his hands and did not fix it, did not do anything, he cannot be sued by the workers as long as the piece was over 18 years old.

If in fact a durable good malfunctions and workers were injured, they would not have the right to sue the manufacturer for their injury, no matter how negligent it was, but the business owner would still have his full rights to recover for business interruptions due to the defective machinery. So the business owner gets to recover damages and the workers do not. This bill is effectively saying that profits are more important than physical injuries.

Why the inconsistency? Either the manufacturer should be held responsible for his product or he should not. If the manufacturer cannot be held responsible for workers' injuries after 18 years, why should he still be responsible for the business owner's economic loss after 18 years? And conversely, if he is still responsible for the business owner's economic losses, why not for the injuries to the worker?

This bill, Mr. Chairman, simply shows contempt for the workers of the country. It is an outrage. It should be defeated. I challenge the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) or anybody else on the other side to answer the question, not to say it is not the point of the bill, but is it not the effect of the bill that even if the manufacturer, after 18 years, knows his product is killing people or injuring people, knows how to fix it. knows he should warn people, and does not, he cannot be sued for physical injury; he can be sued for business damages, but he cannot be sued for physical injury?

Why should he not be subject to suit for physical injury in that case? Why is the business owner's economic damages more important than the worker's physical injuries, more important than loss of a limb or loss of fertility or life or permanent disfigurement? In what contempt do we hold the workers of the country? How contemptuous of the workers' safety is this bill?

I challenge the gentleman from Ohio to answer these questions.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, despite some of the inflammatory language that we have heard this morning, I would argue that this is a very commonsense, a very modest approach to tort reform. There are absolutely no workers who will not be covered under this particular piece of legislation. It is a fairly narrow bill. It does not affect all products. We are essentially talking about durable goods, capital goods. These are ma-chines that are found in machine shops in factories all over this country.

A very good example of how a bill similar to this worked extremely well in this country is the General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994. We had an industry, the small aircraft industry in this country, that was going down the tubes. After this legislation was passed, we have seen it increase substantially. We have seen this industry substantially increase in how it has worked in this country. We have seen twice the number of workers. Now we have 25,000 additional workers in that field. The industry, as the gentleman who spoke earlier today has said, has been revitalized in a number of areas around the country.

The United States also is at a competitive disadvantage to many of our other trading partners. For example, the Europeans and the Japanese do not have an 18-year statute of repose, they have a 10-year statute of repose.

1145

A number of States have looked at this, and they have even shorter periods of statute of repose from 6 to 15 years. I think we have been very generous in making it an 18-year statute of repose. I think that is very reasonable. Under the circumstances, it avoids forum shopping. It avoids very high costs of litigation.

The bottom line is, in these types of cases a very significant amount of the money that is won or settled, because most of these cases end up getting settled and not actually going to contract it, ends up in the lawyers' pockets. It does not go to the plaintiffs. It does not go to the claimants. It goes to the lawyers. And that is why they have been particularly vociferous.

But that is one of the reasons we are seeing such a spirited debate from some folks on the other side of the aisle. But the bottom line is, this is good legislation for this country.

I would urge its passage. I would yield to either one of the gentlemen. Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CHABOT. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, there are two questions, sir: One, the question of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT), is it not true that the effect. if not the intent, and the point of the bill that even if a company, manufacturer, knows its goods are injuring or killing people and it sits on that knowledge, does not tell anybody, does not fix it, it would under this bill not be liable for anything?

Mr. CHABOT. On that point, reclaiming my time, the gentleman must have a very low evaluation of what most of the business owners and people in this country have in this country.

Mr. NADLER. Yes or no? Mr. CHABOT. I think it is fairly ludicrous that people would sit on that type of thing. I do not acknowledge that is what the effect of this would be. And the bottom line is, all workers are going to be covered under Worker's Compensation or this law has no effect at all

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. QUINN). The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) has 41/2 minutes remaining and may yield time now.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. STUPAK).

Mr. STUPAK. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, this bill bars workers who are eligible for Worker's Compensation from suing a manufacturer or seller of equipment, such as printing presses and machine tools, if more than 18 years has elapsed since the product was manufactured.

The Republican leadership is bringing forth this bill to the floor under the guise of reasonably limiting litigation and helping manufacturers. Sure, it protects manufacturers. It protects negligent manufacturers. It protects reckless manufacturers. It protects these negligent and reckless manufacturers at the expense of our Nation's workers and employers.

This bill will limit the employees to Worker's Compensation. That is twothirds of their pay at best, no matter how severe the injuries are. Worker's Compensation does not make a person whole. It provides medical costs and very limited disability payments to cover some period, not their whole life, just some period of lost wages, no matter how severe the injury; no matter if someone loses a limb or the ability to work again.

H.R. 2005 promotes inequality and injustice to one of our country's most important groups, the workers who toil in the manufacturing places of our factories every day, who frequently work with dangerous machinery.

Owners of businesses and owners of management are generally excluded from Worker's Compensation plans. They still will be able to sue and recover for all their losses. But the workers, the very people who are the most at risk, will be limited to the few remedies offered by Worker's Compensation. I cannot support this biased proposal against America's workers.

Why do my Republican colleagues think that the manufacturers need this protection? The Bureau of Labor Statistics has reported that injuries for the year 1998 dropped to their lowest level since the 1970's. There is no flood of injuries or litigation requiring reform. The judicial process works. Frivolous claims get weeded out, and meritorious claims go forward. That is how our legal system works.

I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on this legislation.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Čhairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT) is recognized for 21/2 minutes.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, sometimes we get lost in the technicalities of these legal bills. But we should start with the proposition that our liability laws in this country actually reflect the values of our country that personal responsibility and corporate responsibility are at the top of what we value in this country.

So a question of who has responsibility for paying for a person's injuries boils down to a question of who has responsibility for causing those injuries. That is the whole basis of our liability law in this country.

In this case, what this bill does is it says that, even if a manufacturer is responsible for the injury of a worker and the worker has absolutely no responsibility after 18 years, that worker is just dead out of luck.

That is what this bill says. Regardless of how egregious the conduct in designing the equipment is of the manufacturer, how reckless they are, we are going to shift the responsibility for paying for the injury to an innocent party. That is completely contrary to our whole concept in this country of personal and corporate responsibility.

That is the first objection I have to this bill. The second objection is that, in addition to undercutting the rights of employees and consumers in that substantial way inconsistent with public policy, we are saying to employers and to insurance carriers that even if they pay for that cost, they cannot even go back and make a claim against the negligent or reckless manufacturer who did nothing to take this equipment out of the stream of commerce.

So whether my colleagues support the consumer, whether they support the employee, whether they support the insurance carrier, whether they support the employer, what they have done is shifted the cost to them, even though they had nothing to do with causing the injury. The cost has been taken away and the responsibility is taken away from the very corporate citizen and individuals on which the responsibility should be imposed, based on our public policy rationales.

Ms. PELOSI. I rise to strongly oppose this anti-labor legislation that undermines the rights of hard working Americans. The "Workplace Goods Job Growth Competitiveness Act", H.R. 2005, sets an arbitrary cutoff date limiting injured workers from holding manufacturers accountable for defective products that harm workers. This bill discriminates against workers injured and killed on the job by preventing them and their survivors from recovering damages from a manufacturer or seller of durable goods more than 18 years after the durable good was first purchased or leased.

Workers should not be limited by this arbitrary 18 year cutoff on manufactured products when many of America's industrial plants, machinery, and regularly used products, like elevators, are far older than 18 years. Many manufactured goods are clearly produced to have longer life spans and many manufacturers distribute marketing materials publicizing this fact in their sales pitch.

This anti-labor bill would adversely affect injured workers who are covered by workers' compensation and drastically limits their potential recovery. Most state workers' compensation laws only compensate workers for medical costs and limited disability assistance and most do not compensate for non-financial damages, including loss of a limb; loss of fertility, permanent disfigurement; and related pain and suffering. When hard working Americans are injured by defective products, they deserve compensation for their injuries and suffering.

In addition, this bill takes away the business community's right for compensation from defective manufacturers for related property damage to the business' owned property. The bill denies also businesses recovery of their costs for workers compensation payments paid to injured workers. By limiting employee and employer rights to recover damages, this bill increases costs and unfairly subsidizes the manufacturers of defective products at the expense of employers and the workers' compensation system.

H.R. 2005 unfairly targets workers and treats them differently from other Americans. Suppose a 25 year old elevator were to malfunction and crash, severely injuring an elevator operator and a tourist. This bill would allow the tourist to sue for compensation and deny the elevator operator this same right. This provision is inequitable, unjust, and must be opposed.

In addition to difficulties this bill inflicts on America's workforce and businesses, the bill also triggers Constitutional concerns. The Justice Department is concerned that this legislation violates the Commerce Clause which limits congressional authority to regulate interstate commerce and violates the Tenth Amendment, which reserves all unenumerated powers to the states. For all these reasons, the President is expected to veto this bill.

I urge my colleagues to join with the AFL–CIO; the Machinists; the Teamsters; Communications Workers of America; and Public Citizen in opposing H.R. 2005. Vote "no" on H.R. 2005.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of H.R. 2005, the Work-place Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness

Act of 1999. H.R. 2005 is premised on the notion that a product which is used safely for a substantial period of time is not likely to have been defective at the time of manufactures, sale, or delivery. Any injury incurred after a reasonably long period of time is likely to have been due to either misuse or improper maintenance by someone other than the manufacturer. The longer the product is in use, the more difficult it is for the manufacturer to prove its product was not defective at the time it was manufactured. H.R. 2005 creates a uniform federal statute of repose for cases involving injury caused by durable goods. Currently, nineteen states have statutes of repose.

I have long recognized the need for a national statute of repose for products, including workplace durable goods. In fact, my first year as a Member of this body, I introduced one of the first federal statute of repose bills.

In sum, H.R. 2005 provides a balanced solution to the problem of endless liability, while protecting a claimant's right to bring suit for injuries incurred during the repose period. It places a reasonable outer time limit on litigation involving older products in the workplace, where injured claimants will have recourse to benefit from the worker compensation system. I commend my colleague, Mr. CHABOT, for all his hard work on this long overdue, much needed legislation. I urge the passage of this legislation.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.R. 2005, The Work-place Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act of 1999.

I understand the sentiment of the proponents of this measure. Certainly, after a reasonably long period of time, manufacturers should no longer have to defend lawsuits based on products that have long since left their control and may have been subject to misuse or improper maintenance by others.

With that said, H.R. 2005 is an improper remedy. This proposed national statute of repose would extinguish valid lawsuits that would otherwise be permitted to proceed under state law. This is clearly an intrusion into the availability of state tort remedies, and there is compelling and well-documented evidence that the defendants' need for civil immunity outweighs the strong policy that individuals and businesses be able to seek relief for their injuries.

I share the Department of Justice's prescient view that H.R. 2005 is flawed in myriad ways. The bill in its present form creates an absolute bar on recovery for property damage involving a durable good if the action is filed more than 18 years after the first purchase or lease of the good. H.R. 2005 would also bar civil actions for death or personal injury involving a durable good against a manufacturer or seller of a durable good filed more than 18 years after the durable good was first bought or leased, if the claimant is eligible for workers compensation and the injury does not involve "toxic harm." H.R. 2005 provides exceptions to the 18-year bar for products used primarily to transport passengers for hire, products for longer than 18 years, and products already covered by the statute of repose in the General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994.

Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to H.R. 2005 for other reasons. The bill, in its present form, would bar certain property damage claims and, unlike personal injury in the workplace, there is no alternative administrative relief for such claims by individuals or businesses. This irrationally bars some state lawsuits. Additionally, the bill would bar some State law claims in which an individual or company has been seriously damaged by a product—and even before some victims will be injured by the defective good—although the manufacturer was negligent or knew the product was dangerous or defective. Finally, I am opposed to H.R. 2005 because it usurps State policies on providing an avenue for redress for personal or property damages to individuals or small businesses caused by durable goods.

Mr. Speaker, we need to get on with the business of tending to real issues confronting the American people: education, healthcare, social security and many other issues that are urgent. There is no hue and cry from the American people to establish a national statute of repose. I strongly urge my colleagues to oppose this bill. H.R. 2005 is a bad bill.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in general support of this bill, H.R. 2005, because I represent a congressional district that as many durable good manufacturers. There is an issue of state preemption, and to that issue, I have been given assurance of leadership that if a conference committee is established that this issue will be discussed.

Mr. Chairman, make no mistake about it. This is a vote about keeping basic manufacturing in the United States.

With all the wonderful economic statistics, few people know that there is a crisis in durable goods manufacturing. I represent Rockford, Illinois, a center of machine tool manufacturing. For the past 18 months, I have heard from business leaders and workers back home that they have never had it this bad. The situation facing machine tool manufacturers is even worse than the recessions of the early 1980's and 1990's. Some old timers even believe that business prospects are even worse than the Great Depression of the 1930's.

Monthly U.S. machine tool consumption once again declined 18 percent in November. Exports of U.S. machine tools also dropped 65 percent in November. Compounding this decrease is that fact that machine tool imports are taking a greater share of the declining U.S. market—rising from 50 percent in 1995 to an estimated 60 percent in 1999.

Why is this happening? One reason is that foreign machine tool competitors are able to price their product more competitively because their liability exposure is relatively small. Both Europe and Japan have a 10 year statute of repose. They are seizing market share from American machine tool workers right here in the United States! H.R. 2005 would begin to level the playing field for U.S. workers making machine tools.

Let me give you one concrete example. Rockford used to have Mattison Technologies, a manufacturer of large grinder machines. This small business used to employ 150 workers. Shortly after celebrating its 100th birthday, Mattison went bankrupt because it could not pay a $7.5 million product liability verdict on a machine built over 50 years ago. In fact, at the time the company closed, Mattison Technologies had received a summons suing them for a machine built in 1917—when the Czar still ruled Russia! Passing an 18 year statute of repose would go a long way towards helping the 60,000 American workers still employed in the U.S. machine tool industry.

It's too late for the 150 workers at Mattison. Let's not repeat this mistake. Vote for H.R. 2005.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in strong objection to H.R. 2005, the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act of 1999.

The title of this bill gives the erroneous impression that it will encourage "job growth and competitiveness." Instead, it will only serve to harm workers and employers. The so-called Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act would terminate any rights of workers to hold wrongdoers accountable for a defective product over 18-years-old, even if the product was designed to be used for many more years.

Some workers would be able to collect workers' compensation. However, that does not provide for noneconomic damages such as physical disfigurement, loss of limbs, blindness, infertility or pain and suffering. We cannot allow these workers to be sacrificed for the profit of manufacturers.

This bill would also discourage manufacturers from notifying consumers of possible defects. H.R. 2005 makes it more cost effective to ignore a malfunction when they are discovered near the end of the 18-year period than to publicize the defect or correct it.

By adopting this 18-year statute of repose, Congress would send the message to America's working families that their injuries and costs are of less importance than any other victim of product malfunction. For example, if a worker and a visitor to the worksite are both injured in the same event, only the visitor would be able to seek damages.

I urge my colleagues to see this bill for what it really is: an attack on the workers of America. If you really want to fight for American families, vote "no" on H.R. 2005.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute printed in the bill is considered as an original bill for the purpose of amendment and is considered read.

The text of the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is as follows:

H.R. 2005

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act of 1999''

SEC. 2. STATUTE OF REPOSE FOR DURABLE GOODS USED IN A TRADE OR BUSI-NESS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this Act-

(1) no civil action for damage to property arising out of an accident involving a durable good may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of the durable good more than 18 years after the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee: and

(2) no civil action for damages for death or personal injury arising out of an accident involving a durable good may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of the durable good more than 18 years after the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee if-

(A) the claimant has received or is eligible to receive worker compensation; and

- (B) the injury does not involve a toxic harm (including, but not limited to, all asbestos-related harm).
- (b) EXCEPTIONS -
- (1) IN GENERAL.—A motor vehicle, vessel, aircraft, or train, that is used primarily to trans-port passengers for hire shall not be subject to this Act.
- (2) CERTAIN EXPRESS WARRANTIES.—This Act does not bar a civil action against a defendant who made an express warranty in writing as to the safety or life expectancy of a specific product which was longer than 18 years, except that this Act shall apply at the expiration of that warrantv.

(3) AVIATION LIMITATIONS PERIOD.—This Act does not affect the limitations period established by the General Aviation Revitalization Act of 1994 (49 U.S.C. 40101 note).

(c) EFFECT ON STATE LAW; PREEMPTION.—This Act preempts and supersedes any State law that establishes a statute of repose to the extent such law applies to actions covered by this Act. Any action not specifically covered by this Act shall be governed by applicable State law.

(d) TRANSITIONAL PROVISION RELATING TO EX-TENSION OF REPOSE PERIOD.—To the extent that this Act shortens the period during which a civil action could be otherwise brought pursuant to another provision of law, the claimant may, notwithstanding this Act, bring the action not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 3. DEFINITIONS. In this Act:

(1) CLAIMANT.—The term "claimant" means any person who brings an action covered by this Act and any person on whose behalf such an action is brought. If such an action is brought through or on behalf of an estate, the term includes the claimant's decedent. If such an action is brought through or on behalf of a minor or incompetent, the term includes the claimant's legal guardian.
(2) DURABLE GOOD.—The term "durable good" means any product, or any component of any such product, which-

(A)(i) has a normal life expectancy of 3 or more years; or

(ii) is of a character subject to allowance for depreciation under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986; and

(B) is-

(i) used in a trade or business;

(ii) held for the production of income; or

(iii) sold or donated to a governmental or private entity for the production of goods, training, demonstration, or any other similar pur-

(3) STATE.—The term "State" means any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Northern Mariana Islands, the Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and any other territory or possession of the United States or any political subdivision of any of the foregoing. SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF ACT.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act without regard to whether the damage to property or death or personal injury at issue occurred before such date of enactment.

(b) APPLICATION OF ACT.—This Act shall not apply with respect to civil actions commenced before the date of the enactment of this Act.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. No amendment to that amendment shall be in order except those printed in the portion of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD designated for that purpose and pro forma amendments for the purpose of debate. Amendments printed in the RECORD may be offered only by the Member who caused it to be printed or his designee and shall be also considered read.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone a request for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time for voting on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote, provided that the time for voting on the first question shall be a minimum of 15 minutes.

Are there any amendments to the

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. CHABOT

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as fol-

Amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. CHABOT:

- 1. Page 2, strike lines 10 through 20 and insert the following:
- (1) no civil action may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of a durable good for damage to property arising out of an accident involving that durable good if the accident occurred more than 18 years after the date on which the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee;
- (2) no civil action may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of a durable good for damages for death or personal injury arising out of an accident involving that durable good if the accident occurred more than 18 years after the date on which the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee and if—
- 2. Page 2, line 14, delete the "." and insert ; and'
- 3. Page 2, insert after line 14 the following:
- (3) subparagraph (a)(1) of this section does not supersede or modify any statutory or common law that authorizes an action for civil damages, cost recovery or any other form of relief for remediation of the environment as defined in section 101(8) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 as amended (42 U.S.C. 9601(8)).

MODIFICATION TO AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. CHABOT

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that my amendment be modified in the form I have placed at the desk. I have given a copy to the minority.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will report the modification.

The Clerk read as follows:

Modification to amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. Chabot:

Page 2, strike lines 10 through 20 and insert the following:

(1) no civil action may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of a durable good for damage to property arising out of an accident involving that durable good if the accident occurred more than 18 years after the date on which the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee; and

(2) no civil action may be filed against the manufacturer or seller of a durable good for damages for death or personal injury arising out of an accident involving that durable good if the accident occurred more than 18 years after the date on which the durable good was delivered to its first purchaser or lessee and if-

Page 3, insert the following after line 14:

(4) ACTIONS INVOLVING THE ENVIRONMENT.— Subsection (a)(1) does not supersede or modify any statute or common law that authorizes an action for civil damages, cost recovery, or any other form of relief for remediation of the environment (as defined in section 101(8) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601(8)).

Page 3, line 15, strike "This" and insert

Page 3, line 15, strike "This" and insert "Subject to subsection (b), this".

Mr. CHABOT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the modification be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMÂN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, some of us do not have the modification. I am sure the committee has it, but I just came on the floor.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, we will provide that to the gentleman immediately.

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Chairman, I will not take the entire time. At this time I would like to introduce a perfecting amendment which was filed yesterday in accordance with the rule, and the amendment as modified also here today.

This amendment does two things. First, it clarifies that this bill would in no way interfere with existing State statutes of limitation. This amendment simply states that the 18-year period runs to the date of the accident or harm and not to the date of the filing of the claim. This further ensures that all claimants will have adequate time to prepare and file suit. This simply clarifies the original intent of the bill and guarantees that claimants will always have the full time period allowed by the applicable State statute of limitations.

Second, my amendment clarifies that this bill does not interfere in any way with the assertion of claims for remediation of environmental hazards, such as lead paint or asbestos, caused by a durable good that is more than 18 years old. Although we believe that this bill as currently drafted does not cover environmental remediation claims, we want to make that absolutely clear.

My amendment expressly states this bill does not supersede or modify any statutory or common law that authorizes an action for civil damage or other relief for remediation of the environment. Our bill, the Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act of 1999, is a straightforward, common sense product liability reform measure that limits frivolous lawsuits, while ensuring that no injured party ever goes uncompensated.

We have worked carefully with Members on both sides of the aisle to address legitimate concerns and craft a solid piece of legislation that benefits small businesses, employees, taxpayers, and consumers. I urge my colleagues to approve this amendment and support the passage of H.R. 2005.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to advise the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) that this amendment, as reported and modified, is one that I have no objection to. But I would like to point out to him that it does not in any way change the objection that American workers are relegated to a second-class legal status with rules that apply to no one else. That is not corrected by this perfecting amendment.

I would like to have him reflect on the fact that only American workers will be barred from recovery of many types of damages for death and disfigurement that occurs from injuries that involve older equipment. That has not changed by this amendment.

Neither does it change the fact that this bill, H.R. 2005, does not apply to the rest of the public who could be injured by older equipment. Nor does the perfecting amendment change the fact that Worker's Compensation laws do not cover noneconomic damages that would otherwise be available to workers for injuries that result in death and disfigurement.

1200

The perfecting amendment shifts the considerable cost to small business who will have to, as a result of this measure, pay higher premiums and who will be unable to recover for many property damages caused by defective machinery.

Finally, this amendment does not change the fact that the opposition by workers and unions and the administration and consumer groups remains, notwithstanding this amendment.

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Unfortunately, this bill is made only marginally better by the amendment that is offered. It is called a repose bill. but what we are doing in this debate on the amendment is the expose part. And if my colleagues will just listen to a little of this debate, what they will know that both sides agree on is that, by their silence, the proponents of this bill, if a manufacturer manufactures a dangerous product that can cause death or can cause serious injury, that manufacturer is totally absolved from any responsibility once that product reaches its 18th birthday. No more need it worry. Even though it knows how to correct the defect, even though it knows that dozens of people have been killed or maimed or burned alive as a result of the defect, the manufacturer need do absolutely nothing. And the only answer that the proponent, the author, of this amendment says is, well, we all seem to have kind of a bad attitude about the willingness of American manufacturers to correct the defects in their product.

What this bill does is to assure the lowest common denominator of the worst and most irresponsible manufacturer is now the law of the land. It says that those manufacturers, indeed even if they put a silver medallion on the side of the printing press and they say this printing press is good for 25 years, and they know it is defective, they know how to repair the defect and they know dozens of Americans are being hurt by that product, they do not have to do a single thing. Zip. Nada. Nothing. That is what this bill does. That is what this reasonable bill does.

Every Member that votes on this bill needs to know what they are voting to do, to totally absolve that manufacturer.

There is the second issue, and the chairman-to-be just made that point, and it is one that has not gotten the emphasis that it needs, and that is the very strong anti-business bias to this bill. What am I talking about when I say an anti-business bias? It is designed to protect and absolve the giant multinational equipment manufacturers. But who does it ask to foot the bill when the sponsor says, well, we will just let the workers' compensation. Do not worry about it, the worker is going to be compensated.

Those workers' compensation premiums are not free. Who does my colleague think pays those premiums? The thousands of small businesses around this country that are out there generating new jobs. Now they are going to have shifted to them the total responsibility for covering that same dangerous product that has the silver medallion that says it is good for 25 years and it causes harm. Now we are going to shift to the small businesses of America the responsibility of paying for damages that they did not cause. Some irresponsible manufacturer caused that damage.

I would say anyone that is concerned about the growth of small business ought to vote against this bill, because it is an anti-small business bill.

Third, what about the workers? It is so good to hear that they do not have anything to worry about; that they are going to be fully covered by workers' compensation. I have a feeling that the sponsors of this bill never had to try to live on workers' compensation in most of this country. That worker that lost his arm, that the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA) talked about out in California, would have to live on a subsistence level under workers' compensation, and usually it is for a fixed period of time. It does not offer lifetime benefits to someone who just merely lost the use of their arm at the most productive time of their life.

If a secretary was in that printing shop to pick up the stationery and she is burned and she is disfigured as a young woman, what will she get if this bill passes? Absolutely nothing from the manufacturer. If the Federal Express delivery person happens through there, what will they get if they are burned and have to go through the pain of a skin graft? Absolutely nothing under this bill.

If that worker who is going to be so generously compensated with subsistence workers' compensation has to go through, as happened to a man in Texas, skin grafts because a defective product causes him to be burned over 30 percent of his body by hot spewing oil from a defective valve that was 20 years old, if he has to go through one skin graft after another and suffers with pain in going through that, how much does he get out of workers' compensation for that? Absolutely nothing for the pain and suffering of going through that process.

The people who might be affected who are not workers are not fully compensated.

I heard the gentleman say in his opening remarks that what he wanted is uniformity. Well, he is not providing any uniformity so that the workers of this land who would suffer as a result of these defective and dangerous products so that they would get a uniform amount that they can live on and support their families on. Some States provide practically nothing with reference to workers' compensation.

This bill is wrong. Let us expose what repose is all about.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment, as modified, offered by the gentleman from Ohio.

The amendment, as modified, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 4 OFFERED BY MR. TERRY

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 4 offered by Mr. TERRY: Page 3, insert the following after line 14: (4) PRODUCTS NOT STATE-OF-THE-ART.—This Act shall not apply in the case of a durable good that, at the time it was produced, was not state-of-the-art.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, this amendment, I believe, is truly a compromise position, kind of splitting the difference between the two arguments that we have heard here today, albeit it may create as many questions as it resolves.

This amendment, I think, protects the manufacturers who sell good products at the time that it was made and sold but, because of advances in technology, may become different than a standard that we may apply today.

For example, a machine is produced, made, manufactured in 1975, and this is the issue that my friend from Ohio is trying to resolve. When it was manufactured in 1970 or 1975 or 1980, it was made to the state-of-the-art. It was a good product. It was not defective. But perhaps on a year 2000 scale, it is now defective, based on our technology of today. It is somewhat unfair to hold those manufacturers to that standard.

So that is what my amendment addresses, but yet says if the product that was manufactured more than 18 years ago was defective, that jeopardized the safety of workers and Americans, that that manufacturer should not be immune after 18 years from that negligent act of putting out into the marketplace a defective product. So it is exempted if it could be proved that it was defective at the time.

Now, each of us here, as much as we adhere to a philosophical premise, we are also a product of our life experiences; and let me tell my colleagues a story that I was personally involved with that I think exemplifies some of the issues of a statute of repose, albeit the fact the question here does not exactly duplicate what my friend from Ohio is attempting here.

I knew a family and worked with this family. They bought a boat. It was an 11-year-old boat. I hail from a State that has a 10-year statute of repose. This boat, one time when they put it on the water and started it, blew up, killing one person and blowing the leg off literally of a 13-year-old boy and burning him from the waist down.

Now, granted that fact pattern does not meet this piece of legislation, because he is not a worker and this is not in the workplace, and the boat is not a piece of machinery that one finds in a workplace. But, under Nebraska law, this boy was prevented, the man who was killed was prevented by a statute of repose from suing the manufacturer. And what we found out is that that boat was defective because it did not have a blower system the day it left. It was probably the only boat manufacturer at that time that was still manufacturing boats without this type of safety mechanism in it.

Now, should they be rewarded for not adhering to the standards of the industry or using state-of-the-art technology at the time? No, they should not.

So it is those types of life experiences and real life examples that I bring with me and we all bring with us that shape our views on such things as statute of reposes. But this does create some issues. First of all, it does create a desire for a national standard for product liability suits at a time when some of us are resisting trying to make national standards. So we do not improve the situation there at all.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) brought up earlier in the discussion that this amendment probably does not eliminate suits, and he is right. It does not create more litigation, as someone said, but he is probably right that it does not eliminate it.

So while I believe it is a good compromise, and it is truly the middle ground by protecting those manufacturers who deserve to be protected, yet not protecting those who do not deserve the protection, it does, unfortunately, raise as many questions as it resolves.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Nebraska?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman's amendment is withdrawn.

Are there further amendments to the bill?

If not, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. MANZULLO). Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE) having assumed the chair, Mr. MANZULLO, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2005) to establish a statute of repose for durable goods used in a trade or business, pursuant to House Resolution 412, he reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on the amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute? If not, the question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute.

The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 222, nays 194, not voting 18, as follows:

[Roll No. 7] YEAS—222

Bartlett Aderholt Blunt Archer Barton Boehlert Boehner Armey Bass Bateman Bonilla Baker Bereuter Bono Brady (TX) Ballenger Biggert Barcia Bilbray Bryant Bilirakis Burr Barr Barrett (NE) Bliley Burton

Buyer Callahan Herger Calvert Camp Canady Cannon Castle Chabot Hunter Chambliss Chenoweth-Hage Hyde Clement Coburn Istook Collins Combest John Condit Cook Cooksey Cox Cramer Kasich Crane Kelly Cubin Cunningham Davis (VA) Deal DeLav DeMint Dickey Dingell Doolittle Linder Dreier Duncan Dunn Ehlers Emerson English Everett Fletcher Foley Fossella Mica Fowler Frank (MA) Franks (NJ) Frelinghuysen Gallegly Ganske Gekas Gilchrest Gillmor Goode Nussle Goodlatte Ose Oxley Goodling Gordon Pease Goss Graham Granger Green (WI) Petri Greenwood Gutknecht Hall (TX) Pitts Pombo Hansen Hastings (WA) Porter Hayes Hayworth

Ramstad Hilleary Regula Hobson Reynolds Hoekstra Riley Rogan Hostettler Houghton Rogers Rohrabacher Hulshof Ros-Lehtinen Hutchinson Roukema Royce Isakson Ryan (WI) Ryun (KS) Jenkins Salmon Sanford Johnson (CT) Scarborough Johnson, Sam Schaffer Jones (NC) Sensenbrenner Kaptur Sessions Shadegg Shaw Kingston Knollenberg Shays Sherwood Shimkus Kuykendall Shuster Simpson Largent Latham Sisisky LaTourette Skeen Slaughter Lewis (CA) Lewis (KY) Smith (MI) Smith (TX) Lucas (KY) Souder Lucas (OK) Spence Manzullo Spratt McCollum Stearns McCrery Stenholm McHugh Stump McInnis Sununu McIntosh Sweeney Talent McKeon Tancredo Miller (FL) Tanner Tauscher Miller, Gary Moran (KS) Taylor (MS) Moran (VA) Taylor (NC) Thomas Morella Nethercutt Thornberry Ney Northup Thune Tiahrt Norwood Toomey Unton Vitter Walden Packard Walsh Watkins Peterson (MN) Watts (OK) Peterson (PA) Weldon (FL) Weldon (PA) Weller Whitfield Pickering Pickett Wicker Wilson Wolf Portman Wu Young (AK) Young (FL) Pryce (OH) Radanovich

NAYS-194

Abercrombie Costello Ackerman Coyne Crowley Allen Andrews Cummings Baca Baird Danner Davis (IL) Baldacci DeFazio Baldwin DeGette Barrett (WI) Delahunt Becerra DeLauro Bentsen Deutsch Berklev Diaz-Balart Berman Dicks Berry Dixon Bishop Doggett Blagojevich Edwards Blumenauer Ehrlich Bonior Engel Borski Eshoo Etheridge Boswell Boucher Evans Boyd Ewing Brady (PA) Farr Fattah Brown (FL) Filner Capps Capuano Forbes Cardin Ford Clay Clayton Frost Gejdenson Gephardt Clyburn Coble Gibbons Conyers Gilman

Hefley

Gonzalez Green (TX) Gutierrez Hastings (FL) Hill (IŇ) Hill (MT) Hilliard Hinchey Hoeffel Holden Holt Hooley Horn Hover Inslee Jackson (IL) Jackson-Lee (TX) Jefferson Johnson, E. B. Jones (OH) Kanjorski Kennedy Kildee Kilpatrick Kind (WI) King (NY) Kleczka Klink Kucinich LaFalce LaHood

Moakley Mollohan Schakowsky Lampson Lantos Scott Larson Moore Serrano Lazio Murtha Sherman Shows Lee Nadler Levin Napolitano Skelton Lewis (GA) Smith (NJ) Neal Oberstar Smith (WA) Lipinski LoBiondo Obey Snyder Olver Lofgren Stabenow Lowey Ortiz Stark Strickland Luther Owens Maloney (CT) Maloney (NY) Pallone Stupak Pascrell Terry Thompson (CA) Markey Pastor Martinez Paul Thompson (MS) Mascara Payne Thurman Matsui Pelosi Tierney McCarthy (MO) Phelps Traficant McCarthy (NY) Pomeroy Udall (CO) Price (NC) Udall (NM) McDermott McGovern Velazquez Quinn McIntyre Řahall Visclosky McKinney Rangel Waters Watt (NC) McNulty Reves Meek (FL) Rodriguez Waxman Meeks (NY) Roemer Weiner Menendez Rothman Wexler Metcalf Millender-Roybal-Allard Weygand Wise Rush Woolsey McDonald Sabo Miller, George Sanders Wynn Sandlin Minge Sawyer Mink

NOT VOTING-18

Brown (OH)	Hinojosa	Saxton
Campbell	Leach	Tauzin
Carson	Meehan	Towns
Davis (FL)	Myrick	Turner
Doyle	Rivers	Vento
Hall (OH)	Sanchez	Wamp

1235

Mr. WATT of North Carolina, Ms. BERKLEY, Mr. ROTHMAN and Ms. KILPATRICK changed their vote from 'yea'' to ''nay.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM and Mr. RILEY changed their vote from "nay" 'yea.'

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated against:

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, during rollcall vote No. 7, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted "no."

AUTHORIZING TO THE CLERK CORRECTIONS MAKE ΙN EN-GROSSMENT OF H.R. 2005, WORK-PLACE GOODS JOB GROWTH AND COMPETITIVENESS ACT OF 1999

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Clerk be directed to make technical and conforming changes in the bill, H.R. 2005, to accurately reflect the actions of the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. BONIOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the majority leader for the purpose of inquiring about the schedule for the remainder of the week and next week.

Mr. ARMEY. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that we have completed our first week of legislative business in the new year. There will be no recorded votes in the House Thursday or Friday.

The House will meet next for legislative business on Tuesday, February 8, at 12:30 p.m. for morning hour and at 2 p.m. for legislative business. We will consider a number of bills under suspension of the rules, a list of which will be distributed to Members' offices later this week. On Tuesday, we do not expect recorded votes until 6 p.m.

On Wednesday, February 9, and Thursday, February 10, the House will meet and consider H.R. 2086, the Networking and Information Technology Research and Development Act. subject to a rule; and, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that as a special Valentine's Day preview, the House will be taking up H.R. 6, the Marriage Penalty Relief Act.

Mr. Špeaker, on Friday, February 11, no votes are expected.

Mr. BONIOR. Can the gentleman tell us what day the vote and debate on the marriage penalty legislation will be?
Mr. ARMEY. I thank the gentleman for asking. If the gentleman will yield further, we expect that that vote will be taken on Thursday of next week.

ADJOURNMENT FROM THURSDAY. FEBRUARY 3 TO MONDAY, FEB-RUARY 7, 2000

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns on Thursday, February 3, 2000, it adjourn to meet at 2 p.m. on Monday, February 7.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

HOUR OF MEETING ON TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 2000

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns on Monday February 7, 2000, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday, February 8 for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

HIP HIP HOORAY TO SUPER BOWL CHAMPION ST. LOUIS RAMS

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, on behalf of myself, the minority leader, Mr. GEPHARDT, and the entire Missouri delegation, I ask unanimous consent that this body give a hip hip hooray to the Super Bowl champion St. Louis Rams.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 1598

Mr. WEXLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to have my name removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 1598.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentle-woman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN) is recognized for 5 minutes. (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN addressed the House. Her remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

A REPUBLIC, IF YOU CAN KEEP IT, PART 2

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, on Monday, I took a special order to discuss the importance of the American Republic and why it should be preserved. Today, I will continue with that special order.

When it comes to executive orders, it has gotten completely out of hand. Executive orders may legitimately be used by a President to carry out his constitutionally authorized duties, but that would require far fewer orders than modern day Presidents have issued as the 20th century comes to a close, we find the executive branch willfully and arrogantly using the executive order to deliberately circumvent the legislative body, and bragging about it.

Although nearly 100,000 American battle deaths have occurred since World War II and both big and small wars have been fought almost continuously, there has not been a congressional declaration of war since 1941. Our Presidents now fight wars not only without explicit congressional approval but also in the name of the United Nations, with our troops now serving under foreign commanders.

Our Presidents have assured us that U.N. authorization is all that is needed to send our troops into battle. The 1973 War Powers Resolution meant to restrict presidential war powers has either been ignored by our Presidents or used to justify war up to 90 days. The Congress and the people too often have chosen to ignore this problem, saying little about the recent bombing in Serbia. The continual bombing of Iraq which has now been going on for over 9 years is virtually ignored.

If a President can decide on the issue of war without a vote of the Congress, a representative republic does not exist. Our President should not have the authority to declare national emergencies and they certainly should not have authority to declare martial law, a power the Congress has already granted to any future emergency.

Economic and political crises can develop quickly and overly aggressive Presidents are only too willing to enhance their own power in dealing with them. Congress sadly throughout this century has been only too willing to grant authority to our Presidents at the sacrifice of its own.

The idea of separate but equal branches of government has been forgotten and the Congress bears much of the responsibility for this trend. Executive powers in the past 100 years have grown steadily with the creation of agencies that write and enforce their own regulations and with Congress allowing the President to use executive orders without restraint.

But in addition, there have been various other special vehicles that our Presidents use without congressional oversight. For example, the exchange stabilization fund set up during the depression has over $34 billion available to be used at the President's discretion without congressional approval. This slush fund grows each year as it is paid interest on the securities it holds. It was instrumental in the $50 billion Mexican bailout in 1995.

The CIA is so secretive that even those Congressmen privy to its operation have little knowledge of what this secret government actually does around the world.

1245

We know, of course, it has been involved in the past 50 years in assassinations and government overthrows on frequent occasions. The Federal Reserve operation, which works hand in hand with the administration, is not subject to congressional oversight. The Fed manipulates currency exchange rates, controls short-term interest rates, and fixes the gold price, all behind closed doors.

Bailing out foreign governments, financial corporations and huge banks can all be achieved without congressional approval. One hundred years ago when we had a gold standard, credit could not be created out of thin air, and, because a much more limited government philosophy prevailed, this could not have been possible. Today it is hard to even document what goes on, let alone expect Congress to control it.

The people should be able to closely monitor the Government, but as our government grows in size and scope, it, the Government, seeks to monitor our every move. Attacks on our privacy are an incessant and always justified by citing so-called legitimate needs of the State, efficiency and law enforcement.

Plans are laid for numerous data banks to record everyone's activities. A national ID card using our Social Security number is the goal of many, and even though we achieved a significant delivery in delaying its final approval last year, the promoters will surely persist in their efforts.

Plans are made for a medical data bank to be kept and used against our wishes. Job banks and details of all our lending activities continue to be of interest to all our national policy agencies, to make sure they know exactly where the drug dealers, the illegal aliens, and tax dodgers are and what they are doing, it is argued.

For national security purposes, the Echelon system of monitoring all overseas phone calls has been introduced, yet the details of this program are not available to any inquiring Member of Congress.

The Government knew very little about each individual American citizen in 1900. But, starting with World War I, there has been a systematic growth of Government surveillance of everyone's activities, with multiple records being kept. Today, true privacy is essentially a thing of the past. The FBI and the IRS have been used by various administrations to snoop and harass political opponents, and there has been little effort by Congress to end this abuse. A free society, that is, a constitutional republic, cannot be maintained if privacy is not highly cherished and protected by the Government, rather than abused by it. We can expect it to get

Secretary of Defense Bill Cohen was recently quoted as saying, "Terrorism is escalating to the point that U.S. citizens may have to choose between civil liberties and more intrusive forms of protection." This is all in the name of taking care of us.

As far as I am concerned, we could all do with a lot less Government protection and security. The offer of Government benevolence is the worst reason to sacrifice liberty, but we have seen a lot of that during the 20th century.

Probably the most significant change in attitude that occurred in the $20 \, \text{th}$ century was that with respect to life itself. Although abortion has been performed for hundreds, if not for thousands, of years, it was rarely considered an acceptable and routine medical procedure without moral consequence.

Since 1973, abortion in America has become routine and justified by a contorted understanding of the right to privacy. The difference between American rejection of abortion at the beginning of the century compared to today's casual acceptance is like night and day. Although a vocal number of Americans express their disgust with abortion on demand, our legislative bodies and the courts claim that the procedure is a constitutionally protected right, disregarding all scientific evidence and legal precedents that recognize the unborn as a legal, living entity, deserving protection of the law.

Ironically, the greatest proponents of abortion are the same ones who advocate imprisonment for anyone who disturbs the natural habitat of a toad. This loss of respect for human life in the latter half of the 20th century has yet to have its full impact on our society. Without a deep concern for life and with the casual disposing of living human fetuses, respect for liberty is greatly diminished. This has allowed a subtle but real justification for those who commit violent acts against fellow human beings.

It should surprise no one that a teenager delivering a term newborn is capable of throwing the child away in a garbage dumpster. The new mother in this circumstance is acting consistently, knowing that if an abortion is done just before a delivery, it is legally justified and the abortionist is paid to kill the child. Sale of fetal parts to tax-supported institutions is now an accepted practice. This moral dilemma that our society has encountered over the past 40 years, if not resolved in the favor of life, will make it impossible for a system of laws to protect the life and liberty of any citizen.

We can expect senseless violence to continue as the sense of worth is undermined. Children know that mothers and sisters, when distraught, have abortions to solve the problem of an unwanted pregnancy. Distraught teenagers in coping with this behavior are now prone to use violence against others or themselves when provoked or confused. This tendency is made worse because they see in this age of abortion their own lives as having less value, thus destroying self-esteem.

The prime reason government is organized in a free society is to protect life, not to protect those who take life. Today, not only do we protect the abortionist, we take taxpayers' funds to pay for abortions domestically as well as overseas. This egregious policy will continue to plague us well into the 21st century.

A free society designed to protect life and liberty is incompatible with Government sanctions and financing abortion on demand. It should not be a surprise to anyone that as abortion became more acceptable, our society became more violent and less free. The irony is that Roe v. Wade justified abortion using the privacy argument, conveniently forgetting that not protecting the innocent unborn is the most serious violation of privacy possible.

If the location of the fetus is the justification for legalized killing, the privacy of our homes would permit the killing of the newborn, the deformed and the elderly, a direction, unfortunately, in which we find ourselves going. As government-financed medical care increases, we will hear more economic arguments for euthanasia, that is, mercy killing, for the benefit of the budget planners. Already we hear these economic arguments for killing the elderly and terminally ill.

Last year the House made a serious error by trying to federalize the crime of killing a fetus occurring in an act of violence. The stated goal was to emphasize that the fetus deserved legal protection under the law, and, indeed, it should and does at the State level. Federalizing any act of violence is unconstitutional. Essentially, all violent acts should be dealt with by the States, and, because we have allowed the courts and Congress to federalize such laws, we find more good State laws are overridden than good Federal laws written.

Roe v. Wade federalized State abortion laws and ushered in the age of abortion. The Unborn Victims of Violence Act, if passed into law, will do great harm by explicitly excluding the abortionist, thus codifying for the first time the Roe v. Wade concept and giving even greater legal protection to the abortionist.

The responsibility of Congress is twofold: first, we should never fund abortions. Nothing could be more heinous than forcing those with strong rightto-life beliefs to pay for abortions. Second, Roe v. Wade must be re-

Second, Roe v. Wade must be replaced by limiting jurisdiction, which can be done through legislation, a constitutional option. If we as a Nation do not once again show respect and protect the life of the unborn, we can expect the factions that have emerged on each side of this issue to become more vocal and violent. A Nation that can casually toss away its smallest and most vulnerable members and call it a "right" cannot continue to protect the lives or rights of its other citizens.

Much has changed over the past 100 years, where technology has improved our living standards. We find that our Government has significantly changed from one of limited scope to that of pervasive intervention.

One hundred years ago it was generally conceded that one extremely important function of government was to enforce contracts made voluntarily in the marketplace. Today, government notoriously interferes with almost every voluntary economic transaction. Consumerism, labor laws, wage standards, hiring and firing regulations, political correctness, affirmative action, the Americans with Disability Act, the Tax Code, and others place a burden on the two parties struggling to transact business

The EPA, OSHA and governmentgenerated litigation also interferes with voluntary contracts. At times, it seems a miracle that our society adapts and continues to perform reasonably well in spite of the many bureaucratic dictates.

As the 20th century comes to a close, we see a dramatic change from a government that once served an important function by emphasizing the value of voluntary contracts to one that excessively interferes with them. Although the interference is greater in economic associations than in social, the principle is the same. Already we see the political correctness movement interfering with social and religious associations. Data banks are set up to keep records on everyone, especially groups with strong religious views and anybody to be so bold as to call himself a patriot. The notion that there is a difference between murder and murder driven by hate has established the principles of a thought crime, a dangerous trend indeed.

When the business cycle turns down, all the regulations and laws that interfere with economic and personal transactions will not be as well tolerated, and then the true cost will become apparent. It is under the conditions of a weak economy that such government interference generates a reaction to the anger over the rules that have been suppressed.

To the statist, the idea that average people can and should take care of themselves by making their own decisions and that they do not need Big Brother to protect them in everything they do is anathema to the way they think.

The bureaucratic mindset is convinced that without the politicians' effort, no one would be protected from anything, rejecting the idea of a free market economy out of ignorance or arrogance. This change in the 20th century has significantly contributed to the dependency of our poor on Government handouts, the recipients being convinced that they are entitled to help and that they are incapable of taking care of themselves. A serious loss of self-esteem and unhappiness results, even if the system in the short run seems to help them get by.

There were no Federal laws at the end of the 19th century dealing with drugs or guns. Gun violence was rare and abuse of addictive substances was only a minor problem. Now, after 100 years of progressive Government intervention in dealing with guns and drugs, with thousands of laws and regulations, we have more gun violence and a huge drug problem.

Before the social authoritarians decided to reform the gun and drug culture, they amended the Constitution enacting alcohol prohibition. Prohibition failed to reduce alcohol usage and a crime wave resulted. After 14 years, the American people demanded repeal of this social engineering amendment, and got it.

Prohibition prompted the production of poor quality alcohol with serious health consequences, while respect for the law was lost as it was flagrantly violated. At least at that time the American people believed the Constitution had to be amended to prohibit the use of alcohol, something that is entirely ignored today in the Federal Government's effort to stop drug usage.

In spite of the obvious failure of alcohol prohibition, the Federal Government, after its repeal, turned its sights on gun ownership and drug usage. The many Federal anti-gun laws written since 1934, along with the constant threat of outright registration and confiscation, have put the FBI and the BATF at odds with millions of law abiding citizens who believe the Constitution is explicit in granting the right of gun ownership to all nonviolent Americans.

1300

Our government pursued alcohol prohibition in the 1920s and confiscation of gold in the 1930s, so it is logical to conclude that our government is quite capable of confiscating all privatelyowned firearms. That has not yet occurred; but as we move into the next century, many in Washington advocate just that and would do it if they did not think the American people would revolt, just as they did against alcohol prohibition.

Throughout this century, there has been a move toward drug prohibition starting with the Harrison Act of 1912. The first Federal marijuana law was pushed through by FDR in 1938, but the real war on drugs has been fought with intensity for the past 30 years.

Hundreds of billions of dollars have been spent and not only is there no evidence of reduced drug usage, we have instead seen a tremendous increase. Many deaths have occurred from overdoses of street drugs since there is no quality control or labeling. Crime as a consequence of drug prohibition has skyrocketed and our prisons are overflowing. Many prisoners are nonviolent and should be treated as patients with addictions, not as criminals. Irrational mandatory minimum sentences have caused a great deal of harm. We have nonviolent drug offenders doing life sentences, and there is no room to incarcerate the rapists and murderers.

With drugs and needles illegal, the unintended consequence of the spread of AIDS and hepatitis through dirty needles has put a greater burden on the taxpavers who are forced to care for the victims.

This ridiculous system that offers a jail cell for a sick addict rather than treatment has pushed many a young girl into prostitution to pay for the drugs priced hundreds of times higher than they are worth, but the drug dealers love the system and dread a new approach.

When we finally decide that drug prohibition has been no more successful than alcohol prohibition, the drug dealers will disappear. The monster drug problem we have created is compounded by moves to tax citizens so government can hand out free needles to drug addicts who are breaking the law in hopes that there will be less spread of hepatitis and AIDS in order to reduce government health care costs.

This proposal shows how bankrupt we are at coming to grips with this problem, and it seems we will never learn.

Tobacco is about to be categorized as a drug and prohibition of sorts imposed. This will make the drug war seem small if we continue to expand the tobacco war. Talk about insane government policies of the 20th century, tobacco policy wins the prize. First, we subsidize tobacco in response to demands by the special interests, knowing full well even from the beginning that tobacco had many negative health consequences. Then we spend taxpayers' money warning the people of its dangers, without stopping the subsidies.

Government then pays for the care of those who choose to smoke, despite the known dangers and warnings. But it does not stop there. The trial lawyers' lobby saw to it that the local government entities could sue tobacco companies for reimbursement of the excess costs that they were bearing in taking care of smoking-related illnesses, and the only way this could be paid for was to place a tax on those people who did not smoke.

How could such silliness go on for so long? For one reason. We as a nation have forgotten the basic precept of a free society, that all citizens must be responsible for their own acts. If one smokes and gets sick, that is the problem of the one making the decision to smoke or take any other risk for that matter, not the innocent taxpayers who have already been forced to pay for the tobacco subsidies and government health warning ads.

Beneficiaries of this monstrous policy have been tobacco farmers, tobacco manufacturers, politicians, bureaucrats, smokers, health organizations, and physicians, and especially the trial lawyers. Who suffers? The innocent taxpayers that have no choice in the matter and who acted responsibly and chose not to smoke.

Think of what it would mean if we followed this simple logic and implemented a Federal social program, similar to the current war on smoking, designed to reduce the spread of AIDS within the gay community. Astoundingly, we have done the opposite by making AIDS a politically correct disease. There was certainly a different attitude a hundred years ago regarding those with sexually transmitted diseases like syphilis compared to the special status given AIDS victims today.

It is said that an interventionist economy is needed to make society fair to everyone. We need no more govern-Egaliment fairness campaigns. tarianism never works and inevitably penalizes the innocent. Government in a free society is supposed to protect the innocent, encourage self-reliance and impose equal justice while allowing everyone to benefit from their own effort and suffer the consequences of their own acts. A free and independent people need no authoritarian central government dictating eating, drinking, gambling, sexual, or smoking habits.

When the rules are required, they should come from the government closest to home as it once did prior to America's ill-fated 20th Century experiment with alcohol prohibition. Let us hope we show more common sense in the 21st Century in these matters than we did in the 20th.

A compulsive attitude by politicians to regulate nonviolent behavior may be well intentioned but leads to many unintended consequences. Legislation passed in the second half of the 20th Century dealing with drugs and personal habits has been the driving force behind the unconstitutional seizure and forfeiture laws and the loss of financial privacy.

The war on drugs is the most important driving force behind the national police state. The excuse given for calling in the Army helicopters and tanks at the Waco disaster was that the authorities had evidence of an amphetamine lab on the Davidian property. This was never proven, but nevertheless it gave the legal cover but not the proper constitutional authority for escalating the attack on the Davidians which led to the senseless killing of so many innocent people.

The attitudes surrounding this entire issue needs to change. We should never turn over the job of dealing with bad habits to our Federal Government.

That is a recipe for disaster.

America has not only changed technologically in the last 100 years but our social attitudes and personal philosophies have changed as well. We have less respect for life and less love for liberty. We are obsessed with material things, along with rowdy and raucous entertainment. Needs and wants have become rights for both poor and rich. The idea of instant gratification too often guides our actions, and when satisfaction is not forthcoming anger and violence breaks out. Road rage and airline passenger rage are seen more frequently. Regardless of fault, a bad outcome in almost anything, even if beyond human control, will prompt a lawsuit. Too many believe they deserve to win the lottery and a lawsuit helps the odds

Unfortunately, the only winners too often are the lawyers hyping the litigation. Few Americans are convinced anymore that productive effort is the most important factor in economic success and personal satisfaction. One did not get rich in the 1990s investing in companies that had significant or modest earnings. The most successful investors bought companies that had no earnings and the gambling paid off big. This attitude cannot create perpetual wealth and must some day end.

Today, financial gurus are obsessed with speculation in the next initial public offering and express no interest in the cause of liberty without which markets cannot exist.

Lying and cheating are now acceptable by the majority. This was not true 100 years ago when moral standards were higher. The October 1999 issue of U.S. News and World Report reveals that 84 percent of college students believe cheating is necessary to get ahead in today's world, and 90 percent are convinced there is no price to pay for the cheating. Not surprisingly, 90 percent of college students do not believe politicians, and an equal number of percentage believes the media cheats as well.

There is no way to know if this problem is this bad in the general population, but these statistics indicate our young people do not trust our politicians or media. Trust has been replaced with a satisfaction in the materialism that speculative stock markets, borrowing money, and a spendthrift government can generate.

What happens to our society if the material abundance which we enjoy is ephemeral and human trust is lost? Social disorder will surely result and there will be a clamor for a more authoritarian government. This scenario may indeed threaten the stability of our social order and significantly undermine all our constitutional protections, but there is no law or ethics committee that will solve this problem of diminishing trust and honesty. That is a problem of the heart, mind and character to be dealt with by each individual citizen.

The importance of the family unit today has been greatly diminished compared to the close of the 19th Century. Now, fewer people get married, more divorces occur and the number of children born out of wedlock continues to rise. Tax penalties are placed on married couples. Illegitimacy and single parenthood are rewarded by government subsidies, and we find many authoritarians arguing that the definition of marriage should change in order to allow non-husband and -wife couples to qualify for welfare handouts.

The welfare system has mocked the concept of marriage in the name of political correctness, economic egalitarianism, and heterophobia. Freedom of speech is still cherished in America but the political correctness movement has seriously undermined dissent on our university campuses. A conservative or libertarian black intellectual is clearly not treated with the same respect afforded an authoritarian black spokesman.

We now hear of individuals being sent to psychiatrists when personal and social views are crude or out of the ordinary. It was commonplace in the Soviet system to incarcerate political dissenters in so-called mental institutions. Those who received a Soviet government designation of socially undesirable elements were stripped of their rights. Will this be the way we treat political dissent in the future?

We hear of people losing their jobs because of socially undesirable thoughts or for telling off-color jokes. Today, sensitivity courses are routinely required in America to mold social thinking for the simplest of infractions. The thought police are all around us. It is a bad sign.

Any academic discussion questioning the wisdom of our policies surrounding World War II is met with shrill accusations of anti-Semitism and Nazi lover. No one is ever even permitted, without derision by the media, the university intellectuals and the politicians, to ask why the United States allied itself with the murdering Soviets and then turned over Eastern Europe to them while ushering in a 45-year saber-rattling, dangerous Cold War period.

Free speech is permitted in our universities for those who do not threaten the status quo of welfarism, globalism, corporatism, and a financial system that provides great benefit to the powerful special interests. If a university professor does not follow the party line, he does not receive tenure.

We find ourselves at the close of this century realizing all our standards have been undermined. A monetary standard for our money is gone. The dollar is whatever the government tells us it is. There is no definition and no promise to pay anything for the notes issued ad infinitum by the government. Standards for education are continually lowered, deemphasizing excellence. Relative ethics are promoted and moral absolutes are ridiculed. The influence of religion on our standards is frowned upon and replaced by secular humanistic standards. The work ethic has been replaced by a welfare ethic based on need, not effort. Strict standards required for an elite military force are gone and our lack of readiness reflects this.

Standards of behavior of our professional athletes seem to reflect the rules followed in the ring by the professional wrestlers where anything goes. Managed medical care driven by government decrees has reduced its quality and virtually ruined the doctor-patient relationship.

Movie and TV standards are so low that our young people's senses are totally numbed by them. Standards of courtesy on highways, airplanes, and shops are seriously compromised and at times leads to senseless violence.

With the acceptance of abortion, our standards for life have become totally arbitrary as they have become for liberty. Endorsing the arbitrary use of force by our government morally justifies the direct use of force by disgruntled groups not satisfied with the slower government process. The standards for honesty and truth have certainly deteriorated during the past 100 years.

1315

Property ownership has been undermined through environmental regulations and excessive taxation. True ownership of property no longer exists. There has been a systematic undermining of legal and constitutional principles once followed and respected for the protection of individual liberty.

A society cannot continue in a state of moral anarchy. Moral anarchy will lead to political anarchy. A society without clearly understood standards of conduct cannot remain stable any more than an architect can design and build a sturdy skyscraper with measuring instruments that change in value each day. We recently lost a NASA space probe because someone failed to convert inches to centimeters, a simple but deadly mistake in measuring physical standards. If we as a people debase our moral standards, the American Republic will meet a similar fate.

Many Americans agree that this country is facing a moral crisis that has been especially manifested in the closing decade of the 21st century. Our President's personal conduct, the characters of our politicians in general, the caliber of the arts, movies, and television, and our legal system have reflected this crisis.

The personal conduct of many of our professional athletes and movie stars has been less than praiseworthy. Some politicians, sensing this, have pushed hard to write and strictly enforce numerous laws regarding personal nonviolent behavior with the hope that the people will become more moral. This has not happened, but has filled our prisons. This year it will cost more than $40 billion to run our prison system. The prison population, nearing 2 million, is up 70 percent in the last decade, and two-thirds of the inmates did not commit an act of violence. Mandatory minimum drug sentencing laws have been instrumental in this trend.

Laws clearly cannot alter moral behavior, and if it is attempted, it creates bigger problems. Only individuals with moral convictions can make society moral. But the law does reflect the general consensus of the people regarding force and aggression, which is a moral issue. Government can be directed to restrain and punish violent aggressive citizens, or it can use aggressive force to rule the people, redistribute wealth, and make citizens follow certain moral standards, and force them to practice certain personal habits.

Once government is permitted to do the latter, even in a limited sense, the guiding principle of an authoritarian government is established, and its power and influence over the people will steadily grow, at the expense of personal liberty. No matter how well-intentioned, the authoritarian government always abuses its powers. In its effort to achieve an egalitarian society, the principle of inequality that freedom recognizes and protects is lost.

Government, then, instead of being an obstruction to violence, becomes the biggest perpetrator. This invites all the special interests to manipulate the monopoly and evil use of government power. Twenty thousand lobbyists currently swarm Washington seeking special advantage. That is where we find ourselves today.

Although government cannot and should not try to make people better in the personal, moral sense, proper law should have a moral, nonaggressive basis to it: no lying, cheating, stealing, killing, injuring, or threatening. Government then would be limited to protecting contracts, people, and property, while guaranteeing all personal nonviolent behavior, even the controversial.

Although there are degrees in various authoritarian societies as to how much power a government may wield, once government is given the authority to wield power, it does so in an ever-increasing manner. The pressure to use government authority to run the economy in our lives depends on several factors. These include a basic understanding of personal liberty, respect for a constitutional republic, economic myths, ignorance, and misplaced good intentions.

In every society there are always those waiting in the wings for an opportunity to show how brilliant they are as they lust for power, convinced that they know what is best for everyone. But the defenders of liberty know that what is best for everyone is to be left alone, with a government limited to stopping aggressive behavior.

The 20th century has produced socialist dictators the world over, from Stalin, Hitler, and Mao to Pol Pot, Castro, and Ho Chi Minh. More than 200 million people died as a result of bad ideas of these evil men. Each and every one of these dictators despised the principle of private property ownership, which then undermined all the other liberties cherished by the people.

It is argued that the United States and now the world have learned a third way, something between extreme socialism and mean-spirited capitalism. But this is a dream. The so-called friendly third way endorses 100 percent the principle that government authority can be used to direct our lives and the economy. Once this is accepted, the principle that man alone is responsible for his salvation and his life on Earth, which serves as the foundation for free market capitalism, is rejected.

The third way of friendly welfarism or soft fascism, where government and businesses are seen as partners, undermines and sets the stage for authoritarian socialism. Personal liberty cannot be preserved if we remain on the course at which we find ourselves at the close of the 20th century.

In our early history, it was understood that a free society embraced both personal civil liberties and economic liberties. During the 20th century this unified concept of freedom has been undermined. Today we have one group talking about economic freedom while interfering with our personal liberty, and the other group condemning economic liberty while preaching the need to protect personal civil liberties. Both groups reject liberty 50 percent of the time. That leaves very few who defend liberty all the time. Sadly, there are too few in this country who today understand and defend liberty in both areas.

A common debate that we hear occurs over how we can write laws protecting normal speech and at the same time limiting commercial speech, as if they were two entirely different things. Many Americans wonder why Congress pays so little attention to the Constitution and are bewildered as to how so much inappropriate legislation gets passed.

But the Constitution is not entirely ignored. It is used correctly at times when it is convenient and satisfies a particular goal, but never consistently across-the-board on all legislation.

Two, the Constitution is all too frequently made to say exactly what the authors of special legislation want it to say. That is the modern way language can be made relative to our times, but without a precise understanding and respect for the supreme law of the land, that is, the Constitution, it no longer serves as the guide for the rule of law. In its place, we have substituted the rule of man and the special interests.

That is how we have arrived at the close of this century without a clear understanding or belief in the cardinal principles of the Constitution: the separation of powers and the principle of Federalism. Instead, we are rushing toward a powerful executive, centralized control, and a Congress greatly diminished in importance.

Executive orders, agency regulations, Federal court rulings, unratified international agreements, direct government, economy, and foreign policy. Congress has truly been reduced in status and importance over the past 100 years. When the people's voices are heard, it is done indirectly through polling, allowing our leaders to decide how far they can go without stirring up the people.

But this is opposite to what the Constitution was supposed to do. It was meant to protect the rights of the minority from the dictates of the majority. The majority vote of the powerful and influential was never meant to rule the people.

We may not have a king telling us which trees we can cut down today, but we do have a government bureaucracy and a pervasive threat of litigation by radical environmentalists who keep us from cutting our own trees, digging a drainage ditch, or filling a puddle, all at the expense of private property ownership.

The key element in a free society is that individuals should wield control of their lives, receiving the benefits and suffering the consequences of all their acts. Once the individual becomes a pawn of the state, whether a monarchor a majority-ruled state, a free society can no longer endure.

We are dangerously close to that happening in America, even in the midst of plenty and with the appearance of contentment. If individual liberty is carelessly snuffed out, the creative energy needed for productive pursuits will dissipate. Government produces nothing, and in its effort to redistribute wealth, can only destroy it.

Freedom too often is rejected, especially in the midst of plenty, when there is a belief that government largesse will last forever. This is true because it is tough to accept personal responsibility, practice the work ethic, and follow the rules of peaceful coexistence with our fellow man.

Continuous vigilance against the would-be tyrants who promise security at minimum cost must be maintained. The temptation is great to accept the notion that everyone can be a beneficiary of the caring state and a winner of the lottery or a class action lawsuit. But history has proven there is never a shortage of authoritarians, benevolent, of course, quite willing to tell others how to live for their own good. A little sacrifice of personal liberty is a small price to pay for long-time security, it is too often argued.

I have good friends who are in basic agreement with my analysis of the current state of the American republic, but argue it is a waste of time and effort to try and change the direction in which we are going. No one will listen, they argue. Besides, the development of a strong, centralized, authoritarian government is too far along to reverse the trends of the 20th century. Why waste time in Congress when so few people care about liberty, they ask? The masses, they point out, are interested only in being taken care of, and the elite want to keep receiving the special benefits allotted to them through special interest legislation.

I understand the odds, and I am not naive enough to believe the effort to preserve liberty is a cake walk. I am very much aware of my own limitations in achieving this goal. But ideas based on sound and moral principles do have consequences, and powerful ideas can make major consequences beyond our wildest dreams.

Our Founders clearly understood this, and they knew they would be successful, even against the overwhelming odds they faced. They described this steady confidence they shared with each other when hopes were dim as "divine Providence."

Good ideas can have good results, and we must remember, bad ideas can have bad results. It is crucial to understand that vague and confusing idealism produces mediocre results, especially when it is up against a determined effort to promote an authoritarian system that is sold to the people as conciliatory and nonconfrontational, a compromise, they say, between the two extremes

But it must be remembered that no matter how it is portrayed, when big government systematically and steadily undermines individual rights and economic liberty, it is still a powerful but negative idea and it will not fade away easily.

Ideas of liberty are a great threat to those who enjoy planning the economy and running other peoples' lives. The good news is that our numbers are growing. More Americans than ever before are very much aware of what is going on in Washington and how, on a daily basis, their liberties are being undermined. There are more intellectual think tanks than ever before promoting the market economy, private property ownership, and personal liberty.

The large majority of Americans are sick and tired of being overtaxed, and despise the income tax and the inheritance tax. The majority of Americans know government programs fail to achieve their goals and waste huge sums of money. A smoldering resentment against the unfairness of government and efforts to force equality on us can inspire violence, but instead, it should be used to encourage an honest system of equal justice based on individual, not collective, rights.

Sentiment is moving in the direction of challenging the status quo of the welfare and international warfare state. The Internet has given hope to millions who have felt their voices were not being heard, and this influence is just beginning. The three major networks and conventional government propaganda no longer control the information now available to everyone with a computer.

The only way the supporters of big government can stop the Internet will be to tax, regulate, and monitor it. Although it is a major undertaking, plans are already being laid to do precisely that. Big government proponents are anxious to make the tax on the Internet an international tax, as advocated by the United Nations, apply the Eschelon principle used to monitor all overseas phone calls to the Internet, and prevent the development of private encryption that would guarantee privacy on the Internet.

These battles have just begun. If the civil libertarians and free market proponents do not win this fight to keep the Internet free and private, the tools for undermining authoritarian government will be greatly reduced. Victory for liberty will probably elude us for decades.

The excuse they will give for controlling the Internet will be to stop pornography, catch drug dealers, monitor child molesters, and do many other socalled good things. We should not be deceived. We have faced tough odds, but to avoid battle or believe there is a place to escape to, someplace else in the world, would concede victory to those who endorse authoritarian government.

The grand experiment in human liberty must not be abandoned. A renewed hope and understanding of liberty is what we need as we move into the 21st century. A perfectly free society we know cannot be achieved, and the ideal perfect socialism is an oxymoron. Pursuing that goal throughout the 20th century has already caused untold suffering.

The clear goal of a free society must be understood and sought, or the vision of the authoritarians will face little resistance and will easily fill the void.

There are precise goals Congress should work for, even under today's difficult circumstances. It must preserve in the best manner possible voluntary options to failed government programs.

1330

We must legalize freedom to the maximum extent possible.

- 1. Complete police protection is impossible; therefore, we must preserve the right to own weapons in self-defense.
- 2. In order to maintain economic protection against Government debasement of the currency, gold ownership must be preserved, something taken away from the American people during the Depression.
- 3. Adequate retirement protection by the Government is limited, if not ultimately impossible. We must allow every citizen the opportunity to control all of his or her retirement funds.
- 4. Government education has clearly failed. We must guarantee the right of families to home school or send their kids to private schools and help them with tax credits.
- 5. Government snoops must be stopped. We must work to protect all privacy, especially on the Internet, prevent the national ID card, and stop the development of all Government data banks.
- 6. Federal police functions are unconstitutional and increasingly abusive. We should disarm all Federal bureaucrats and return the police function to local authorities.
- 7. The Army was never meant to be used in local policing activities. We must firmly prevent our Presidents from using the military in local law enforcement operations, which is now being planned for under the guise of fighting terrorism.
- 8. Foreign military intervention by our Presidents in recent years to police the American empire is a costly failure. Foreign military intervention should not be permitted without explicit congressional approval.
- 9. Competition in all elections should be guaranteed, and the monopoly powers gained by the two major parties through unfair signature requirements, high fees, and campaign donation controls should be removed. Competitive parties should be allowed in all government-sponsored debate.
- 10. We must do whatever is possible to help instill a spirit of love for freedom and recognize that our liberties depend on responsible individuals, not the group or the collective or the society as a whole. The individual is the building block of a free and prosperous social order.

The Founders knew full well that the concept of liberty was fragile and could easily be undermined. They worried about the dangers that lay ahead. As we move into the new century, it is an appropriate time to rethink the principles upon which a free society rest.

Jefferson, concerned about the future wrote, "Yes, we did produce a near-perfect republic, but will they keep it? Or will they, in the enjoyment of plenty, lose the memory of freedom? Material abundance without character is the path of destruction."

"They," that he refers to are "we." And the future is now. Freedom, Jefferson knew, would produce plenty, and with material abundance it is easy to forget the responsibility the citizens of a free society must assume if freedom and prosperity are to continue.

The key element for the Republic's survival for Jefferson was the character of the people, something no set of laws can instill. The question today is not that of abundance, but of character, respect for others, and their liberty and their property. It is the character of the people that determines the proper role for government in a free society.

Samuel Adams, likewise, warned future generations. He referred to "good manners" as the vital ingredient that a free society needs to survive. Adams said, "Neither the wisest Constitution nor the wisest laws will secure the liberty and happiness of a people whose manners are universally corrupt."

The message is clear. If we lose our love of liberty and our manners become corrupt, character is lost and so is the Republic. But character is determined by free will and personal choice by each of us individually. Character can be restored or cast aside at a whim. The choice is ours alone, and our leaders should show the way.

Some who are every bit as concerned as I am about our future and the pervasive corrupt influence in our Government in every aspect of our lives offer other solutions. Some say to solve the problem all we have to do is write more detailed laws dealing with campaign finance reform, ignoring how this might undermine the principles of liberty. Similarly, others argue that what is needed is merely to place tighter restrictions on the lobbyists in order to minimize their influence. But they fail to realize this undermines our constitutional right to petition our Government for redress of grievances.

And there are others with equally good intentions that insist on writing even more laws and regulations punishing nonviolent behavior in order to teach good manners and instill character. But they fail to see that tolerating nonviolent behavior, even when stupid and dangerous to one's own self, is the same as our freedom to express unpopular political and offensive ideas and to promote and practice religion in any way one chooses.

Resorting to writing more laws with the intent of instilling good character and good manners in the people is anathema to liberty. The love of liberty can come only from within and is dependent on a stable family and a society that seeks the brotherhood of man through voluntary and charitable means.

And there are others who believe that government force is legitimate in promoting what they call "fair redistribution." The proponents of this course have failed to read history and instead adhere to economic myths. They ignore the evidence that these efforts to help their fellow man will inevitably fail. Instead, it will do the opposite and lead to the impoverishment of many.

But more importantly, if left unchecked, this approach will destroy liberty by undermining the concept of private property ownership and free markets, the bedrock of economic prosperity.

None of these alternatives will work. Character and good manners are not a government problem. They reflect individual attitudes that can only be changed by individuals themselves. Freedom allows virtue and excellence to blossom. When government takes on the role of promoting virtue, illegitimate government force is used and tyrants quickly appear on the scene to do the job. Virtue and excellence become illusive, and we find instead that the government officials become corrupt and freedom is lost, the very ingredient required for promoting virtue, harmony, and the brotherhood of man.

Let us hope and pray that our political focus will soon shift toward preserving liberty and individual responsibility and away from authoritarianism. The future of the American Republic depends on it. Let us not forget that the American dream depends on keeping alive the spirit of liberty.

SECRETARY BILL RICHARDSON AND BILL HEDDEN: A POWERFUL TEAM TO SAVE THE SOUTH-WEST'S WATER AND NATIONAL PARKS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor and in thanks to two powerful "Bills." Not the legislation we introduce here, but as in Bill Richardson and Bill Hedden, for their work to move the largest uranium mine tailings pile that has ever threatened the drinking water in the United States.

Secretary of Energy, Bill Richardson, and Bill Hedden, the Utah Conservation Director of the Grand Canyon Trust, are two lifesaving "Bills" who have shown incredible leadership in pushing to move a uranium tailings pile that currently sits only 750 feet away from the Colorado River near Moab. Utah.

A few days ago, Secretary Richardson unveiled an innovative agreement that would result in moving the tailings pile that is slowly leaching radioactive waste into the Colorado River. And just last night, our other hero, Bill Hedden, was honored by the Project on Government Oversight, or POGO, for his tireless efforts to move this poisonous pile. Both men see how important it is to move the tailings pile, which is as big as 118 football fields, rather than capping it in its place. This capping would only ensure that the poisonous waste would continue to leach into the Colorado River for up to 3 centuries.

Because of these visionary "Bills," 25 million people who live down the Colorado River and who depend on it for their drinking water not be doomed to poor "bills" of health from the pollution.

Our "Bills" are working to ensure that one-seventh of the United States, including Las Vegas, Arizona, and the Southern California urban areas of Los Angeles and the city I represent, San Diego, will have water free from this pollution.

Our hero "Bills" are trying to save us from the bill that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, or the NRC, was trying to stick us with. The NRC said that capping the poisonous pile was good enough. The NRC did not care that they were sentencing our children, our grandchildren, and great grandchildren to 270 years of having this radioactive waste leach into our water supply.

These white-hatted "Bills" know that our Nation must protect our water, our animals, and our beautiful National Parks that we have set aside because they are our treasures.

As one of our "Bills," Secretary Richardson, said a few weeks ago, "The time to act is now. Radioactive waste sits at the gateway of two National Parks, Arches and Canyonlands. This area is a geological wonderland, nested in a valley with scenic red cliffs and rugged, beautiful desert terrain. The Department of Energy has the expertise and experience to relocate the material in a secure, permanent location that is safely away from the Colorado River and our National Parks."

Mr. Speaker, I tip my hat to these two courageous "Bills," Secretary Richardson and Grand Canyon Trust's Bill Hedden, for saving us the bill of misery, ill health, and heartache that would go with permanently enshrining this huge pile of waste in the backyard of our National Parks where it would surely and forever pollute the Southwest's drinking water.

I commit, Mr. Speaker, and I hope my colleagues will join me in this pledge, to push through legislation that will make the work of these visionary "Bills" a reality. We must pass our bill necessary to put the jurisdiction for this poisonous pile where it belongs, in the hands of the Department of Energy.

MILITARY FAMILY FOOD STAMP TAX CREDIT ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I wanted to come to the floor and talk about a bill that I introduced last year, H.R. 1055, the Military Family Food Stamp Tax Credit Act. I have approximately 61 of my colleagues on both sides, Republican and Democrat, who have signed this bill.

Mr. Speaker, there are probably as many as 12,000 men and women in uniform who are willing to die for this country today that are having to live on food stamps. I think that is unacceptable and deplorable that any person that is willing to die for this country would have to be on food stamps.

So we looked at how we could help those in the military that are on food stamps, and we came up with the suggestion from several different sources that probably the best thing we could do was to provide a $500 tax credit for men and women in uniform.

Mr. Speaker, I bring this photograph of a Marine in my district. This Marine is getting ready to deploy for Bosnia for 6 months. We can see standing on his feet a beautiful little girl, and in his arms a new baby girl. And I looked at this photograph, it was in the Raleigh paper in my State of North Carolina, and it has so much meaning and depth to it that I thought I would have it blown up so that I could bring it to the floor of the House or take it to a committee to remind my colleagues who make the decision on how we pay our military and make the decisions on what we can do to help those men and women in uniform on food stamps.

We have approximately 60 percent of the men and women that serve this Nation that, again, are willing to die for this Nation, that are married. I think this family from Camp Lejeune getting ready to deploy shows just how fortunate we are to have men and women who have families that are willing to serve this Nation.

When I looked at the fact that we in Congress last year passed $15 billion in foreign aid for countries overseas, and I realize that we have to have foreign aid and we should have northern aid, but I think we could reduce it, frankly. I think I voted against that bill because we need to take care of the American people first. And we certainly need to take care of those in the military that are serving this Nation.

Then I looked at the fact that the President recommended that we eliminate the debt of $5 billion to 36 countries that owe the American taxpayer $5 billion. So, therefore, we have excused that debt. I look at what we have spent in Bosnia already, somewhere around $5 billion. I look at what we spent in Yugoslavia last year, $11 billion.

Mr. Speaker, to help 12,000 men and women in uniform on food stamps would only cost $59 million over 10 years.

I want to also make the point that this Congress last year passed an Omnibus Budget bill that had in excess of $13 billion in pork barrel spending. Mr. Speaker, I say again, those of us who have the privilege to serve in the House and Senate, we must work together to help get these men and women off food stamps that are willing to die for this country.

Mr. Špeaker, I plan to come to the floor on a regular basis until the leadership, both Republican and Democrat, work together to help get these men and women off food stamps, because they are so important to the defense of this Nation. We owe them everything that we can give them and especially to help get them off food stamps. I thank the Members of this House, Republican and Democrat, who have cosponsored this bill, H.R. 1055, the Military Family Food Stamp Tax Credit Act; and I hope this year we, as a Congress, will do what is necessary to get these men and women off food stamps.

1345

MARKING 4TH ANNIVERSARY OF CROWN CENTRAL PETROLEUM LOCKOUT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LaTourette). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Green) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I share the concern of my colleague from North Carolina on our military pay. Hopefully we made a down payment last year and will continue it this year.

My concern, Mr. Speaker and Members, and what I want to talk about today is, we are marking the 4th anniversary for one of the longest lockouts in U.S. history that is in my district. On February 5, 1996, the management of Crown Central Petroleum ordered the union workers to leave its refinery in Pasadena, Texas, and lock the gates behind them. By the next day, the company had replaced all 252 union members with lower cost and inexperienced temporary workers.

What caused the lockout? The only possible reason is Crown Petroleum wanted to break the union. During the contract negotiations, the union stated they had no intentions of striking. In fact, Crown Petroleum's reaction was to order an immediate lockout. Before negotiators for the employees had a chance to react, they were escorted out of the refinery. Crown tried to justify the lockout by saying that they had committed actions of sabotage, and yet Crown later invited these same employees to return to work provided they agreed to the company's demands.

The concern I have, Mr. Speaker, is if someone did sabotage the plant, they need to be prosecuted under the laws, but management should not use it as a reason for not allowing these people to come back to work who had been there many years.

If they agreed to the company demands, it would have been an elimination of over 40 percent of the work force. These highly sensitive jobs, that are now performed by temporary and less skilled workers, were issues at the negotiating table that were very contentious

The company was trying to rewrite the entire union contract and eliminate a third of the employees and eliminate the worker protections for older employees. The employees were willing to negotiate, but Crown not only wanted to have their demands met, they opted for a lockout. Four years, Mr. Speaker, is one of the longest lockouts in history.

Four years later, friends and neighbors, my constituents, are still not working. Their lives have been radically changed for standing up and insisting on safe and fair working conditions. Employees like Marshall Norman, a 16 year employee, had his medical insurance canceled while his wife was pregnant and his daughter was diagnosed with leukemia.

Another constituent, John Grant, served his country in Vietnam and as a Marine guard in the White House. He has only worked sporadically since the lockout. Hardy Smith, a 25 year employee, lost his credit and went from making $18 an hour to $6.50 an hour. Henry Godbolt, a 24-year employee, is struggling to make ends meet for his family, including paying for his daughter's education. He is working odd jobs like mowing lawns and washing windows.

These are good and honest hard working Americans who are being forced to struggle because their employer locked them out. We need to have an end to this madness.

For the last year, Mr. Speaker, I have tried to work and offer whatever assistance my office could to sit down and work it out between the plant owners and the employees, and we have not had any luck. Despite many years of hardships and fighting back to reclaim their lives, the Paper, Allied-Industrial and Chemical Energy Workers Union, PACE, which used to be the Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers Union, is the union that represents these locked out workers, along with the AFL-CIO, and they have been boycotting the Crown gasoline stations and convenience stores.

The locked out workers have traveled to Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama to promote this boycott and have urged union members as well as other concerned citizens to support them. The boycott, or the "Don't Buy Crown Gasoline" campaign is endorsed by groups ranging from the Rainbow/ Push Coalition to the Environmental Defense Fund to the Labor Union Women. This is only a small sample of a long list of groups who have supported this boycott.

With the employees' hard work and persistence, along with the support of many groups and individuals, the boycott has been successful in decreasing the sales of Crown gasoline and its products. The boycott may become our only hope to bring reason back to this issue. I would hope that the management and the owners of Crown would realize that not only my constituents but their former employees want to work and want to do a good job and make that a producing plant. Let us end this nightmare.

Mr. Speaker, this Saturday, February 5, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., many of these hard working employees will mark the 4th anniversary of the lock-out at the PACE local union at 704 Pasadena Freeway.

Mr. Speaker, I was home last week and met with a few of the members, and, believe me, I bought this T-shirt because they could not afford to give it to us, but it talks about trying to end the lockout at Crown Petroleum. I would hope that through this special order today that we could encourage not only the employees but also the management to sit down and get these people back to work.

ELIMINATE MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY IN A RESPONSIBLE WAY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MINGE. Mr. Speaker, we have returned here in the year 2000 to begin our work as the U.S. House of Representatives. One of the first bills that we will take up will come on, I expect, February 14. The purpose of this is to address a problem which has been a festering issue in our Tax Code; namely, the so-called marriage tax penalty.

There has been widespread recognition that it simply is unfair and is inconsistent with public policy to have a Tax Code which places a burden on folks that choose to get married. Now, as we analyze the Tax Code, there is both a marriage bonus and a marriage tax penalty. It is a fairly complex issue as we work through it. And trying to root it out of the Tax Code is not necessarily easy nor is it inexpensive.

The Committee on Ways and Means, I understand, has marked up this bill today and will be sending it to the floor for consideration by Valentine's Day. That certainly is an appropriate or a fitting tribute to marriage as an institution in our Nation, but I submit that this is premature in terms of consideration on the floor of the House in the sense that there is a fairly high price tag to the bill that is coming from the Ways and Means, and we still have not had any opportunity to formulate a budget for operations here in the year 2000.

I would like to just briefly, for the benefit of my colleagues, point out some of the budget considerations that make this an awkward and inappropriate time here in February to take up the marriage tax penalty legislation.

This pie chart shows the available surplus according to the last estimates or projections from the Congressional Budget Office. The total surplus over the next 10 years, if there is an absolute freeze on spending, is projected to be $1.8 trillion. Now, this is a happy state of affairs. It is a surplus without using the Social Security Trust Fund and the money that is accumulating there.

Of this surplus, over $1 trillion would be used if we simply continued the programs that we have had, with the caps but with adjustments for inflation. So this leaves us with a more modest surplus, which is actually around $837 billion. And this again is over a 10-year period of time. It would be the green and the orange portions of this pie chart.

Now, a portion of even that $837 billion is not necessarily as easily available as we would like to think, and that is because we have certain tax provisions which are set to expire. And if they are to be extended, and we have routinely extended these tax provisions for the benefit of taxpayers in our societv: and if we consider the farm aid legislation, which is expected to be passed this year and succeeding years, as it has been in previous years, about $230 billion, or more than 25 percent of the $837 billion, would be used for those tax benefit pieces of legislation and for farm aid legislation. This leaves us with the green portion, about $607 billion.

Even that has a certain duplicitous character to it because it fails to recognize that about $200 billion of the green portion is actually a surplus that is being generated in the Medicare trust fund.

Now, we have all taken a fairly solemn pledge that we will not go into the Social Security Trust Fund to finance government expenditures or to finance tax reduction that Social Security has to be protected from that type of invasion. But I submit that if we are hearing from our hospitals and other health care providers at home, we are preparing ourselves to make a parallel commitment to the Medicare program. Medicare is financially more precarious than Social Security, and we certainly have thousands and thousands of health care providers around the country that have been sharing with us the struggle that they are going through with the cutbacks that have been made in financing Medicare.
So I would submit that there are sev-

So I would submit that there are several hundred billion dollars there that is also unavailable. So what I would urge my colleagues to do is to make sure that we responsibly deal with the marriage tax penalty legislation so that we do not somehow handicap ourselves in developing a proper budget.

ELIMINATING THE MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. McIntosh) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, my topic today will be exactly the topic that the gentleman prior to me spoke about, the elimination of the marriage tax penalty. And, in a way, I am glad he came and spoke to us about that, because the point he made is we have to do this within the context of a balanced budget. But he talked about a surplus of $1.8 trillion over the next 10 years. The bill that is being marked up today in committee, which is a bipartisan bill, the Weller-McIntosh-Danner Marriage Penalty Elimination Bill, that will impact that budget only by one-tenth of that projected surplus, or $180 billion.

So I say to my colleagues that I disagree with the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE). We must move forward now, in fact, we should have done it yesterday, to eliminate this marriage penalty in our Tax Code.

Now, there are organized lobbies for all the other things he mentioned. There are organized lobbies for payments to hospitals, payments to farmers; there are organized lobbies for tax credits to businesses; there are organized lobbies that petition us daily to spend money on all of that reflected on his pie chart. But there are no organized lobbies here in Washington saying protect families from having to pay an additional burden on their taxes.

I want to thank my cosponsors, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Weller) and the gentlewoman from Missouri (Mrs. Danner), for helping me to create the bipartisan momentum so that this Congress now can finally do something for those families. We do not have to wait. We should not wait. We know what needs to get done.

Now, let me share with my colleagues during this hour some of the complex parts of this marriage penalty, and then I want to also introduce some of our friends and colleagues who have been supporters of it. But I want to start this with a reflection of 3 years ago. Three years ago this month I received a letter that changed my career in Congress. It was a letter from a constituent of mine talking about how the marriage penalty affected her and urging me to do something about it. And that changed my priorities on what I was going to fight for here in Washington, and I have been fighting to eliminate that marriage penalty really ever since I got that letter.

So I want to share with my colleagues now, 3 years later, what a young lady from my Congressional District, a young lady named Sharon Mallory, wrote to me that got me thinking about our priorities here. She said, "Dear Representative McIntosh: My boyfriend, Darryl Pierce, and I have been living together for quite some time. We would very much like to get married. We both work at the Ford Electronics in Connersville." It is a factory there. "We both make less than $10 an hour, however, we try to work overtime whenever it is available, and also Darryl does some farming on the side."

1400

So my colleagues can see Sharon and Darryl are your typical middle-class working family. She goes on to say, "I can't tell you how disgusted we both are over this tax issue. If we get married, not only would I forfeit my $900 tax refund check, we would be writing a check to the IRS for $2,800. This amount was figured for us by an accountant at the local H&R Block office in New Castle.

"Now, there is nothing right about this. After we continually hear government preach to us about family values. Nothing new about the hypocrites in Washington." As my colleagues can see, Sharon had some harsh words for us here, "Why don't we do away with the current tax system? It is old and outdated, antiquated.

"The flat tax is the most sensible method to use, and no one is being penalized; everyone would be treated the same. I don't understand how the government can ask such questions as are you single? Are you married? Do you have any dependents? Employers, bankers, realtors and creditors are forbidden by law to ask these questions. The same should apply to the government."

This is what really got my attention, I have to share with my colleagues when I read this letter, "Darryl and I would very much like to be married. And I must say it broke our hearts when we found out we cannot afford it. We hope some day, some day, the government will allow us to get married by not penalizing us, Sharon Mallory and Darryl Pierce."

As I said, that letter changed my life, because it changed the priorities that I have in working here in Washington. I brought Sharon and Darryl out here to a hearing a few years ago. They shared with my colleagues the penalty that is stopping them from getting married. They shared with the Speaker the plight they had. He became a cosponsor of our bill.

My fondest hope is when I return home after this session of Congress I can get together with Sharon and Darryl and say we did it; we eliminated the marriage penalty tax for you and married couples all over this country.

Now, let me introduce a gentleman who has been waiting very patiently today to join us in this special order, a colleague of mine who has a lot of experience and wisdom about how this process works.

I yield to the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. Skeen) to talk about this issue.

(Mr. SKEEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SKEEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding to me to speak in support of H.R. 6, the Marriage Tax Penalty Relief Act of the year 2000.

Americans, I think, have spoken loud and clear on this issue. I have heard from several of my constituents in Southern New Mexico who feel that the current tax on married couples is blatantly unfair.

During their marriage ceremony. couples say "I do" to a lifetime of love and devotion, not higher taxes.

The institution of marriage is the foundation of our country's past, its present, and its future. It is hard to imagine our Nation having a tax code and structure which unfairly taxes those who get married and have a family. That is not right, and it is very unfair.

It is time to end the marriage tax penalty. In fact, our current Tax Code punishes working couples by pushing them into higher tax brackets, taxing the income of the second wage earner at a much higher rate than individuals who are unmarried.

On average, this penalty amounts to almost $1,400 per year, more than enough to pay for a ROTH or Education IRA account, buy a family computer with an Internet highway ramp, pay some mortgage payments on the family home, or buy important necessities for the family home such as clothes and food

This unfair tax most often hits middle-income Americans, people who earn from $25,000 per year to $75,000 per year.

In the State of the Union message to Congress last week, the President proposed abolishing this tax over the next 10 years. Folks, our families cannot wait that long.

Mr. Speaker, by acting now, we will prevent even more working couples from being punished in the future. By acting now, we will help working couples keep more of their own money, each year helping American families make their dream come true.

By acting now, it will end this unfair tax which penalizes married couples.

I have already added my strong support to the Marriage Tax Penalty Relief Act of 2000. I call for all of my colleagues to support this bill as soon as it reaches the floor of the House of Representatives.

We can do no less to right this wrong. I thank the gentleman for the time he has yielded and for the interest he has shown in letting young people be young people, but married, and for strengthening this country.

Mr. McINTOSH. I thank the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. SKEEN) and thank him for his support of this bill. It means a lot to me.

Mr. SKEEN. It is a pleasure.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, let me also yield to a colleague of mine. Although, we are on opposite sides of the aisle, and that sometimes means you do not get to work closely together with each other, but someone who I have come to admire greatly. We shared an office down the hall from each other.

I know in her heart she cares about people. She cares about families. She has been good enough to join us as one of the lead cosponsors on this bill, making it a strong bipartisan bill.

I yield to the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. DANNER).

(Ms. DANNER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Speaker, first of all, I would like to thank my colleague for the courtesy of asking me to be the Democrat lead cosponsor. I am pleased to be able to do that because I feel very strongly about this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I know that other speakers have talked about this issue. we have heard several already, about the benefits of eliminating the marriage tax penalty.

Today, I would like to share with my colleagues and with the public Missouri's experience, my home State's experience, and, indeed, Missouri's leadership on this issue.

My colleague, the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. Skeen) mentioned marriage and taking the vows. When the minister utters that phrase "for better or worse," although the couple does not realize it at the time, that phrase applies to how they are going to file their State and Federal income tax. Obviously, they are thinking of something else at that moment in time. But that will come home to haunt them. I am afraid, "the better or worse" with regard to the tax issue. For some taxpayers, it is better than for others.

These are the couples who file in a State which, like my home State of Missouri, permit married couples to file separately on the same tax form.

Despite the loss of revenue that has been mentioned before when people are not paying in as singles but paying in as a married couple, once again, my State of Missouri has consistently been able to refund money to those who pay State income tax.

Missouri is known, I think many of my colleagues know, as the "Show Me" State. And I think it has shown the Federal Government that there should be and is fairness and equity in the way our State income tax system addresses the issue of taxes levied upon married couples.

Married couples filing in Missouri have two options. They can file jointly or separately, using whichever option imposes the least amount of taxes upon their income. That is, I think, as it should be.

Many years ago, Missouri's General Assembly, where I served proudly as a State senator for 10 years, so I know a bit about Missouri's General Assembly, gave couples relief from the marriage penalty; and last year our State still provided income tax payers with a refund.

I believe that the Congress can and should do no less than to afford those who pay the Federal income tax the same option that Missourians have, to file a tax return that causes them the least amount of taxes to be paid.

Once again, I thank my colleague. It is a pleasure to join with him in this very, very worthwhile piece of legislation, a piece of legislation that he and I and literally hundreds of our colleagues who have signed onto H.R. 6 know will benefit the people that we serve

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman from Missouri (Ms. DANNER) for her leadership on this.

There were a lot of skeptics when we first started. Does it make a difference? How can we fit it into the budget with our other priorities? And she was instrumental in helping us build a bipartisan body of support for that and convincing many of our colleagues that this needs to be a priority.

I suppose I am quite confident that her leadership on that helped this year with the President's support for Congress doing something to eliminate the marriage penalty, and that is important that we get everybody behind this.

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Speaker, one of the things that I was very excited about in the State of the Union address was the fact that the President did include that. And so, it shows you, it shows me, it shows our colleagues that we have some mutual interests there and that what we have to do is bring these two bills, his ideas and our ideas, to some kind of a mutual agreement that we can all support.

And I have been reading several things lately that indicate to me that the executive branch is very, very willing to work with those of us in the legislative branch to accomplish that purpose.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for her comments, and her participation helps enormously.

I know what it is like to be working in an executive branch and to wonder if a Congress controlled by the other party is doing what is right or trying to do something that gets a political advantage. And I think when they see leadership from someone of her stature and her caring on the same political side, they realize that this is what is good for Americans, it is not about politics; it is what is good for Americans.

So her leadership in that way will bring a lot towards getting this bill passed, and I thank her for that.

Ms. DANNER. Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to work with my colleague on this.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, let me share with my colleagues and folks who may be watching. They may ask themselves, how did we get into this position of having a marriage penalty tax. Surely, Congress never voted to suddenly start taxing marriage. And to be honest, it happened very quietly, very subtly that people did not really focus on around here.

For 30 years now, there have been two things in the Tax Code that ultimately effectively created that marriage penalty tax. The first is that there is a difference in the amount they get as a standard deduction.

If they are two single people, both of them earning a living, living together, not living together, they get a standard deduction that is about $4,200. We would think that would double, so it would be $8,500. If they get married, they only qualify for a standard deduction of $7,100. So there is a $1,400 difference in the amount they get as a standard deduction off their taxes. That means they end up paying more taxes when they get married.

The second way that this marriage penalty has crept into our tax system is through the bracket creep. If they are both earning, say, $30,000, the gentleman may be a carpenter who earns $30,000 and he marries a young lady who is a teacher who is earning $30,000, they both pay as single people in the 15 percent bracket. That is how much their tax burden is, 15 percent of their income after they adjust for the deductions. If they get married, they get thrown into a higher tax bracket because then they are making $60,000 to-

And because those brackets are not doubled, where if they are two people they get twice as much before they get kicked into the next bracket, they effectively pay a higher rate on their combined income just because they are married. Those are the two major ways in which our Tax Code ends up inflicting a marriage penalty tax.

Now it affects 40 million families in this country. It affects them on average by asking them to pay $1,400 more just because they are married.

Let me share with my colleagues what does our bill do, what H.R. 6, the Weller-McIntosh-Danner bill, does to relieve that marriage penalty.

First, it immediately equalizes that difference on the standard deduction. So that, beginning in 2001, if they are a single person, their standard deduction is $4.250. If they are married and filing jointly, they get double that for two people. No difference, no marriage penalty in the standard deduction starting immediately.

Second, it phases in a gradual increase in the 15-percent bracket cutoff. So that when they are married, they do not ultimately get thrown into a higher tax bracket, at least for that 15-percent level.

That, by the way, helps all taxpayers. Because we all pay some of our income at 15 percent. If we make more, we pay the rest of it at a higher rate.

The third thing it does is it increases the beginning point of a phase-out of the marriage penalty for those working families that are at the low end of the scale and they are getting earned income tax credit.

What it essentially does is, say they are a single dad and they are working in a low-income wage, minimum wage, and they are a single mom also making minimum wage, if they start a new family together, they will give up what the Government helps them with earned income tax credit. And a lot of times they go from receiving an earned income tax credit to paying more in income taxes.

1415

So it is a true burden on those who can least afford to pay it. Our bill gives them an extra $2,000 of leeway in that program on the earned income tax

Mr. Speaker, I notice that one of our colleagues who has been a strong supporter of eliminating the marriage penalty and sits on the important committee to help us make sure we can afford to do that in the rest of the budget is with us.

I yield to my good friend and colleague the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON).

Mr. KINGSTON. I thank the gentleman from Indiana for yielding to me. I want to commend him on his work for what he is doing. It is amazing that in this society where our government has all kinds of rules, regulations and taxes to encourage and to discourage certain behaviors, that here we have really a frontal assault on married couples all over America, saying that if you get married, we are going to penalize you. If you want to just live together, it is no problem, we will not increase your taxes. It is ridiculous when we think about the importance of marriage as an institution for our economic stability, for our social stability, really as a way to continue the race, if you will, marriage is a profound institution. Here we are talking about two potential plans. One plan basically almost gives you a car payment, a monthly car payment, $210. The kind of bombs that I drive, you cannot even get financing on, but if you could $210 would certainly pay for it. The other one is good for maybe 3 months' worth of house payments, to say to a married couple, we want to help you and here is one worthy place because you are going to need a house, to put that money, that makes sense. Serving 28 million people versus 9 million people. I think that it is proper for us to aggressively try to help as many married couples as possible and not try to take the Washington approach where, yes, if you vote for this lesser plan, you can leave Washington and you can go back home to the Rotary clubs and the Kiwanis clubs, the folks in your church and synagogue and say, "Oh, yeah, I'm a strong supporter of the marriage tax penalty," because technically you can. But there is an old expression we used to say in the Georgia legislature, it is like holding up a little fish and saying, "Hold still, little fish, I'm not going to do anything but gut you." That is what the administration and the Democrat proposal does. Yes, it is a marriage tax penalty relief bill but it basically guts the entire intent of it. It does not help a broad spectrum of people and it does not give any real help to those it can. It is ironic that those who a few years ago were laughing at our $500 per child tax credit, saying what is that going to do to help people, now want to have full election-year bragging rights on a $210 tax credit. It does not make sense. I plan to support the legislation that the gentleman from Indiana is cosponsoring. I encourage him to keep up the good

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, let me share with the gentleman from Georgia and my colleagues the chart that I have next to me that really shows the differences between the President's proposal and our Republican congressional proposal. Let me say at the outset, I was happy that President Clinton put that on the agenda in the State of the Union address, because now we have gotten over the threshold question on both sides of the aisle, of do we do anything to help married families. For a long time, there was resistance for doing anything about this. So it is a step in the right direction that President Clinton has come forward with this proposal. But I think we could do much better.

On the left-hand side of this chart, we see the details about President Clinton's marriage penalty plan. It is $45 billion in tax relief over 10 years. The Republican plan is four times that, $180 billion in tax relief. To put that in context, as the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. MINGE) pointed out, over those same 10 years, we have 10 times that, or $1.8 trillion in projected surplus. So this is a drop in the bucket when we are dealing with the surpluses we are expecting here in Washington.

The second line shows that the total relief is limited, it is capped in the President's proposal to $210 per couple. That is less than half of that $500 per child tax credit that we passed, and much less than half of the total burden that the average married couple will pay when they are hit with a marriage penalty.

The Republican plan gives relief up to $1,400 per couple, roughly seven times the President's does if you are at that maximum level.

The third point is that if you look at what the President has done, he has eliminated just one of the two major causes of the marriage penalty. His proposal is to double that standard deduction, eliminate that first problem we talked about. But he does nothing about the brackets, and the fact that you get thrown into a higher tax bracket when both the husband and the wife are working and earning income. He also does not do it right away. He phases it in over that 10-year period. Our proposal is to eliminate that standard deduction problem immediately, so that in 2001, there is no difference, if you are married or if you are single, everybody gets the same standard deduction. Then we go beyond that and we start to tackle that problem of the differences in the tax brackets, so that over the 10-year period, we have equalized the difference in the 15 percent tax bracket. That is the tax bracket that most working middleclass Americans have to pay. Right now if you are a working-class family where you are earning $30,000, the husband is, and the wife is earning another $30,000, you would stay in that 15 percent bracket if you were divorced or if you were single, two individual people, but the minute you get married, part of your income gets thrown into that higher bracket, the 28 percent bracket. You start to be treated as somebody in the upper middle class would be taxed. And so we would phase out that difference and allow everybody to have relief from that tax bracket creep.

The fourth point on the chart shows who would be helped by this. Under the President's plan, only those individuals who use the short form, or the 1040-EZ form, would benefit. By the way, they do not benefit by very much at the beginning. Ten years from now, they get the full benefit when that standard deduction is equalized. Our proposal helps all families who are hit with the marriage penalty, whether you use a short form, an EZ form or whether you deduct. A lot of homeowners have to deduct, because that is the only way that they can take that deduction for interest on their mortgage. Under the President's plan, they do not qualify for any kind of marriage penalty relief. Under our plan, they would get equal treatment. And then the bottom line there shows how many people would be benefited by the two plans. Under President Clinton's plan, only 9 million Americans would be affected by this.

I am not saying that is bad. We need to help those 9 million Americans, and I am delighted that the President has put this on the table in his State of the Union address. But our plan goes way beyond that. We help three times the number of Americans who are married, earning a living, trying to save for the future for their children. The reason I brought this chart out here is it is easy to see for me, by far, the best plan is the one that we are going to be producing on the floor of this House, the Weller-McIntosh-Danner bill that the committee is marking up. We need to step back and look at this and say, Let's do something real. Let's not do a kind of cheap thrills, down-and-dirty version where we get political credit. Let's do something that helps people who are being hit with this marriage penalty.

What does all of this mean for the average family? We talk about budgets of $1.8 trillion, we talk about an impact of a bill of $180 billion over 10 years. But what does it really mean for an average family in this country? The average family with two incomes, when our bill is fully in force, will have $1,400 more in income. That is 3 months of child care. That is a semester of tuition at a community college. It is 4 months of the typical car payment. It can buy school clothes and supplies for children. It can pay for a family vacation. It helps with escalating health insurance premiums. For some families it lets them keep a down payment. I got some e-mails from people who told me when they were first married, they had saved two or $3,000, and then they did their taxes and suddenly found they had to pay all of that in extra income taxes and so their savings account that they had saved up hoping that they would be able to afford a down payment on a house as a newly married young couple suddenly was not there for them anymore. This tax relief will make a big difference on the bottom line for the average American family.

The marriage penalty is particularly bad for women. I often think of it as the women's discriminatory tax provision, because what happens is for many women in our society, they begin with a career, and then at some point in their life, they start a family. They make a choice. Some people do not have this choice but many make the choice of scaling back, or stopping working for a period of time to raise their children. When their children are old enough, they may want to go back into the workforce and have a chance once again to pick up their careers. Today if they do that and this marriage penalty tax is on the books, they get hit effectively with a 50 percent marginal income tax rate, because all of that tax comes out of that additional income.

The demographic statistics from CBO show that almost three-quarters of America's families are two-earner couples. Obviously a record number of women are deciding to pursue their careers and enter the workforce. It is wrong that we have a tax provision, an antiquated tax provision that penalizes and discriminates against women who want to contribute to their family income.

The marriage penalty is also disproportionately burdensome for minorities. African Americans are particularly devastated by the marriage tax. The marriage penalty occurs when both spouses work and make roughly the same income. Women in black families have historically entered the workforce in much larger numbers and earn a much larger percentage of the household income than society as a whole. In fact, 73 percent of the married black women are breadwinners and black women contribute approximately 40 percent of their household income. That is a much higher percentage than the typical family in our society. They are paying more taxes when they are married and contributing to that family income. Our legislation will bring fairness back to that, so that minorities will not be hit with this unfair marriage penalty tax.

One of the things that people ask me is, "Will it make a difference? You have talked about needing the strength in families and one of the reasons you bring this bill to the House floor is so that we can strengthen families, but does it make a difference? You cannot tell me that $1,400 really makes a difference in what people do in their family life."

I wish that were the case. Statistics show that financial difficulty is the number one reason for breakdowns of families in our society.

I want to share with my colleagues an e-mail that I received. I have received over 1,000 of them since we started 3 years ago on this crusade to eliminate the marriage penalty tax. This one came from a young man from Virginia, a young man named Tom Flynn. I will share with my colleagues what he had to say about this:

'I am a very concerned young taxpayer who has been married for just over 2 years." He wrote this in 1997. "I am 26 years old and my wife turns 25 in December. I cannot accurately estimate how much my wife and I have been penalized by the marriage penalty since we just got married. However, judging by the information you have posted on your website, we certainly fit the category of those affected by this outrage. My wife and I will now make approximately $70,000 in combined income. We are trying to save as much as we can but it seems that we just get by paying bill after bill month after month. Regardless, taxes are killing my wife and I and many other young people just like us. We hope to start a family next year. But are afraid to do so because we feel we are not financially ready. When is Congress going to keep its promise and deliver some real tax relief to people like my wife and

One of the things that we also received is an e-mail from a young gentleman, also from Virginia, Andrew Barrington, who described what happened in his life. They, too, had been married a little over 2 years. He goes on to say in his e-mail, "We grew up together and began dating when we were 18. After dating for 3 years, we decided that the next natural step in our lives together would be to get married. I cannot tell you how much joy that has brought us. But I must tell you that the tax penalty that was inflicted on us has been the only real source of pain that our marriage has suffered. The first year we paid taxes and it was bad, but we were able to get on top of it and pay for those taxes. The second year was more, and more than we could have ever expected, and we are still paying the government monthly for it. It scares us what next year will hold for us as far as taxes are concerned. By the time we finish paying this year's taxes, we will need to start all over again. If last year is any indication, it will only get worse. Thank you for doing everything you can to eliminate the marriage penalty tax.'

1430

I can share with you other e-mails. One young lady wrote to me that her family, which was now a broken family, her marriage that did not succeed, she thinks the problems started back when they first got married and they did not realize they would get hit with this financial penalty and they started fighting about finances. So she said, "You know, in a way, the marriage penalty probably was the reason our marriage broke apart." It was a sad email to read.

This is something we must take seriously. Strong families are key to the success in our future and our community. It is no coincidence that the marriage penalty went into the books 30 years ago and that we have seen a steady decline in families and the health of families in this country ever since.

For the average American today, the probability if they get married of that marriage succeeding and not ending in divorce is less than 50 percent. Chances are, 60 percent of the time that marriage will fall apart.

The percentage of married couples households has plummeted from 71 percent of all households to just barely over half the households, 55 percent. It is bad for single moms. You see more of them; it is bad for single dads who have this pressure. And I have nothing against single parents.

By the way, my mom raised me and my two sisters and a brother as a single mom when my dad passed away from cancer when I was just 5 years old. I have a lot of admiration for her and women like her struggling to raise their families. But we knew life would have been better if my father would have been there, and I think everybody in that circumstance knows if you can have an intact family, you can do more for your children.

Why put an extra burden in the Tax Code to families who are already struggling to raise children?

Let me share with you what some of the studies show happens when the family breaks apart. It is bad for parents. They have a shorter life expectancy; they have a greater incidence of disease, suicide and accidental mortality. The death rate among men who are non-smokers but divorced is almost the same as married men who smoke, and we recognize around here that smoking is deadly. But in fact the statistics show that for men who are divorced and do not smoke, they are at as great a risk as men who smoke in a married family.

Overall, the premature death rate is four times higher among divorced white men than that amount for their married counterparts. They are in worse physical health. They develop greater incidence of lung disease and psychiatric disorder. They are at lower economic well-being.

Many divorced adults, particularly

Many divorced adults, particularly young mothers, are thrown into poverty. Today, 50 percent of the single-mother families are poor. In stark contrast, only 8 percent of families with a mother and dad are in the category labeled poor. The average income for a single-mother family is $13,000; $13,000 for average families with a single mom raising their children. As I said, I know what it is to be there; and I know the sacrifices those moms are making for those children, because my mom did the same thing for me.

But contrast that to the average income in a married household with a mother and father. The average is $40,000 in this country. Now, it is even more problematic when you look at what is happening to our children, because children from broken families are four times more likely to use drugs; they are three times more likely to commit suicide; and they are twice as likely to drop out of school.

Children of broken families end up being more likely to engage in violent crimes. Seventy-two percent of the young people who end up murdering someone grew up without a father. Sixty percent of America's rapists grew up in homes without a father. Seventy percent of the juveniles in State reform institutions grew up with a single-parent or no-parent family. The influence of good families is critical for these young people.

Again I ask the question, why should we make it harder for those families to stay together by taxing them more when they are married? It is wrong, and we must do something to eliminate that in our Tax Code.

Statistics show that alcohol and drug abuse goes way up. The absence of a father, reports the Study on Fatherhood, from the home, affects significantly the behavior of adolescents, and results in greater use of alcohol and marijuana.

Suicide, 75 percent of the teenage suicides occur in households that have been a broken household.

Poorer school performance, at least one-third of children experiencing a parental separation demonstrate a significant decline in academic performance. Fatherless children, as I mentioned earlier, are twice as likely to drop out of school.

Welfare dependency, over 50 percent of the new welfare cases are due to births of unmarried women. Ninety percent of children on welfare are from homes with only one parent.

So we can see this is having a devastating impact upon our young people, our children. And if it just helps one family to meet the bills they need to pay, to be able to stay together through tough times, if the love that they started out with when a young man and young woman get married starts to dim because they are struggling to pay the bills and struggling to make ends meet, if we can just help one of those families make it through those tough times, to realize that a strong family will bring them numerous joys and stick together and help their children, then this bill would have been worth every penny of the $180 billion in revenue that stays in the hands of the American taxpaver.

By the way, I would share with my colleagues that the American people are with us. There may not be a lot of lobbyists here in Washington beating down our doors saying "eliminate the marriage penalty tax," and there may be a lot of competition for other people for the tax dollars that we collect here, but 85 percent of the Americans polled say the marriage penalty tax is unfair, sixty-one percent think it is extremely unfair, and 80 percent of the Americans favor elimination of the marriage penalty tax.

We need to listen to those voices. They know intuitively that we have to strengthen families in this country. They know intuitively it is wrong for married couples to pay more in taxes just because they are married. They know in their hearts that we must do better and we must eliminate the marriage penalty tax.

I want to now turn to one of my colleagues who has been a strong advocate of strengthening families in the Congress, a gentleman who has been a leader in the Family Caucus, a strong supporter of our bill to eliminate the marriage penalty tax, my good friend and colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Florida. I thank the gentleman, and I appreciate his yielding. I definitely want to thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. McIntosh) for the leadership he has provided on this critical issue.

We have had several Members of our Republican Conference who have led the charge, so to speak. The gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) is one, and the other one that comes to my mind is yourself.

The Tax Code, as everybody knows, is very complicated and so is knowing how to repair it so that it is not a Tax Code that encourages people to live out of wedlock, how do we repair it to make sure it is not a Tax Code that discourages marriage. I first became interested in this subject actually years before I got elected to the U.S. House when I was still practicing medicine, and I had people coming in my office who I knew were living together physically as husband and wife, but they had different last names, not because the wife chose to keep her maiden name, but because they had actually not married.

Some of these individuals were senior citizens, which was another thing that amazed me. They knew when I talked to them about this issue, they knew they were setting a bad example for their grandchildren, living out of wedlock together, but always it was the same story. "If we get married, our tax burden would go up so much, that we live together out of wedlock."

To me, in my opinion, this is a moral issue. This is an example of how our laws in Washington encourage a bad thing. It is actually morally wrong to have a Tax Code that discourages marriage and encourages people to live out of wedlock, especially people who say they would like to get married, they want to get married, but they do not do so because of the code.

One of the biggest reasons why we have so many features in our Tax Code like this is this desire on the part of so many liberals in this city to create a Tax Code where tax breaks and tax benefits phase out if you make above $60,000, or above $50,000, or above $80,000 or above $100,000, this desire to always tax the rich. One of the consequences of that is if you get two working people who come together, they are immediately in this tax bracket where all of their tax benefits or breaks disappear and they are better off not getting married

One of the things that has been shown repeatedly by psychologists is that one of the things that is most critical and most helpful to the proper intellectual development of a child, growing up in a family, in terms of are they going to stay off of drugs, are they going to have good academic performance, are they going to do well in school, is a healthy, stable, married family environment, that they have a mother and a father in the home, and that every social scientist and every politician who follows these statistics, they all go around saying that we need to encourage marriage and we need to do what we can to support marriage in the United States, but yet they will stand by idly and do nothing about this problem.

I want to address this proposal by the President. This proposal by the President is a day late and a dollar short, as far as I am concerned. No, it is not a day late, it is 8 years late; and it is not a dollar short, it is about $10 or $20 billion a year short.

His proposal just does not go far enough. It is going to help some people, true; but for an awful lot of people, they will continue to have the same choice put before them. It will be get married and pay higher taxes or live together out of wedlock.

The Republican GOP plan is real marriage penalty relief. The President's plan is, again, the same sort of status quo. The marriage penalty will remain for millions of Americans. Actually, the difference is about 17 million Americans.

Our proposal is easily paid for. We are looking at close to $2 trillion of surplus over the next 10 years, and this proposal is going to cost $180 billion over the next 10 years. Essentially one-tenth of the surplus would go to correcting this measure in our Tax Code.

It is a good plan. I believe the President should sign this. I commend again the gentleman from Indiana for his work in this area. I believe ultimately the President will sign this once the public begins to see and analyze the features of this bill and how it really would be good for our Nation to get rid of these problems in the Tax Code.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for his good work and strong support of this bill. I appreciate it enormously, working with the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, let me now yield time to a good friend of mine, also from Indiana, we have worked in the trenches together on this and many projects, my good friend the gentleman from the 4th District of Indiana (Mr. SOUDER).

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Indiana. It was great to see our friend from Florida. This is such a Midwestern value; it is great to see it is a Southern value as well, along with the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. MCINTOSH). But this has support from all across America because of the inequity of the Tax Code.

I want to congratulate my colleague for his leadership and persistence in pushing this and not going away when people said, no, we want to do other things, and his persistence, along with the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Weller). If this indeed happens and with the President at least paying lip service to part of it, this is the year when this may actually happen, and it will be a great crowning achievement as you go back to lead us in Indiana.

Let me mention a couple of things. There are different types of tax cuts. Some types of tax cuts are oriented toward economic growth, where we try to say how can we keep our interest rates down, how can we keep our inflation down, how can we keep this tremendous growth going in the economy. Capital gains, investment tax credits, targeted inheritance tax relief, those things keep our economy going, but some tax relief is necessary because they plain flat out are unfair.

1445

In the marriage penalty, one of the problems here is that it just discriminates; it is a lack of equity and it catches and punishes one group of people and benefits another group of people.

There are several letters and e-mails here to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. McIntosh), but I wanted to read a couple of them because sometimes when we hear statements like the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Weldon) made, well, people might make decisions on their marriage based on the take liability, one goes, oh, no, come on, you right-wingers, you are just making this kind of stuff up.

But here is one from Montana to Dave that says, my husband and I both work. We are 50 and 55 years old. This is a second marriage for both of us. We delayed our marriage for a number of years because of the tax consequences and lived together. It caused a great deal of stress and lots of anguish. My son and his fiance simply have not married also for tax reasons. They would take a large tax hit if they married.

Do not say it is some hypothetical, paranoia, conservative thing. There are actually people in America, right or wrong, who are making these decisions because tax policy does have actual consequences on people's behavior because it is a lot of money. They are trying to figure out what can we do to start a home, how can we buy a house, how can we get the best education for our kids, how can we get good health care, and then the government hammers you if you get married. It can cause people at the margin to do that.

Here is another letter to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. McIntosh): My husband and I are both 81 years old. Before we married our lawyers advised us that we would be better off financially to remain single. We listened but did not heed. The full impact of what we were told struck us after our accountant computed our income tax. With approximately the same income, my portion of the tax increased from $4,200 to $10,000. My husband's portion of the tax also increased dramatically.

We were shocked, to say the least, and have actually considered an annulment or divorce to avoid a recurrence of this situation.

This one is from Florida. I have had people call me on the phone, come up to meetings, tell me they have calculated how much they would have saved if they had each been single. They not only would have gotten tax benefits, they might have been eligible for Pell grants for college as opposed to having to fund their college. There are all sorts of government programs that we have that are really penalties for being married as opposed to being single, but the marriage penalty is the most flagrant. We have it built into our Tax Code.

Let me make one other comment here. I find one of the greatest ironies in America is right now is how we deal with the marriage penalty. The President appears to want to cap this to only let some people benefit from it. The irony with this is the primary beneficiary in the marriage penalty relief is going to be working women. Because of the way families are traditionally structured, it is that additional income that is really getting whacked, and they are making decisions of how many hours they work, how much they are in the workforce.

The President in the State of the Union address came down here, talked about comparable worth. He talked about how women were not making as much as men in society, talked about glass ceilings. The marriage penalty is a glass ceiling on the income of women in America; and if you cap that, as the President has proposed to do, rather than the type of legislation that the gentleman from Indiana MCINTOSH) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER) are proposing to do, what you are doing is saying it is okay for women to make a certain amount of money but after someone adds a second income to their family, or in cases of some families where the woman is the primary and the highest income and the man adds a second income, after a certain point we are going to tax them differently than if they stayed single.

This has inadvertently become one of the primary reasons we have a glass ceiling in this country. It is one of the primary reasons why there are earning differentials. The last thing we need to do is change the marriage penalty to make it more progressive, to put a penalty on those who are actually advancing. One does not want to be in an employer situation where they have an outstanding employee and they say, well, would you like to work additional hours, we would like to promote you and that person says, but the marriage penalty is capped. If I go up in a promotion here in this firm, my husband and my income will go over a certain point and all of a sudden we will be taxed differently.

If we start capping the marriage penalty as some are proposing to do, while it might sound good the fact is that the bias is being reinforced not only against marriage in this society, but it is also discriminating in the most degree against working women who are advancing to higher income salaries.

I thought one of our primary goals was to open up opportunities for women in this country to move up in the corporate ladder, to earn higher incomes. In most cases, not all cases but in most cases, the marriage penalty is a disincentive to women often who have not had the opportunities, who have gone back to school, who have been homemakers, they come back in and all of a sudden get whacked with this additional tax. So the irony is the double standard in the same speech of capping the marriage penalty and also talking about how to open up opportunities for women and all Americans to increase their salary.

You cannot talk out of one side of your mouth one way and out of the other side of your mouth the other. So I thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. McIntosh) not only for his leadership in the marriage penalty but for having an elimination of the marriage penalty that is actually responsive to the type of concerns that Americans are having and that would really promote sexual equity in this country and marriage equity in this country rather than the other types of forms of this bill that lead to other unintended consequences.

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) for his comments.

I would say to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. SOUDER) that his point is really telling. The President wants to get political bonus points by saying let us get rid of the glass ceiling and political bonus points by saying let us have something on the marriage penalty, but when we look at it, the way he does it, by putting that cap on there he undoes everything we would want to do to help women who want to pursue their careers.

I appreciate the gentleman making that point to our colleagues and to the people listening.

Let me close today by saying it was 3 years ago, almost to the day, when Sharon Mallory took out pen to paper and sent me this letter that launched my effort in eliminating the marriage penalty tax. I have teamed up with a great colleague, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. WELLER), and another great colleague, the gentlewoman Missouri (Ms. DANNER). This has become a bipartisan effort, because everyone realizes it is the right thing to do. There was a chart that was out here earlier, I wish I still had it, that showed how that $1.8 trillion surplus could break up over the next 10 years. Half of it went to spending. There are plenty of lobbyists here in Washington who come and tell us how we can spend more money.

Another portion went for tax breaks to business and others, and farmers and others. There are plenty of lobbyists here to tell us how we can give tax breaks for businesses and other interests, but there was no place on that pie chart for families, because there are no lobbyists in Washington for families.

Families are spending their money paying their bills, helping their children to save for college, trying to make ends meet, planning for the future, trying to provide a vacation for their family. We need to do what is right even when there are no lobbyists, so that people like Sharon Mallory and Darryl Pierce do not have to write their congressman and say: Darryl and I would very much like to be married, and I must say it broke our hearts when we found out we cannot afford it because of the marriage penalty tax.

It will be a great day in this institution when we get rid of the marriage penalty tax once and for all.

I urge my colleagues to join us in the coming week as the leadership brings forth this bill so we can send a message and pass into law something that would be good for families throughout this land, the marriage penalty elimination bill.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. DEFAZIO (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for February 3 through February 15 on account of official business.

Mr. VENTO (at the request of Mr. GEPHARDT) for today on account of personal reasons.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

(The following Members (at the request of Ms. SLAUGHTER) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. FILNER, for 5 minutes, today.

Mr. Green of Texas, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Member (at the request of Mr. LoBiondo) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. Burton of Indiana, for 5 minutes, February 8.

(The following Member (at his own request) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

Mr. MINGE, for 5 minutes, today.

(The following Member (at his own request) to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous material:)

 $\mbox{Mr. Jones of North Carolina, for 5}\ \mbox{minutes, today.}$

SENATE ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The SPEAKER announced his signature to an enrolled bill of the Senate of the following title:

S. 1733. An act to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to provide for a national standard of interoperability and portability applicable to electronic food stamp benefit transactions.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. McINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 2 o'clock and 54 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow at 10 a.m.

EXPENDITURE REPORTS CONCERNING OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL

Reports concerning the foreign currencies and U.S. dollars utilized for official foreign travel during the third and fourth quarters of 1999 by Committees of the House of Representatives, as well as a consolidated report of foreign currencies and U.S. dollars utilized for Speaker-authorized official travel during fourth quarter of 1999, pursuant to Public Law 95–384, and for miscellaneous groups in connection with official foreign travel during the calendar year 1999 are as follows:

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REFORM, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1 AND SEPT. 30, 1999

	I	Date		Per d	em 1	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Total	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Constance Morella	8/7	8/13	Armenia		800.00		660.00		70.00
James Wilson	8/19	8/21	Italy		372.00
Marc Chretien	8/19	8/21	Italy		372.00
James Schuman	8/19	8/21	Italý		372.00
David Rappallo	8/19	8/21	Italý		372.00
Hon. John Mica	8/28	8/30	Slovakia		589.00		60.00		52.00
	8/31	9/2	Romania		548.00		55.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Bulgaria		593.00		60.00		72.00
	9/4	9/6	Hungary		603.00		90.00		52.00
	9/6	9/7	Netherlands		207.00		30.00		32.00
Hon, Bernie Sanders	8/28	8/30	Slovakia		589.00		60.00		52.00
	8/31	9/2	Romania		548.00		55.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Bulgaria		593.00		60.00		72.00
	9/4	9/6	Hungary		603.00		90.00		52.00
	9/6	9/7	Netherlands		207.00		30.00		32.00
Sharon Pinkerton	8/28	8/30	Slovakia		589.00		60.00		52.00
Oldfoli i lilliotoli	8/31	9/2	Romania		548.00		55.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Bulgaria		593.00		60.00		72.00
	9/4	9/6	Hungary		603.00		90.00		52.00
	9/6	9/7	Hungary Netherlands		207.00		30.00		32.00
Sean Littlefield	8/28	8/30	Olassa Isla		589.00		60.00		52.00
Seall Littlefield	8/31	9/2			548.00		55.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Romania		593.00		60.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Bulgaria				90.00		52.00
	9/4		Hungary		603.00
Warden Land	9/6	9/7	Netherlands		207.00		30.00		32.00
Kevin Long	8/28	8/30	Slovakia		589.00		60.00		52.00
	8/31	9/2	Romania		548.00		55.00		72.00
	9/2	9/4	Bulgaria		593.00		60.00		72.00
	9/4	9/6	Hungary		603.00		90.00		52.00
	9/6	9/7	Netherlands		207.00		30.00		32.00
Committee total					14,988.00		2,135.00		1,470.00		18,593.00

DAN BURTON, Chairman, Nov. 1, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1 AND SEPT. 30, 1999

	[Date		Per	diem ¹	Transp	oortation	Other p	ourposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

Please Note: If there were no expenditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at right to so indicate and return. \boxtimes

BILL THOMAS, Chairman, Aug. 1, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1 AND SEPT. 30, 1999

	I	Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Stephanie Peters	8/7	8/11	Egypt		904.00						904.00
	8/12	8/16	Azerbaijan		1,468.00						1,468.00
	8/16	8/19	Russia		1,062.00						1.062.00
	8/19	8/23			1.366.00						1.366.0
Commercial airfaire					,		6,748.62				6,748.62
Lees Duck	8/8	8/11			687.00						687.00
Leon Buck	0/0	0/11	Egypt		007.00		4 000 00
Commercial airfaire	0.00	0/10	N		041.00		4,888.66				4,888.60
Hon. Henry J. Hyde	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(3)				641.00
	8/10	8/13	Germany		718.00						718.00
	8/13	8/15	France		536.00						536.00
	8/15	8/17	Netherlands		528.00						528.00
Hon. Melvin L. Watt	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(3)				641.00
	8/10	8/13	Germany		718.00						718.00
	8/13	8/15	France		536.00						536.00
	8/15	8/17	Netherlands		528.00						528.00
Thomas Mooney	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(4)				641.00
montas mooney	8/10	8/13	Germany		718.00		()				718.00
	8/13	8/14			268.00						268.00
Commercial sinfaire	0/13	0/14	France		200.00		721.00
Commercial airfaire	0.00	0/10	N		041.00		731.90				731.90
Mitch Glazier	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(3)				641.00
	8/10	8/13	Germany		718.00						718.00
	8/13	8/15	France		536.00						536.00
	8/15	8/17	Netherlands		528.00						528.00
Robert Jones	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(3)				641.00
	8/10	8/13	Germany		718.00						718.00
	8/13	8/15	France		536.00						536.00
	8/15	8/17	Netherlands		528.00						528.00
Judy Wolverton	8/8	8/10	Norway		641.00		(3)				641.00
Judy Wolverton	8/10	8/13			718.00						718.00
	8/13	8/15	Germany		536.00						536.00
		8/17	France								528.00
Han Jahn Canuara Ir	8/15		Netherlands		528.00		/2\
Hon. John Conyers, Jr.	9/10	9/12	Haiti		183.00		(3)				183.00
Carl LeVan	9/10	9/12	Haiti		183.00		(3)				183.00
Committee total					19,586.00		12,369.18				31,955.18

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{If}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{lf}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.
 If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.
 Air transportation was provided by the Department of Defense.
 One-way air transportation was provided by the Department of Defense.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON THE JUDICIARY, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN AUG. 7 AND AUG. 17, 1999

	[Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Jesse L. Jackson, Jr	8/8 8/9 8/11 8/13 8/15	8/9 8/11 8/13 8/15 8/17	Norway Germany (Berlin) Germany (Munich) France Netherlands		276.00 254.00 232.00 227.00 247.00		(3) (3) (3) (3) (3)				276.00 254.00 232.00 227.00 247.00
Committee total					1,236.00						1,236.00

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.

JESSE L. JACKSON, Jr.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1 AND SEPT. 30, 1999

	[Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Roscoe Bartlett	8/8 8/10 8/13 8/15	8/10 8/13 8/15 8/17	Norway Germany France Netherlands		641.00 718.00 536.00 528.00		(3)				641.00 718.00 536.00 528.00
Committee total					2,423.00						2,423.00

F. JAMES SENSENBRENNER, Jr., Chairman, Nov. 4, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON STANDARDS OF OFFICIAL CONDUCT, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1, AND OCT. 31, 1999

		Date		Per	diem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other (ourposes	Tot	tal
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

LAMAR SMITH, Chairman.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, PERMANENT SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 1 AND SEPT. 30, 1999

	0)ate		Per d	liem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
John Stopher, Staff	7/4	7/8	Australia		1,045.00						1,045.00
							(3)
Merrell Moorhead, Staff	7/14	7/16	Europe		500.00						500.00
Commercial airfare							6,268.16				6,268.16
John Stopher, Staff	7/14	7/16	Europe		500.00		0.000.10				500.00
Commercial airfare	7/14	7/10	F				6,268.16				6,268.16
Beth Larson, Staff	7/14	7/16	Europe		500.00		0.000.10				500.00
Commercial airfare	0/10	0.00	F		070.00		6,268.16				6,268.16
John Mills, Staff	8/16 9/2	8/20 9/4	Europe		972.00 660.00						972.00 660.00
Commercial airfare	3/2	3/4	Europe		000.00		5.980.45				5,980.45
Beth Larson, Staff	8/8	8/27	Europo		5.150.00		.,				5,360.40
Commercial airfare		0/2/	Europe		3,130.00		6.633.71				6,633.71
Wyndee Parker, Staff	8/8	8/27	Europe		5.150.00		-,				5,150.00
Commercial airfare					.,		6.633.71				6,633.71
Patrick Murray, Staff	8/17	8/24	Europe		1,900.00		.,				1,900.00
Commercial airfare					,		5.885.91				5,885.91
Merrell Moorhead, Staff	8/17	8/24	Europe		1,900.00		.,				1,900.00
Commercial airfare	0/1/	0/24	сигорс		1,500.00		5.885.91				5,885.91
Jay Jakub, Staff	8/17	8/24	Europe		1.700.00		0,000.01				1,700.00
Commercial airfare			Luiopo				4,555.47				4,555.47
Committee total					19,977.00		54,379.64				74,356.64

PORTER GOSS. Nov. 19, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

	I	Date		Per d	liem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Frank Lucas	12/11	12/18	South Africa		з 400.00		(4)				400.00
			Botswana

² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³ Military air transportation.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³Military air transportation.

Please Note: If there were no expenditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at right to so indicate and return.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{lf}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.
 If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.
 Military air transportation.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999— Continued

	D	ate		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Collins Peterson	12/11	12/18	South Africa		³ 400.00		(4)				400.00
			Zimbabwe
			Botswana
Hon. Bob Schaffer	12/19	12/24	Russia		1,600.00		(4)				1,600.00
							2,672.78				2,672.78
			Ukraine
Committee total					2,400		2,672.78				5,072.78

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³Total per diem not including lodging costs which were not provided by the State Department. ⁴Military air transportation.

LARRY COMBEST, Chairman, Jan. 31, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

Arrival Departure Country Country Currency			Date		Per o	liem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
10/20 10/21 10/22 10/25 Peru 270.00 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country		equivalent or U.S.		equivalent or U.S.		equivalent or U.S.		U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Charles H. Taylor 10/25 10/26 Spain 273.00 (?) 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2 2	John T. Blazey II											825.00
Hon. Charles H. Taylor 10/25 10/25 Spain 273.00												270.00 263.00
Commercial airfare	Hon Charles H Taylor		10/26	Snain				. ,				(3) 273.00
Edward E. Lombard 10/22 10/26 Spain 1,365.00 1,365.00 1,365.00 4 10/28 10/	Commercial airfare			•								6,303.44
Commercial airfare	Edward E. Lombard	10/22										1,365.00
Commercial airfare												454.00
Commercial airfare 11/16 11/18 Canada 475,00 505,39 10,00 Commercial airfare 11/20 11/21 Moldova 225,00 505,39 52 22,00 11/21 11/24 Russia 1,143,00 11/24 11/25 Norway 276,00 70 11/24 11/25 Norway 276,00 70 70 70 70 70 70 70	0		10/30	Netherlands		541.00						541.00
Commercial airfare 11/20 11/21 Moldova 225.00 5.05.39				01-								5,035.31
Commercial airfare	KICHARO E. ETTORO			Canada						10.00		475.00 10.00
Hon. Robert E. Bud Cramer	Commercial cirtors											505.39
Hon. Marcy Kaptur		11/20	11/21	Moldova								225.00
Hon. Marcy Kaptur	Tion. Robert E. Dad Granici					1 143 00						1.143.00
Hon. Marcy Kaptur 11/21 11/23 Ukraine 532.00 55. 11/23 11/24 Russia 381.00 22 76.00												276.00
11/23 11/24 11/25 Norway 276.00 276.		11,2.	11,20					(4)				(4)
11/24 11/25 11/24 11/25 11/2	Hon. Marcy Kaptur	11/21	11/23	Ukraine								532.00
Unused per diem refunded to State				Russia								381.00
Commercial airfare		11/24	11/25	Norway								276.00
Hon. John P. Murtha						-11.00						-11.00
Cregory R. Dahlberg 11/19 11/21 Macedonia 200.00 (4)	Commercial airfare		11/01	Manadagia				0				0
Gregory R. Dahlberg 11/19 11/21 Macedonia 200.00 C	HON. JOHN P. MURTHA		11/21	Macedonia				(4)				200
Hon. Frank R. Wolf	Crogory P. Dahlborg	11/10	11/21	Macadania				(*)				200
Hon. Frank R. Wolf	diegory N. Dailiberg		11/21	Waccuonia
12/3 12/4 12/6 Guinea 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00 21 250.00	Hon Frank R Wolf		12/3	Renin				. ,				388.00
12/4 12/6 20/16				Ivory Coast								322.00
12/6 12/8 Sierra Leone 218.00 -387.2												250.00
Unused per diem refunded to State		12/6	12/8									218.00
Hon. Charles H. Taylor						-387.20						-387.20
Commercial airfare								5,138.09				5,138.09
Edward E. Lombard 11/28 12/4 Russia 2,300.00 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 5,703.85 9,803.75 9,904.00	Hon. Charles H. Taylor	11/28	12/4	Russia		2,300.00						2,300.00
Commercial airfare			10/4					.,				5,291.85
John G. Shank	Edward E. Lombard		12/4	Russia		,						2,300.00
Commercial airfare		11/20	10/2	Fount		004.00						5,703.85 904.00
Son T Blazey I 11/26 12/3 Thailand 1,500.00 1,500.			12/3	Едурі		904.00		4 2C2 E2				4.362.53
Commercial airfare 3,516.00 3,5 Cheryl Smith 11/26 12/3 Thailand 1,500.00 1,5 Commercial airfare 2,712.45 2,7 Hon. James T. Walsh 12/2 12/4 Northern Ireland 897.00 8		11/26	12/3	Thailand		1 500 00		,				1,500.00
Cheryl Smith 11/26 12/3 Thailand 1,500.00 2,712.45 <t< td=""><td></td><td></td><td>12/3</td><td>manana</td><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td><td></td><td>3,516.00</td></t<>			12/3	manana								3,516.00
Commercial airfare 2,712.45 2,7 Hon. James T. Walsh 12/2 12/4 Northern Ireland 897.00 88		11/26	12/3	Thailand		1.500.00						1.500.00
Hon. James T. Walsh			12,5			2,000.00						2.712.45
	Hon. James T. Walsh		12/4	Northern Ireland		897.00		,				897.00
								6,038.86				6,038.86
Committee total 17,879.80 44,607.77 10.00 62.41						17 879 80		44 607 77		10.00		62.497.57

1 Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.
 2 If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.
 3 Agency Aircraft (FAA).
 4 Military air transportation.

BILL YOUNG, Chairman, Jan. 27, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, SURVEYS AND INVESTIGATIONS STAFF, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

	-	Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Frederick A. Brugger	10/23	10/29	Korea		1 272 00		3,393.39		31.00		4 696 39
Gerald T. Coughlin	10/12	10/16	Mexico		976.50		1,828.23		49.23		2,853.38
Norman H. Gardner	10/07	10/10	Austria		451.00		4,890.28		12.10		5,353.38
Norman II. dardior	10/10	10/11	Croatia		280.00				12.10		280.00
	10/11	10/13	Pagnia		692.00						692.00
	10/13	10/14	Macedonia		120.00						120.00
	10/14	10/15	Carbia		178.75						178.75
	10/15	10/16	Albania		270.00						270.00
	10/16	10/18	Hungany		402.00						402.00
Norman H. Cardnar	11/14	11/19	India		1,209.50		C CEO 70				7,869.29
Norman H. Gardner	11/14	11/19	ladia.		1,209.50		6,659.79 6,659.79		100.47		7,005.25
Carroll L. Hauver	11/14	11/19	la di a		1,209.50		6,659.79		102.47 26.84
James A. Higham											7,896.13
Dennis K. Lutz	10/23	10/29	Korea		1,272.00		4,099.23		26.04		5,397.27
Robert Makay	10/12	10/16	Mexico		976.50		1,828.23		104.27		2,909.00
Robert J. Reitwiesner	10/23	10/29	Korea		1,272.00		3,396.39		72.82		4,741.21
R.W. Vandergrift, Jr	10/07	10/10	Austria		451.00		4,890.28		462.57		5,803.85

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS, SURVEYS AND INVESTIGATIONS STAFF, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999—Continued

	0	Date		Per d	iem 1	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
	10/10	10/11	Croatia		280.00						280.00
	10/11	10/13	Bosnia		692.00						692.00
	10/13	10/14	Macedonia		120.00						120.00
	10/14	10/15	Serbia		178.75						178.75
	10/15	10/16	Albania		270.00						270.00
	10/16	10/18	Hungary		402.00						402.00
	11/14	11/19	India		1,209.50		6,659.79		191.49		8,060.78
T. Peter Wyman	10/07	10/10	Austria		451.00		4,890.28		12.30		5,353.58
•	10/10	10/11	Croatia		280.00						280.00
	10/11	10/13	Doonio		692.00						692.00
	10/13	10/14	Macedonia		120.00						120.00
	10/14	10/15	Serbia		178.75						178.75
	10/15	10/16	Albania		270.00						270.00
	10/16	10/18	Hungary		402.00						402.00
	11/14	11/19	India		1,209.50		6,659.79		42.30		7,911.59
H.C. Young	10/23	10/29	Korea		1,272.00		3,933.33		51.81		5,257.14
Committee total					20,269.75		66,448.59		1,185.24		87,903.58

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.

BILL YOUNG, Chairman, Jan. 27, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON BANKING AND FINANCIAL SERVICES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

	Date			Per diem ¹		Transportation		Other (ourposes	To	tal
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

Please Note: If there were no expenditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at right to so indicate and return.

JIM LEACH, Chairman.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCTOBER 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

Name of Member or employee		Date		Per diem ¹		Transp	ortation	Other p	ourposes	Tot	tal
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

Please Note: If there were no expenditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at right to so indicate and return. 🗵

WAYNE STRUBLE.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON HOUSE ADMINISTRATION, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

		Date		Per	diem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	ourposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

Please Note: If there were no expenditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at the right to so indicate and return. 🖂

BILL THOMAS, Chairman, Jan. 24, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 17 AND NOV. 22, 1999

	[Date		Per diem ¹		Transpo	ortation	Other p	ourposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Dana Rohrabacker	11/18	11/22	Kuwait	277.7	887		5,586			277.7	6,473
Committee total					877		5,586				6,473

DANA ROHRABACHER, Dec. 22, 1999.

² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals

² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{If}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{lf}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON RULES, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 28 AND DEC. 8, 1999

	ı	Date		Per diem ¹		Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Tony P. Hall	11/29	12/08	England ³		1,484/00		6,773.49				8,257.49
Committee total					1,484/00		6,773.49				8,257.49

DAVID DREIER, Chairman, Jan. 26, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMITTEE ON SMALL BUSINESS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN SEPT. 1 AND JAN. 1, 2000

	Date			Per	diem ¹	Transportation		Other	ourposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²

FOR HOUSE COMMITTEES

Please Note: If there were no expeditures during the calendar quarter noted above, please check the box at right to so indicate and return.

JIM TALENT, Chairman, Jan. 24, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, COMMISSION ON SECURITY AND COOPERATION IN EUROPE, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN OCT. 1 AND DEC. 31, 1999

	!	Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Total	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
William Courtney		11/6	United States				6,207.79				6,207.79
	11/7 11/11	11/11	Turkey		4,278.00 155.00						4,278.00
	11/11	11/12 11/13	SerbiaSlovenia		174.00			•••••	•••••	•••••	155.00 174.00
	11/13	11/20	Turkey		1,622.30						1,622.30
Orest Deychakiwsky	10/27	10/26 11/3	United States		1.574.00		4,926.60				4,926.60
	11/6	11/3	Ukraine Turkey		1,122.20		2,792.32				1,574.00 3.914.52
	11/10	11/11	Belarus		146.00						146.00
John Finerty	10.00	12/7	United States				5,556.69				5,556.69
	12/8 12/16	12/16 12/18	Russia England		2,051.00 606.00			•••••			2,051.00 606.00
Chadwick R. Gore		12/3	United States				5,125.07				5,125.07
	12/4	12/9	Jordan		760.00						760.00
Robert Hand	10/27	10/26 11/2	United States		820.00		1,755.29				1,755.29 820.00
	10/2/	11/2	United States		020.00		2,695.54				2,695.54
	11/7	11/11	Turkey		1,098.20		2,000.01				1,098.20
	11/11	11/12	Serbia		407.00						407.00
	11/12	11/15 12/30	Macedonia United States		578.00		3,661.63				578.00 3,661.63
	12/30	1/5/	Croatia		820.00		3,001.03				820.00
00
Janice Helwig	10/1	11/7	Austria		3,696.63		516.27				4,212.90
	11/7 11/22	11/22 12/10	Turkey Austria		3,383.38 10,033.61						3,383.38 10,033.61
	12/10		United States				2,073.07				2,073.07
Karen Lord		12/9	United States		7,242.45						7,242.45
	12/10 12/11	12/11 12/13	England		314.93 849.65						314.93 849.65
	12/11	12/13	Uzbekistan Turkmenistan		570.17					•••••	570.17
	12/17	12/20	Azerbaijan		1,105.00						1,105.00
Ronald McNamara	11.77	11/6	United States				4,999.52				4,999.52
	11/7 11/10	11/10 11/11	Turkey Belarus		823.65 146.00			•••••			823.65 146.00
Michael Ochs	11/10	10/3	United States		140.00		7,069.20				7,069.20
	10/4	10/4	England		324.00						324.00
	10/5	10/12	Kazakstan		1,827.00		F 270 20				1,827.00
	10/26	10/25 11/3	United States		1,760.57		5,379.32	•••••			5,379.32 1,760.57
		12/9	United States				7,242.45				7,242.45
	12/10	12/11	England		388.00						388.00
	12/11 12/15	12/13 12/17	Uzbekistan Turkmenistan		849.00 405.00			•••••			849.00 405.00
	12/17	12/21	Azerbaijan		1,403.00						1,403.00
Erika Schlager		9/20	United States				4,927.83				4,927.83
Dorothy Douglas Toft	9/21	10/5 11/6	Austria United States		2,478.00		4 201 25				2,478.00 4,301.35
Dorothy Douglas Taft	11/7	11/11	Totalogo		1,006.36		4,301.35		188.23		1,194.59
	11/11	11/12	Serbia		133.23						133.23
	11/12	11/13	Slovenia		129.51						129.51
	12/8	12/7 12/11	United StatesRussia		523.33		6,497.52				6,497.52 523.33
	12/0	12/11	Uzbekistan		740.95						740.95
	12/15	12/18	Turkmenistan		384.00						384.00
Maureen Walsh	9/26	9/25 9/30	Unnited States Austria		574.00		4,630.41				4,630.41 574.00
	9/30	10/2	Austria		352.00						352.00
	12/8	12/7	United States				4,651.85				352.00
Danzasantational Funda 3	12/8	12/16	Russia		1,905.00				0.500.00		1,905.00
Representational Funds 3									2,580.00		2,580.00

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³England, Benin, Ivory Coast, Sierra Leone.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{If}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³Representational Funds for U.S. and Turkish NGOs in Istanbul, Turkey, Nov. 8, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE DELEGATION TO MOLDOVA, RUSSIA, AND OSLO, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 20 AND NOV. 25, 1999

	[Date		Per d	iem 1	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Curt Weldon (HASC)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Oslo		276.00
Hon. Nathan Deal (Commerce)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
Hon. Ed Royce (IR)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
•	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Norway		276.00
Hon. Jim Saxton (HASC)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Norway		276.00
Hon. Roscoe Bartlett (HASC)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Norway		276.00
Committee total					7,944.00						7,944.00
Hon. Bud Cramer (App.)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
топ ваа отапот утре,	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Oslo		276.00
Chris Frenze (JEC)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
(,	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
David Trachtenberg (HASC)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
()	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
Greg Wierzynski (Banking)	11/20	11/21	Moldova		225.00
	11/21	11/24	Russia		1,143.00
	11/24	11/25	Oslo		276.00
Committee total					6,024.00						6,024.00

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.

CURT WELDON, Dec. 1, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO KUWAIT, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 17 AND NOV. 22, 1999

		Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Al Sanoli	11/18	11/22	Kuwait	277.7	$887.00		$5,586.00			277.7	6,473.00
Committee total					887.00		5,586.00				6,473.00

AL SANTOLI, Dec. 22, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO ENGLAND, BENIN, IVORTY COAST, AND SIERRA LEONE, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 28 AND DEC. 8, 1999

	I	Date		Per diem ¹		Transpo	rtation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Richard Carne	11/29	12/8			1,484.00		6,386.73				7,870.73
Committee total					1,484.00		6,386.73				7,870.73

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.

TONY P. HALL, Jan. 17, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO BENIN, IVORY COAST, GUINEA, AND SIERRA LEONE, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 30 AND DEC. 8, 1999

	[Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Charles E. White		11/30	United States				5,138.09				5,138.09
	12/1	12/3	Benin		388.00						388.00
	12/3	12/4	Ivory Coast
	12/4	12/6	Guinea		250.00						250.00
	12/6	12/7	Sierra Leone		218.00						218.00
	12/8		United States
					$^{3}-270.00$						$^{3}-270.00$
Committee total					586.00		5,138.09				5,724.09

² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.
² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³Less $270.00 unused per diem returned to State Department.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO BENIN, IVORY COAST, GUINEA, AND SIERRA LEONE, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 30 AND DEC. 8, 1999

	0	Date		Per d	iem ¹	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tot	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Frank R. Wolf	12/1 12/3 12/4 12/6 12/8	11/30 12/3 12/4 12/6 12/7	United States Benin Ivory Coast Guinea Sierra Leone United States		388.00 322.00 250.00 218.00 3 - 387.20	5,138.09					5,138.09 388.00 322.00 250.00 218.00
Committee total					790.80						5,928.89

FRANK R. WOLF, Jan. 13, 2000.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO ENGLAND, EXPENDED BETWEEN DEC. 5 AND DEC. 9, 1999

	Date		Per diem 1		Transportation		Other purposes		Total
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Charles W. Johnson	12/5	12/9	England	952.50	1,524.00		584.00				2,108.00

CHARLES W. JOHNSON, Dec. 13, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, TRAVEL TO ENGLAND, EXPENDED BETWEEN DEC. 5 AND DEC. 9, 1999

	[Date		Per diem ¹ Transportation Of		Other p	r purposes Tot		al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Theodore J. Van Der Meid	12/5	12/9	England		1,524.00		584.00				2,108.00

THEODORE J. VAN DER MEID, Dec. 14, 1999.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, HOUSE DELEGATION TO O.S.C.E. PARLIAMENTARY ASSEMBLY TO RUSSIA, EXPENDED BETWEEN JULY 5 AND JULY 11, 1999

	[Date		Per d	iem 1	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Benjamin L. Cardin	7/5	7/11	Russia		1.792.00		(3)				1.792.00
Hon. John Cooksey	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1.792.00
Hon. Pat Danner	7/5	7/10	Russia		1,585.00		(3)				1.585.00
Hon. Alcee Hastings	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Steny Hoyer	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Hon. Marcy Kaptur	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Hon. Martin Sabo	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Matt Salmon	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Thomas Sawyer	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Louise Slaughter	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Christopher Smith	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. Cliff Stearns	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Hon. Thomas Tancredo	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Hon. John Tanner	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
William Courtney	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,792.00		(3)				1,792.00
Dr./RADM John Éisold	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
John Finerty	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		4,338.21				5,974.2
Mark Gage	7/5	7/09	Russia		1,274.00		5,041.13				6,315.13
Chadwick Gore	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		4,338.21				5,974.2
Marlene Kaufmann	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		² 2,161.04				3,797.0
Kathleen May	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Ronald McNamara	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Marilyn Owen	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		5,749.13				7,385.13
Scott Palmer	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Dorothy Taft	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		(3)				1,636.00
Fred Turner	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		4,338.21				5,974.21
Maureen Walsh	7/5	7/11	Russia		1,636.00		4,338.21				5,974.21
Committee total					45,475.00		30,304.14				75,779.14

CHRISTOPHER SMITH.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, NATO PARLIAMENTARY ASSEMBLY TO THE NETHERLANDS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 10 AND NOV. 16, 1999

		Date		Per d	liem ¹	Transp	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Doug Bereuter Hon. Tom Bliley	11/12 11/12	11/16 11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00 1,208.00						1,208.00 1,208.00

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³ Less $387.20 unused per diem returned to State Department.

 $^{^1\}mathrm{Per}$ diem constitutes lodging and meals. $^2\mathrm{lf}$ foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹ Per diem constitutes lodging and meals.
² If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended. ³Military air transportation.

REPORT OF EXPENDITURES FOR OFFICIAL FOREIGN TRAVEL, NATO PARLIAMENTARY ASSEMBLY TO THE NETHERLANDS, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, EXPENDED BETWEEN NOV. 10 AND NOV. 16, 1999—Continued

	[Date		Per d	iem 1	Transpo	ortation	Other p	urposes	Tota	al
Name of Member or employee	Arrival	Departure	Country	Foreign currency	U.S. dollar equivalent or U.S. currency ²
Hon. Sherwood Boehlert	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1.208.00						1.208.00
Hon. Marge Roukema	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Paul Gillmor	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Joel Hefley	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Vernon Ehlers	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Peter Deutsch	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Norm Sisisky	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Owen Pickett	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. John Tanner	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Pat Danner	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Jim Davis	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Hon. Scott McInnis	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Olson, Susan	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,478.00		2,590.20				4,068.20
Weber, Josephine	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,478.00		2,590.20				4,068.20
Herzberg, John	11/12	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Gross, Jason	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Doherty, Carol	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Evans, Robin	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Pedigo, Linda	11/11	11/16	Netherlands		1,208.00						1,208.00
Committee total					21,076.00		5,180.40				26,256.40

DOUG BEREUTER, Jan. 27, 2000.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

5950. A letter from the Congressional Review Coordinator, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting the Department's final rule-Change in Disease Status of Liechtenstein Because of BSE [Docket No. 98-119-2] received December 7, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

5951. A letter from the Secretary of Defense, transmitting notification that the Department of the Army plans to destroy lethal chemical warfare agent in the State of Utah, at Dugway Proving Ground, using the Munitions Management Device, Version 1 (MMD-1); to the Committee on Armed Serv-

5952. A letter from the Asssistant General Counsel for Regulations, Department of Housing and Urban Development, transmitting the Department's final rule—Requirements for Notification. Evaluation and Reduction of Lead-Based Paint Hazards in Housing Receiving Federal Assistance and Federally Owned Residential Property Being Sold; Correction [Docket No. FR-3482-C-07] (RIN: 2501-AB57) received January 28, 2000. pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

5953. A letter from the Secretary of Education, transmitting Final Regulations-State-administered Programs, pursuant to 20 U.S.C. 1232(f); to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

5954. A letter from the Attorney-Advisor, NHTSA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule-Federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards; Roof Crush Resistance [Docket No. 2000-6798] (RIN: 2127-AH74) received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5955. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule-FY 2000 UST Grant Guidance (AL)-received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5956. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule-FY 2000 UST/ LUST Program Grant Guidance-received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5957. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—FY99 N/A UST/ LUST Program Grant Guidance-received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5958. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Grant Guidance for Fiscal Year 2000-received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce

5959. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Public Water System Supervison Program Generic Grant Workplan Guidance—received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5960. A letter from the Special Assistant to the Bureau Chief, Mass Media Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting the Commission's final rule-Amendment of Parts 1, 21 and 74 to Enable Multipoint Distribution Service and Instructional Television Fixed Service Licensees to Engage in Fixed Two-Way Tranmissions [MM Docket No. 97-217 File No. RM-9060] Request For Declaratory Ruling on the Use of Digital Modulation by Multipoint Distribution Service and Instructional Television Fixed Service Stations—received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5961. A letter from the Senior Attorney, Common Carrier Bureau, Federal Communications Commission, transmitting the Commission's final rule—In the matter of petition for declaratory ruling and request for expedited action on the July 15, 1997 order of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission regarding area codes 412, 610, 215, and 717 [CC Docket No. 96-98 NSD File No. L-97-42] received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5962. A letter from the Director, Regulations and Management Staff, Food and Drug Administration, transmitting the Administration's final rule-Indirect Food Additives: Paper and Paperboard Components [Docket No. 86F-0312] received December 10, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

5963. A letter from the Acting Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Army's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to Saudi Arabia for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 00-24), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on International Relations

5964. A letter from the Acting Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Army's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to Israel for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 00-27), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on International Relations.

5965. A letter from the Acting Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Army's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to Finland for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 00-25), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on International Relations.

5966. A letter from the Acting Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Navy's proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to the Netherlands for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 00–26), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b): to the Committee on International Relations.

5967. A communication from the President of the United States, transmitting the 1999 Report to the Congress on the Loan Guarantees to Israel Program, pursuant to Public Law 102-391, section 601 (106 Stat. 1701); to the Committee on International Relations.

5968. A letter from the Assistant Legal Adviser for Treaty Affairs, Department of State, transmitting Copies of international agreements, other than treaties, entered into by the United States, pursuant to 1 U.S.C. 112b(a): to the Committee on International Relations.

5969. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting the forty-seventh report on the extent and disposition of United States contributions to international organizations for fiscal year 1998, pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 262a; to the Committee on International Relations.

5970. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. Act 13-216, Executive Service Residency Requirement received February 1, pursuant to D.C. Code section 233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

¹Per diem constitutes lodging and meals. ²If foreign currency is used, enter U.S. dollar equivalent; if U.S. currency is used, enter amount expended.

5971. A letter from the Chairman. Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. Act 13-215, "Closing of a Public Alley in Square 105, S.O. 97-245, Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5972. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-214, "Dedication of Land within Square 557 for Public Alley Purposes, S.O. 93-207, Act of 1999" received February 1, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5973. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-213, "Closing of a Public Alley in Square 486, S.O. 99-67, Act of 1999 received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5974. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-217, "Performance Rating Levels Temporary Amendment Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5975. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-218, "Management Supervisory Service Exclusion Temporary Amendment Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5976. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-219, "School Proximity Traffic Calming Temporary Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5977. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-235, "Housing Authority Temporary Amendment Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform

5978. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-220, "Citizens with Mental Retardation Substituted Consent for Health Care Decisions Temporary Amendment of 1999'' received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5979. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-236, "Advisory Neighborhood Commissions Management Control Temporary Amendment Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1): to the Committee on Government Reform

5980. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-224, "Dedication and Designation of Harry Thomas Way, N.E. Act of 1999" received February 1 2000 pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform

5981. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-237, "Disposal of District Owned Surplus Real Property Temporary Amendment Act of 1999'' received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1): to the Committee on Government Reform.

5982. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-233, "Closing of a Public Alley in Square 1942 S.O. 98-21, Act of 1999' received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5983. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-238, "Board of Trustees of the University of the District of Columbia Temporary Amendment Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5984. A letter from the Chairman, Council of the District of Columbia, transmitting a copy of D.C. ACT 13-234, "Technical Amendments Act of 1999" received February 1, 2000, pursuant to D.C. Code section 1-233(c)(1); to the Committee on Government Reform.

5985. A letter from the Deputy Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration's final rule-Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Steller Sea Lion Protection Measures for the Pollock Fisheries Off Alaska [Docket No. 000119015-0015-01; I.D. 010500A] (RIN: 0648-AM32) received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

5986. A letter from the Deputy Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration's final rule-Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Bycatch Rate Standards for the First Half of 2000 [I.D. 121399A] received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

5987. A letter from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration's final rule-Fisheries of the Caribbean, Gulf of Mexico, and South Atlantic; Coastal Migratory Pelagic Resources of the Gulf of Mexico and South Atlantic; Trip Limit Reduction [Docket No. 970930235-7235-01; I.D. 012100A] received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

5988. A letter from the Rules Administrator, Federal Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice, transmitting the Department's final rule-Victim and/or Witness Notification: State Custody Transfers [BOP-1085-F] (RIN: 1120-AA80) received December 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

5989. A letter from the Acting Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—Puget Sound Vessel Traffic Service [USCG-1999-6141] (RIN: 2115-AF92) received December 10, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5990. A letter from the Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting Department's final rule—Regulated Navigation Area, Eagle Harbor, Bainbridge Island, WA [CGD13-98-004] (RIN: 2115-AE84) received January 15, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(Å); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure

5991. A letter from the Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting Department's final rule—SAFETY ZONE: Lake Erie-Maumee River, Ohio [CGD 09-99-085] (RIN: 2115-AA97) received January 5, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5992. A letter from the Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule-SAFETY ZONE REGULATION; Fireworks Display, Willamette River, Portland Oregon [CGD13-99-046] (RIN: 2115-AA97) received January 5, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastruc-

5993. A letter from the Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule—SAFETY ZONE: Ambassador Construction Fireworks, Hudson River, Anchorage Channel [CGD01-99-180] (RIN: 2115-AA97) received January 5, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5994. A letter from the Program Analyst, FAA. Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department's final rule-Amendment of Class D Airspace; Jacksonville NAS, FL [Airspace Docket No. 99-ASO-26] received January 28, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5995. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule—Wetlands Grants 2000—Call for Proposals—received January 24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5996. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency's final rule-Wetlands Grants 2000-Grants Guidance-received Jan-24, 2000, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

5997. A letter from the Assistant Secretary of Defense, Department of Defense, transmitting a report on U.S. and international funding strategy and program priorities for the Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) Program (Enclosure); jointly to the Committees on Armed Services and International Relations.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

By Mr. DEFAZIO (for himself, Mr. WAL-DEN of Oregon, Mr. BLUMENAUER, Mr. Wu, and Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon):

H.R. 3567. A bill to amend title 28. United States Code, to provide for an additional place of holding court in the District of Oregon; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. KLECZKA:

H.R. 3568. A bill to restore the right of accrual basis taxpayers to use the installment method for Federal income tax purposes; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

By Mr. KUCINICH (for himself, Mr. Towns, Mr. LaTourette, Mr. Wax-MAN, and Mr. SANDERS):

H.R. 3569. A bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to establish an independent office to be known as the Office for Protection of Human Research Subjects, and to assign to such Office responsibility for administering regulations regarding the protection of human subjects in Federal search projects; to the Committee on Com-

> By Mr. LATOURETTE (for himself and Mr. PASCRELL):

H.R. 3570. A bill to amend the Federal Water Pollution Control Act to establish nationally consistent requirements for controlling urban wet weather flows, to provide additional funds to municipalities to meet those requirements, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

By Mrs. MALONEY of New York: H.R. 3571. A bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to provide housing loan benefits for the purchase of residential cooperative apartment units: to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

> By Mrs. MEEK of Florida (for herself, Mr. DIAZ-BALART, Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN, Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, and Mr. DEUTSCH):

H.R. 3572. A bill to extend the deadlines for applying for relief under section 902 of the Haitian Refugee Immigration Fairness Act of 1998 and section 202 of the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. SHOWS (for himself and Mr.

Norwood): H.R. 3573. A bill to restore health care coverage to retired members of the uniformed services; to the Committee on Government Reform, and in addition to the Committee on Armed Services, for a period to be subsequently determined by the Speaker, in each case for consideration of such provisions as fall within the jurisdiction of the committee concerned.

By Mr. TANCREDO (for himself and Mr. TRAFICANT):

H.R. 3574. A bill to provide for the improvement of the processing of claims for veterans compensation and pension, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs

By Mr. GILCHREST:

H. Res. 413. A resolution expressing suport for a National Foster Parents Day; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mrs. MALONEY of New York (for herself and Mrs. MORELLA):

H. Res. 414. A resolution expressing the sense of the House of Representatives supporting Federal funding directed toward human pluripotent stem cell research to further research into Parkinson's disease and other medical conditions; to the Committee on Commerce.

By Mrs. MINK of Hawaii:

H. Res. 415. A resolution expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that there should be established a National Ocean Day to recognize the significant role the ocean plays in the lives of the Nation's people and the important role the Nation's people must play in the continued life of the ocean; to the Committee on Resources.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 6: Mr. PICKETT, Mr. THOMAS, and Mr.

H.R. 72: Mr. BALLENGER, Mr. WAMP, and Mr. FOLEY

H.R. 82: Mr. STUPAK and Mr. HULSHOF.

H.R. 141: Mr. RANGEL.

H.R. 303: Mr. MANZULLO and Ms. SLAUGH-

H.R. 460: Mr. GEKAS.

H.R. 534: Ms. Lofgren.

H.R. 583: Mr. OWENS. H.R. 612: Mr. FATTAH.

H.R. 678: Mr. KUYKENDALL.

H.R. 721: Mr. BAKER. H.R. 783: Mr. MANZULLO.

H.R. 837: Ms. DELAURO, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. OWENS, and Mrs. MINK of Hawaii.

H.R. 876: Mr. KUYKENDALL.

H.R. 937: Mr. ISAKSON.

H.R. 1071: Ms. Pelosi.

H.R. 1111: Mr. HULSHOF. H.R. 1196: Mr. EVANS.

H.R. 1229: Mr. WISE.

H.R. 1248: Mr. WATT of North Carolina, Mr. ACKERMAN, and Mr. PASCRELL.

H.R. 1304: Mr. SHIMKUS.

H.R. 1432: Mr. BURTON of Indiana and Mr. MANZULLO.

H.R. 1456: Mr. DOOLEY of California.

H.R. 1577: Mr. TOOMEY.

H.R. 1601: Ms. Lee, Mrs. Roukema, Mr. ENGEL, Mr. GIBBONS, Mr. WALDEN of Oregon, Mr. VITTER, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. UDALL of Colorado, Mr. BOYD, Mr. OWENS, Mr. CANNON, and Mr. PACKARD.

H.R. 1621: Mr. OLVER, Ms. WOOLSEY, Mr. MCINTYRE, Mr. PAYNE, and Mr. OBEY.

H.R. 1671: Mr. EWING.

H.R. 1795: Ms. Woolsey, Mrs. Clayton, Ms. KILPATRICK, Mr. GEJDENSON, Mr. DEAL of Georgia, Mr. RANGEL, Mr. LAFALCE, Mr. PICKERING, Mr. PAYNE, Ms. MILLENDER-MCDONALD, Mr. WYNN, Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota, Mr. NADLER, and Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin.

H.R. 1870: Mr. GEKAS, Ms. DELAURO, Mr. GILMAN, and Mr. GUTIERREZ.

H.R. 1885: Mr. KOLBE, Mr. LATOURETTE, and Mr. Frank of Massachusetts.

H.R. 1893: Mr. MANZULLO.

H.R. 2060: Mr. LATOURETTE, Mr. BOUCHER, York, and Mr. Meeks of New BLUMENAUER.

H.R. 2129: Mr. KLINK, Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin, Mr. Stump, Mr. Barcia, Mr. Fossella, Mr. Lewis of Georgia, and Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin.

H.R. 2341: Mr. GILCHREST, Mr. TRAFICANT, and Mr. UDALL of Colorado.

H.R. 2382: Mr. GARY MILLER of California, Mr. PITTS, and Mr. BACA.

H.R. 2498: Mr. OXLEY.

H.R. 2538: Mr. QUINN, Mr. HALL of Ohio, Mr. HOLDEN, Mr. WYNN, and Mr. EVERETT.

H.R. 2611: Mr. MARTINEZ, Mr. PAUL, Mr. BACA, Mr. OWENS, and Mr. FATTAH.

H.R. 2686: Mr. WOLF.

H.R. 2697: Mr. SAXTON.

H.R. 2702: Mr. GREENWOOD.

H.R. 2774: Mr. GUTIERREZ.

H.R. 2901: Mr. LUCAS of Kentucky. H.R. 2966: Mr. GRAHAM and Mr. ORTIZ.

H.R. 3020: Mrs. McCarthy of New York.

H.R. 3059: Mr. ANDREWS and Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania.

H.R. 3083: Mr. BAIRD, Mrs. CLAYTON, Mr. STARK, and Mr. BLUMENAUER.

H.R. 3091: Mr. McNulty and Mr. Forbes.

H.R. 3115: Mr. WATKINS.

H.R. 3116: Mr. BEREUTER and Mr. PASCRELL.

H.R. 3161: Mr. HINCHEY.

H.R. 3193: Mr. MANZULLO.

H.R. 3235: Mr. ROTHMAN.

H.R. 3293: Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island, Mr. SMITH of Washington, Mr. BACHUS, Mr. GEKAS, and Mr. WEYGAND.

H.R. 3326: Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut and Mr. Gutierrez.

H.R. 3386: Mr. FROST, Mr. WAXMAN, and Mr. KUCINICH.

H.R. 3408: Mr. HINCHEY, Mr. LARGENT, and

Mr. Rodriguez. H.R. 3430: Mrs. Clayton, Mr. Kleczka, Ms. JACKSON-LEE OF TEXAS, Mr. HILLIARD, Mr. BACA, Mr. TOWNS, Mr. BROWN of Ohio, Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, Mr. WEYGAND, and Mr. DEUTSCH.

H.R. 3485: Mr. ROTHMAN.

H.R. 3504: Ms. Eddie Bernice Johnson of Texas and Ms. DEGETTE.

H.R. 3519: Ms. LEE and Ms. MILLENDER-McDonald.

H.R. 3543: Ms. SLAUGHTER and Mr. OLVER

H.R. 3552: Mr. DOOLITTLE and Mr. TRAFI-CANT.

H.R. 3564: Mr. KASICH.

H.J. Res. 53: Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland.

H.J. Res. 77: Mr. RADANOVICH and Mrs. BONO

H.J. Res. 86: Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut and Mr. ROTHMAN.

H. Con. Res. 152: Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas.

H. Res. 107: Mr. FORBES and Mr. BECERRA. H. Res. 389: Mr. BERMAN.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 1598: Mr. WEXLER.

of America

Congressional Record

Proceedings and debates of the 106^{th} congress, second session

Vol. 146

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 2, 2000

No. 7

Senate

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President protempore [Mr. Thurmond].

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Today's prayer will be offered by our guest Chaplain, Rev. Luis Leon, St. John's Episcopal Church, Washington, DC. He is a guest of Senator MARY LAN-DRIEU.

We are pleased to have you with us.

PRAYER

The guest Chaplain, Rev. Luis Leon, offered the following prayer:

Gracious God, who has given us this good land for our heritage, we humbly pray that we may always prove ourselves a people mindful of the grace You have granted us. Bless our land with honorable industry, sound learning, and faithful leadership. Save us from violence and discord, confusion and chaos, pride and arrogance. Defend our liberties and fashion into one Nation the good people brought here out of many lands and languages. Endue with a spirit of wisdom those to whom in Your name we entrust the authority of government, especially the President and the Congress of the United States, that there may be justice and mercy in this land. Strengthen our resolve to see fulfilled all hopes for a lasting peace among all nations. In a time of prosperity, fill our hearts with thankfulness, and in a day of trouble remind us that we still belong to You. All this we ask in Your name. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable ORRIN HATCH, a Senator from the State of Utah, led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all. RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ALLARD). Senator GRASSLEY is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, for the leader, I would like to give today's schedule

Today the Senate will resume consideration of the bankruptcy reform bill. Senator SCHUMER will be recognized to debate his amendments regarding safe harbor and clinic violence. There are several other amendments remaining, and those amendments will be debated throughout this morning's session.

All votes, including final passage, will be stacked and are expected to begin at approximately 12 o'clock noon. After disposition of the bankruptcy bill, the Senate is expected to begin consideration of the nomination of Alan Greenspan to continue as Chairman of the Federal Reserve

The leader thanks all Senators for their attention.

I yield the floor.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

BANKRUPTCY REFORM ACT OF 1999

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 625, which the clerk will report.

The senior assistant bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 625) to amend title 11, United States Code, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Schumer/Durbin amendment No. 2762, to modify the means test relating to safe harbor provisions.

Schumer amendment No. 2763, to ensure that debts incurred as a result of clinic violence are nondischargeable.

Feingold modified amendment No. 2748, to provide for an exception to a limitation on an automatic stay under section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, relating to evictions and similar proceedings to provide for the payment of rent that becomes due after the petition of a debtor is filed.

Levin amendment No. 2658, to provide for the nondischargeability of debts arising from firearm-related debts.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. If I could say to the acting majority leader, we do hope to finish the bankruptcy bill this morning. As I have indicated, we have Senators Feingold and Levin coming over shortly after 11 o'clock. It will take until 11 o'clock with what Senator Schumer has to work on.

I would also say that we want to make sure the record is clear; the leader was wondering about the vote that was originally scheduled on the nuclear waste motion to proceed, whether or not that needed to go forward. I want the record to reflect that the Senators from Nevada withdraw their objection and that the vote need not go forth.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I have been informed by staff that we will work on that agreement, and it seems that can be accomplished.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from New York, Mr. Schumer, is recognized to call up his amendments.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Chair.

First, I ask that the amendment be considered as read. It is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. To which amendment is the Senator referring?

Mr. SCHUMER. Amendment No. 2763. On the other amendment, I just inform my good friend from Iowa, we are trying to work out a compromise and we may not have to debate it—the one on the safe harbor.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We think we can.

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor.

Mr. SCHUMER. So we now call up amendment No. 2763, and if we cannot work out a compromise on the other, then I would reserve the right to bring it up.

AMENDMENT NO. 2763

(Purpose: To ensure that debts incurred as a result of clinic violence are nondischargeable)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Amendment No. 2763 is currently pending before the Senate.

The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New York [Mr. Schu-MER], for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. LEAHY, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. DURBIN, proposes an amendment numbered 2763.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 124, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:

SEC. 322. NONDISCHARGEABILITY OF DEBTS IN-CURRED THROUGH THE COMMIS-SION OF VIOLENCE AT CLINICS.

Section 523(a) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 224 of this Act, is amended—

- (1) in paragraph (18), by striking "or" at the end:
- (2) in paragraph (19)(B), by striking the period and inserting "; or"; and
 - (3) by adding at the end the following:
- "(20) that results from any judgment, order, consent order, or decree entered in any Federal or State court, or contained in any settlement agreement entered into by the debtor, including any damages, fine, penalty, citation, or attorney fee or cost owed by the debtor, arising from—
- "(A) an actual or potential action under section 248 of title 18;
- "(B) an actual or potential action under any Federal, State, or local law, the purpose of which is to protect—
- "(i) access to a health care facility, including a facility providing reproductive health services, as defined in section 248(e) of title 18 (referred to in this paragraph as a 'health care facility'); or
- "(ii) the provision of health services, including reproductive health services (referred to in this paragraph as 'health services'):
- "(C) an actual or potential action alleging the violation of any Federal, State, or local statutory or common law, including chapter 96 of title 18 and the Federal civil rights laws (including sections 1977 through 1980 of the Revised Statutes) that results from the debtor's actual, attempted, or alleged—
- "(i) harassment of, intimidation of, interference with, obstruction of, injury to, threat to, or violence against any person—
- "(I) because that person provides or has provided health services;
- "(II) because that person is or has been obtaining health services; or
- "(III) to deter that person, any other person, or a class of persons from obtaining or providing health services; or
- "(ii) damage or destruction of property of a health care facility; or
- "(D) an actual or alleged violation of a court order or injunction that protects access to a health care facility or the provision of health services."

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Senators SNOWE, REID, JEFFORDS, and KENNEDY be added as cosponsors.

The PRESIDÎNG OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I am offering this amendment along with

Senators Snowe and Reid, Jeffords, FEINSTEIN, LEAHY, MURRAY, KENNEDY, LAUTENBERG, and DURBIN to ensure justice is served for those who willfully and gleefully thumb their noses at clinic protection laws by feigning bankruptcy. This amendment makes debts incurred as a result of acts of clinic violence nondischargeable under the bankruptcy code, and it does this clearly and unequivocally. In other words, this amendment will hold the perpetrators of clinic violence responsible for the damage they incur when they imperil, through either violence or intimidation, a woman's legal right to choose

The history of this amendment goes back several years. Before 1994, a woman's right to choose, guarded carefully by the Supreme Court, was imperiled. That is because a small and radical minority sought to intimidate, to harass, and ultimately commit violence against clinics that offered women their right, their constitutional right for an abortion.

The chart tells the story. Acts of violence were way up, to 437. It reached its peak in 1993. Acts of disruption went to 3,379 and blockades, including arrests, went to 3,885. In many parts of this country a constitutional right—whether one agrees with it or not—was being prohibited by a very small minority who believed their view was more important than our democratically chosen, American people chosen view.

As a result, this body, in a fine moment, gathered together and said the rule of law must prevail whatever our views, pro-choice or pro-life. I was sponsor of the FACE Act in the House. Senator Kennedy was the sponsor of the FACE Act in the Senate. Very simply, it said this kind of violence and intimidation had to stop. The major tool it used was to give these beleaguered clinics the right to sue those who committed violence.

It was a proud moment on the floor of this body when, with strong bipartisan support and strong support across pro-choice and pro-life lines, this amendment was agreed to, 69–30, in 1994. It was a proud moment for me in the House when I joined with my friend, Congressman Henry Hyde—perhaps the leading voice of true conviction on the pro-life side—to support this amendment. Congressman Hyde knew that America depended on the rule of law.

The act had dramatic effects. If you look at the statistics, acts of violence went down, from 437 in 1993 to 113 in 1998. Similarly, acts of disruption went down, from 3,379 down to 2,600. The law was working. But, unfortunately, that extreme few has found a new way to avoid the law and threaten the kind of stasis, the kind of peace, the kind of coming together we had found in this body. What they have done is, when they get a judgment against the type of violence depicted here, they declare bankruptcy and the law cannot be enforced against them.

Randal Terry has $1.6 million in judgments against him. So far not a nickel has been collected. Flip Benham brags he will never pay a cent.

Perhaps the most extreme is the case of the Nuremberg Files, which has. today, its 1-year anniversary of a jury verdict of $109 million against those who put it together. The Nuremberg Files was a group of extremists. They published the names of doctors and accused them of murder. They published the addresses where their children went to school. Their graphic on the computer had blood dripping from the pictures of the doctors. They published the name of Dr. Slepian, who was murdered, and after a doctor was injured they put the name in gray. After a doctor was killed, as in Dr. Slepian's case, from my State of New York, up in Buffalo, they put an X through the name.

Because of their activities, because of the "wanted" posters, where three doctors were killed once they put out "wanted" posters, a Federal court in Oregon urged the judgment against them. That judgment, the jury verdict, was 1 year ago today.

What did the defendants in that case do? The judge knew they would try to clean themselves of their assets and divest them. So the judge ordered them not to divest themselves of their assets. In each case, 2 or 3 days before they were to come to the court for a disposition of how they were going to pay their fine, they went back to their home States and declared bankruptcy. This horrible, horrible situation was compounded by the use of a bankruptcy law that no one in this body or anywhere else intended to be for that purpose.

This is what the attorney for the defendants in the Nuremberg Files case said:

The jury charge in this case created a negligence standard for threats. The charge on punitive damages embraces reckless or malicious conduct and my understanding is that reckless conduct does not preclude a discharge in bankruptcy.

Anyone who says our present laws cover this horrible situation and the many others like it ought to listen to the very lawyer in the Nuremberg Files case.

So no money has been collected, not only from the Nuremberg Files defendants but from all the others who are laughing at our law. They have gone back to their States and now the whole issue will be litigated again. Because we do not have a law, they will debate again whether the conduct was reckless—which is what the lawyers claim the jury verdict called for—or whether it was violent, in which case it would be covered by present law.

So the reason we are here today, the reason this vote has been so contested, is because a major tenet of our democracy is at stake—the rule of law. We talked about the rule of law last year at this time in this Chamber. If there was ever a case that cried out for Democrats and Republicans coming together, for pro-choice and pro-life people coming together, it is this very case.

Let me answer a few questions that have been brought up about this amendment. First, is this a move by the pro-choice movement to move the goalposts? Absolutely not. My lead cosponsor on the Democratic side, Senator Reid, is probably the foremost advocate on the pro-life side on our side. I respect his view. Henry Hyde supported the FACE law. Others who disagree with my view on choice have also come to support FACE and the amendment. It is not pro-life or pro-choice, it is pro rule of law. It is pro-American.

Second, some say it is already covered by the willful and malicious exception in the bankruptcy law. It is true that if there is a willful, intentional, malicious tort, it might be covered by the bankruptcy law. But it would have to go to each bankruptcy court, as in the Nuremberg Files case, after the judgment. Without our statute, it would have to go back to each bankruptcy court in the State and be litigated. Then there would be one determination or another.

But what about these types of cases? What about situations where there is reckless conduct but not malicious conduct? The lawyer in the Nuremberg Files matter—clearly conduct we wish to prohibit—said it was reckless, not malicious, and would not be covered by the exception in the bankruptcy law.

What about the case where there is no intent? Thousands come and blockade a clinic but they say: My intent was not to create any violence. Then you would have to prove, for each one of those defendants, their own intent, a next to impossible job.

What about contempt orders? Everyone agrees that contempt orders are not covered by the exception.

So for anyone to argue the present law covers this, I say two things to you: No, it does not. And if you believe it does, there is no reason not to make sure that it does by passing our amendment.

How about some from the other side who argue bankruptcy should not be used to promote public policy? We are not promoting public policy. In fact, it is those who have declared bankruptcy after committing terrible acts who are seeking to use the bankruptcy code for public policy goals. The bankruptcy code was never intended that way. What we are doing by this amendment is protecting the bankruptcy code from those who seek to twist it and turn it and use it for their goals in public policy. In fact, we have done it before in this Chamber. We did it, with almost unanimous support, for drunken drivers. There is an exception in the code for that. It is a horrible thing—so is this.

I argue one more thing to my colleagues. This is the first time we have had an organized movement in America that seeks to use the bankruptcy code for these purposes. They tell people how to declare bankruptcy. One of the major organizations says you have to be judgment proof before you can join it. I have never seen that before in this country—I don't think anyone has—where an organized group seeks to subvert the law and then tells its members you can avoid its consequences by declaring bankruptcy.

One final question. I do not know if my colleagues from the other side will have an amendment similar to this. The Senator from Iowa is shaking his head no. But we have not seen one so far, and the amendment can only argue one of two things.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I just don't know.

Mr. SCHUMER. He doesn't know. I appreciate my friend's candor, although we have been debating this. This amendment came up in the Judiciary Committee in October or November and we do not know. But I argue to my colleagues, whatever you think of the other amendment, if it covers this it cannot hurt to have this one. If it does not cover it, we need it.

I do not have any predisposition, having not seen the amendment, whether you vote for or against an alternative. But voting for or against that alternative will not solve the problem. Voting yes or no on this amendment will.

In conclusion, this amendment and this debate—on its surface about somewhat arcane provisions in the bankruptcy law—is what America is all about. We have always had people with deeply felt views. The bishop in my community every month says the Rosary in front of an abortion clinic.

I disagree with his views. Bishop Daily is a fine man. I would defend his right to do that. I would vote for legislation that would allow him to do that.

We have always had people in America of strongly held views, but every so often we have people whose views not only are strongly held but who believe because they believe it, they should subvert the will of the American people, they should take the law into their own hands.

This happened shortly after the founding of the Republic. It happened throughout the 19th century. It happened throughout the 20th century. Every time that has happened, the Members of this distinguished body have risen and said we must defend the rule of law because nothing is more sacred to America.

People have uttered courageous speeches on the floor of this Chamber about that, even if they did not agree with the specific view. This is one such moment.

The vote is close. It is neck and neck. The Vice President has graciously agreed to interrupt his schedule to be here because the vote is so close and because this bill and this amendment is so important.

I urge my colleagues to look into your hearts and souls. You walk with America. We do it every day in this Chamber. Do not turn your back on what you know is right. Do not turn your back on the rule of law. Do not turn your back on what our Founding Fathers shed blood for, which is the right of a democracy to make its own decisions and not have a small band of people, for whatever reason, take decisions into their own hands.

I urge my colleagues to support this amendment. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I might consume. I hope my friend, Senator HATCH, will debate the fine points of the law with the Senator from New York because I am not a lawyer. I have strong feelings on the issue of abortion which do not have to be expressed today. My friend, the Senator from New York, has opposite views on that issue and he has not expressed them and does not have to express them as far as this amendment is concerned. I oppose this amendment simply because it is not needed.

First, I will comment on the possibility of the Vice President of the United States having to vote today to break a tie. I predict that if the Vice President is in town and this vote is that close, the Vice President will be here and will have an opportunity to cast that vote. If the Vice President is in town to break a tie, there is going to be at least one person who supports that amendment who is going to vote against it just so we can have a tie vote, just so the President can cast his vote because the Vice President running for President of the United States is not going to break into his schedule with the tight vote he had in New Hampshire last night and avoid campaigning in the other States and waste his time here if he does not actually have to cast that vote.

We are in for not only political moments on this issue, but we are in for some very constitutional moments on this issue as well.

I like the theater that is going on this morning. We have seen it at least once before, and we may see it several times between now and November. I do not blame the people on the other side for creating this theater because I think the Vice President is going to need it between now and the November election if he intends to be elected President of the United States.

Mr. SCHUMER. Will the Senator from Iowa yield?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Of course, I will yield. I know what you are going to say—that everything I have said is not true. I have seen it happen before.

Mr. SCHUMER. Let me explain to the Senator from Iowa what happened, and I realize he has not intended to cast stones.

I have been lobbying Members on this vote for the last several weeks. As the Senator knows, this amendment held up the bankruptcy bill from being voted on last year because many of us felt so strongly about it.

As of yesterday, it looked as if the vote was dead even. That is the count we have. Last night, I called the Vice President and said: It looks dead even. You make a decision, but it is an important issue to us. And he determined to come back. It has nothing to do with theater. It has nothing to do with, frankly, the politics of this campaign. It has to do with the fact that so many of us consider the FACE law—both prolife and pro-choice—so important that we could not bear to see it undermined, particularly if it lost by a very narrow margin.

I do not know what the vote will be. I do not know what kind of arm twisting will go on between now and then. I do know there has been dramatic resistance to this amendment which held up a bill that large numbers of people on both sides of the aisle wanted very much to have come to the floor last year, and I think the remarks of the Senator from Iowa do not fit the facts in this situation regarding the Vice President.

I thank him for the graciousness of yielding.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, before I proceed, I presume the Senator from New York is willing to have the time for his remarks come out of his time and not out of my time. I hope he will agree to that.

Mr. SCHUMER. I ask unanimous consent that each side be given an additional 10 minutes because this is an important amendment. I ask unanimous consent we each be given an additional 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I still want the time to come out of his side.

Mr. SCHUMER, I will accept that.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. And it will be charged.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I give the Senator from New York and all the other people on the other side of the aisle the benefit of the doubt, but as a matter of constitutional fact, there is always some theater when the Vice President has to cast a tie-breaking vote. Also, there is some justification for what I said, not based upon what I know is going to happen this time but what I have seen happen in the past.

The other thing I want to tell the Senator from New York, regardless of what I said about the theater, I want to base my remarks upon what I think is unneeded legislation. This gets to some of the finer points of law that I am not going to argue and debate with the Senator from New York because he would say under certain circumstances. because of intent or because of court orders, the necessity to go back to State courts, his amendment will enhance the protection of people about whom he is concerned. Those are not serious considerations. His amendment is not needed.

First of all, it is very necessary to say, and I hope the Senator from New York will not take offense with this, that we would not even be debating this amendment or anything with bankruptcy if he had his way because he was one of those who voted against the bankruptcy legislation. I do not fault the Senator from New York for doing that. That is, obviously, his right.

He can say he wants bankruptcy legislation and he voted against it because this amendment was not included or maybe he is against bankruptcy generally, but the fact is that he voted against the bankruptcy reform bill we have before us.

People who generally do not want a bankruptcy reform bill have proposed some pretty politically sensitive amendments—and this is one of them that are basically a distraction from the real issue of why we need bankruptcy reform. I do not need to repeat what I said yesterday, such as we have had a 100-percent increase in personal bankruptcies over the last 7 or 8 years. From that standpoint, we have a very serious social and economic problem with which we have to deal, and particularly the way the present bankruptcy code is written, the amendment is not needed. I want to state why it is not needed because my colleagues are entitled to know.

I hope a lot of the people in this Chamber who want a bankruptcy reform bill will view this amendment in its proper context of being proposed as a distraction from the real issues of bankruptcy reform, particularly since I am going to convince them that this amendment is not needed based upon the way the present law is written.

But putting aside the obvious political nature of the amendment, this amendment should fail on its merits. The amendment would make judgments resulting from violent as well as nonviolent activities engaged in by pro-life activists nondischargeable in chapter 7 bankruptcy.

The amendment does not provide for the same treatment for violent or non-violent activities engaged in by prochoice activists. In other words, this amendment does not even pretend to be fair and balanced. It is an effort aimed only at one side of this very hot political debate that is known as the abortion debate. I do not think the Senate should change bankruptcy policy in such a one-sided way.

But the amendment does not even accomplish its one-sided goal. The amendment only affects chapter 7 bankruptcy. So I want to give you a second reason for being against it, based upon the fact that it fails on its own merits. Since it only affects chapter 7 bankruptcy, there is another way that people who are affected by this amendment, who want to go into bankruptcy to protect themselves, can do it. They can do that through chapter 13 because the amendment does not make any new debts nondischargeable in chapter 13. So any of the people to whom the Senator from New York refers to that his amendment is necessary for could file under chapter 13, pay pennies on the dollar, and walk away from debt.

As I said when I voted on this amendment in the Judiciary Committee, the nonpartisan Congressional Research Service has concluded that court judgments resulting from violations of the FACE Act are already nondischargeable in chapter 7 under politically neutral provisions of section 523 of the code. This amendment, the Congressional Research Service says, isn't needed.

Finally, it is worth noting that some Senators on the Democratic side have been very critical of making new categories of nondischargeable debts. If you listen to the White House-and we have listened to the White House quite a bit on this bill and have tried to satisfy people by making changes in it that have not hurt our general approach—if you listen to these same people, who have been listened to by me and other people in this body who want bankruptcy reform, you hear that anytime you create nondischargeable debts, the collection of child support suffers. I will bet the Senator from New York has made this same point on other nondischargeable debts concerning child support.

Some of those concerns have been very legitimate. We have responded to them. I guess I would have to say, from where I started 2 years ago on this legislation, I have been educated on some of the writing of our original bill to make those changes so that we make child support No. 1 in our considerations in bankruptcy courts.

But the White House, regardless, is saying nondischargeable debts make collection of child support much more difficult. But here we have an amendment from the minority to create a nondischargeable debt. So based on the arguments of the White House, this amendment should be rejected because it hurts child support claimants.

This is a very serious inconsistency on the part of people, particularly on the other side of the aisle, in proposing this amendment. The fact is, bankruptcy reform is so popular with the American people, so popular with Members of the Senate, that those who oppose real bankruptcy reform look for distractions, distractions based on the merits of their amendment, based on their opposition to the legislation, but also a needless distraction.

If, in their good conscience, they believe their amendment is needed, it in fact isn't needed because our bankruptcy code already deals, in a nonpolitical way, with these political questions that people believe can only be responded to by making one more thing nondischargeable.

This amendment is, on balance, a distraction and should fail for the reason it was offered. But, most importantly, it should fail on its merits. The merits just do not call for its adoption. I have expressed my views on that.

I yield the floor and ask our people to vote against it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GRAMS). The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished Senator from the State of Washington, a cosponsor of this legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington is recognized for 4 minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, let me assure my colleagues, this issue is not about theater. It is about the very real issue of violence against women. I join with my colleague, the Senator from New York, and thank him for his work on this amendment and urge my colleagues to support it.

This amendment is not about abortion. This amendment is about violence against women. We cannot allow violent extremists to use the bankruptcy code to carry out their agenda of violence.

If anyone thinks this is simply another abortion or choice issue, let me point out to all of you, there are groups and individuals who teach violent protesters how to protect their financial assets in the event of a civil or criminal penalty. There are classes one can take or pamphlets one can read spelling out how violent protesters can get around any punitive financial damage by simply running to bankruptcy court.

It is simply beyond comprehension how we can allow those convicted of violence and intimidation to be excused from punitive financial penalties. If we are serious about reducing violence and sending the right message to our children, we must support the Schumer amendment.

In 1998, there were two murders and one attempted murder of clinic workers. Since 1990, abortion clinic arson and bombings have resulted in over $8.5 million in damages. Two bombs were recently discovered at clinics in Kentucky and Ohio. Every day, women are harassed and intimidated as they seek proper health care services. This violence must stop, and those responsible must be held accountable.

Passage of the Schumer amendment will send the message that violence will not be tolerated. Peaceful protests will continue. Each individual has a right to freely express their views and their opinions. But no one has a right to carry out a campaign of fear and violence.

For too many women, these clinics are their only access to health care, including cancer screening and prenatal care. Constant and violent threats diminish access to health care for hundreds of women and subject them to unreasonable abuse and intimidation. Do not reward those who seek to deny women access to legal, affordable health care services.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to do the right thing and support the Schumer amendment.

I yield back my time to the Senator from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, how much time remains on this side?
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 17½ minutes remaining.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, how much on our side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York has 9 minutes remaining.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, bankruptcy law already covers willful, malicious, intentional conduct about which the distinguished Senator from Washington has been talking.

I rise to speak in opposition to this amendment offered by the Senator from New York. Nobody in this body condones violence of any kind. There is no excuse for it; that is, whether it is committed at an abortion clinic, whether it is committed by labor unions, or whether it is committed against churches, or for any other reason. But this amendment has nothing legitimate to do with bankruptcy reform. In my view, we should focus on our task of providing real bankruptcy relief for the American people.

This amendment is unnecessary. It provides that debts and liabilities arising from abortion clinic violence would not be dischargeable in bankruptcy. There simply is no need to place damages regarding access to abortions in a special class with special protections above other damages for other actions, including, for example, actions under civil rights laws. Not only is it poor policy to segregate certain classes of violence for special status in bankruptcy, but the bankruptcy code already allows for the nondischargeability of debts for "willful and malicious injury by the debtor." This is already taken care of, if that is what the Senator is really concerned about, willful and malicious injury caused by the debtor. Indeed, I asked to include a summary of a recent case in the RECORD.

In that case, the Behn case, it is said, in a newspaper report of that case:

A veteran anti-abortion protester cannot use bankruptcy to erase a debt of more than $50,000 in court-imposed fines, legal fees and interest she owes a Buffalo clinic that performs abortions, a federal judge has ruled.

"If anyone thought they might escape penalties for violating a judge's order through bankruptcy," said Glenn E. Murray, a lawyer who represented the clinic, "they should read this decision."

Already the law takes care of what the distinguished Senator from New York would like to have taken care of.

Notwithstanding that this amendment is entitled "Nondischargeability of Debts Incurred Through the Commission of Violence at Clinics," its reach extends much more broadly. That is where the danger comes in.

For example, the amendment, by its own terms, is not limited to acts of violence, as the title would lead us to believe, but covers acts of "interference with" a person seeking an abortion, whatever that means. In addition, the amendment refers to "an actual or potential action under any Federal, State, or local law" having to do with providing abortions.

As I read this language, it goes far beyond the discrete issue of violence at abortion clinics. In fact, if you read this language in the actual amendment, it has some very strange language in it. It says, in paragraph (3)(C): an actual or potential action alleging the violation of any Federal, State, or local statutory or common law, including chapter 96 of title 18 and the Federal civil rights laws (including sections 1977 through 1980 of the Revised Statutes) that results from the debtor's actual, attempted, or alleged—(i) harassment of, intimidation of, interference with, obstruction of . . .

Then it gets into injury to, threat to, or violence against any person. Look at that language: harassment, intimidation, interference. My goodness.

I urge my colleagues to read the actual text of the amendment before they vote. If they believe they are voting on an amendment that strictly covers acts of violence at abortion clinics, they are mistaken. Who knows how this amendment is going to be applied otherwise. The bankruptcy law already takes care of violence, abortion clinic violence, if you will. It does not discharge that in bankruptcy. The cases so state. I do not think we should fail to recognize that the bankruptcy code already provides orallows for the nondischargeability of debts "for willful and malicious injury by the debt-

This goes far beyond real injury. This actually could be used to oppress people who legitimately feel otherwise than the abortion clinic does. I urge my colleagues to reject this amendment. At the appropriate time, I am sure the distinguished Senator from Iowa or myself will move to table the amendment. I hope we can reject this amendment. I hope it is not necessary for the Vice President to come and break a tie vote on this matter. I think this would be catastrophic language in the bankruptcy code, which already does take care of violence at abortion clinics. Case law so states.

This is just another overreach by those who want to make a political issue out of something that does not deserve to be in the bankruptcy code, although I believe it is a sincere overreach that perhaps is not considered such by my dear friend from New York, for whom I have a lot of esteem in the law. I am concerned about this kind of language. It is very broad, very undefined. No question that it goes far beyond actual injury, far beyond malicious conduct, far beyond willful and malicious injury that the bankruptcy code already covers. We have enough in the code to take care of problems at abortion clinics without putting in harassment, intimidation, interference, and obstruction into the bankruptcy code.

I reserve the remainder of our time. Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished Senator from Nevada, cosponsor of this amendment and one of its leaders.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I appreciate very much the statement of the Senator from Iowa where he tried to indicate that the Vice President was coming here because of some problem in the campaign. I direct the attention of the Senator from Iowa to what really took place in New Hampshire last night. As every political pundit in America has stated, Democrat and Republican, those who are neutral, Bush was bushwhacked in New Hampshire. That is the real problem. I appreciate the Senator's attempt to divert attention from the fact that there really was a problem in New Hampshire for Governor Bush.

In the year 1215, in a meadow in England, a group of barons were with King John. King John couldn't sign his name, but he did affix his cross, his X, to a document that we now call the Magna Carta. The reason that was so important in our history is because it was the beginning of common law. It was the beginning of the rule of law that we adopted when we became a nation. We followed the English common law which started with Runnymeade and the Magna Carta. It established the rule of law, not a rule of kings, not a rule of demagogues, not a rule of zealots but a rule where we follow the

That is what this debate is about today. There are a group of people in America today who recognize there is a law, but they are above it. They don't have to follow it. They can go and use butyric acid, fire, bullets, guns, causing murder, disruption of businesses. They can, of course, cause all these blockades, and people who disagree have said what you are doing is wrong. You are avoiding the law, and we are going to take you to court and have a court of law determine that you are wrong, and you are going to have to respond in money damages for the violence and the disruption in business and the damage that you have caused. They have gone to court and they have won those lawsuits. They have had money judgments rendered against them. These people who caused this disruption of business, who threw this acid in people's faces in clinics, who set fires, who murdered people, they say we are above the law; we don't have to follow it because we disagree with the

We are a country that has a rule of law. These people should not be able to discharge these debts in bankruptcy. That is what this amendment is all about.

We recognize that violence and terror are worsening every day in this world, and we have to stop it. This is one method of stopping it. One of the reasons these people flout the law is they say don't have to follow the law.

Mr. President, these people intimidate. They recognize that they do not have to be held accountable. Today, what we are saying is we must act to ensure that we live in a law-abiding society. This amendment does that by saying that those who have a judgment rendered against them in a court of law, where the court has determined that they engaged in unlawful acts of intimidation and violence, can't escape responsibility for their actions in bankruptcy court.

I believe in our system of justice, where courts and juries make decisions that we as the American public must follow. Some people don't believe in our system of justice: they don't believe in our system of trial by jury and court determinations. They believe money damages awarded against them mean nothing because they are going to discharge them in bankruptcy. In effect, they believe the law is for everybody else but them. We think that is wrong and that is why we should have an overwhelming vote in the Senate. The Vice President, even though he is going to be here, should not have to break a tie. People of good conscience on both sides of the aisle should vote in favor of this amendment. It is the right thing to do because it upholds the rule of law.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, look, let's not get this amendment mixed up. The current law takes care of actual injury. It takes care of malicious injury and willful injury by the debtor. That is not discharged in bankruptcy. So it has nothing to do with violence. The current law takes care of that.

None of us condone violence. That is not what this amendment is about. Look at the doggone language of this amendment. It is unbelievable. What it says here is, "an actual or potential action alleging the violation of any Federal, State, or local statutory or common law" and "that results from the debtor's actual, attempted, or alleged harassment..."

What does that mean? "Intimidation of. . ." What does that mean? If somebody says "boo," are they intimidating and they could not be discharged in bankruptcy, in an unjust case in bankruptcy where they haven't caused anv harm or willful malicious injury? Interference with? Obstruction of? This is an overreach if there ever was one, since we already have bankruptcy law that provides nondischargeability of debts of a debtor who has caused willful or malicious injury to another person, or even to the clinic, I suppose. We should not get into a type of social engineering in the bankruptcy code since we already take care of willful and malicious activities. When you start talking about harassment, intimidation, obstruction, interference—these are words that can be used in a criminal code, but they should not be used in the bankruptcy code which already provides for willful, malicious injury by the debtor as nondischargeable in bankruptcy. I think when we get into that stuff we are getting into areas that basically disrupt the code and should not be part of the code.

None of us tolerate or approve of violence at the abortion clinics. Some of these anti-abortion people who have committed violence should be punished to the full extent of the law. They should not be allowed to get away with it. Whichever side you are on in this issue ought to be a side of debate and a side of honest debate, not a side of violence. But we take care of willful and malicious injury, which may not even be violence. It may be something that even involves negligence, I suppose. We take care of it in the current code.

Why should we amend the code just because some would like to do so with this strange and very undefined language. Plus, it is something that everybody ought to think about—improper and illegal, or should I say nonlegal, to argue that this amendment is all about violence. It is not at all. It is about extending what is already covered to areas that literally do not involve violence or malicious injury or willful and violent and malicious conduct. That is not what the bankruptcy code should be all about. I hope our colleagues will vote this amendment down.

I reserve the remainder of our time. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York has 6 minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. President, I greatly respect my friend from Utah, who is a fine legislator and a fine human being. He is just dead wrong on this. Let me just answer this. He said we don't need this law, first, because the present code covers it. CRS, which is hardly known as either a pro-life or a pro-choice organization, is respected for their analysis and they say in a memorandum of June 8:

We conclude, for the reasons discussed below, that the Schumer proposal, which would add a new subsection 19 to 523(a), is far broader in scope and would encompass a far wider range of potential debtor liability than is currently covered by 523(a)(6).

Don't rely on Senator HATCH, don't rely on Senator SCHUMER, but on 523. One other point. The Senator from Utah says everything is covered. Let's hear what the attorney said in that Nuremberg Files case, that horrible and devastating case—so bad that a jury in Oregon awarded $109 million in damages, realizing what has happened in America in terms of the death of doctors. Here is what the lawyer said:

Your clients are nothing more than nonpriority, unsecured judgment creditors, with other judgment creditors ahead of them . . . even a car loan has priority over your judgment.

Let me repeat that so maybe my friend from Utah can hear me in the Cloakroom: "... even a car loan has priority over your judgment."

Is that what we wanted in the present law? No, absolutely not. The record is clear. There are certain instances where the present law would cover it—narrow instances, and even in those cases, you would have to go all the way back to bankruptcy court and relitigate. But in many of these cases, the law is not clear, and in every one of these cases, you make them litigate two, three, four times. We know what the policy of these violent extremists is. It is to delay and delay and delay. They should not be allowed to use the bankruptcy code to do that.

One other point. I think my good friend from Iowa said, well, it doesn't stop violence. That might be done by pro-choice groups. Not so. If a pro-choice group were to decide to blockade a clinic, or threaten a doctor, or use violence because they did not like what that clinic was doing, they would be equally subject to the law.

The reason that statement is so absurd is because we don't have a grand movement on the pro-choice side seeking to use violence. Read the works of Randal Terry and Flip Benham and everybody else. They believe because they are morally superior to the rest of us that they have the right to take the law into their own hands and use violence.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's 3 minutes has expired.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York has 3 minutes remaining, and the Senator from Iowa has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we have a speaker on his way. Senator SESSIONS wants to speak.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I am wondering. Senator LEAHY, the ranking member of the committee, could speak. Until everyone is ready, why don't we suggest the absence of a quorum so the time is reserved. I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask unanimous consent that the time not be charged to the respective sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, given we don't have any other business scheduled until 11 o'clock—we have other Members coming from both sides who wish to speak—that each side be given an additional 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I object to that. Let's wait until we use our time and make that decision at that particular time

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is observed. The absence of a quorum has been suggested, and the clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, will the Senator from New York yield 2 minutes?

Mr. SCHUMER. I am happy to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished ranking member of the Judiciary Committee, who has been a guiding inspiration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I very proudly cosponsored the amendment of the Senator from New York. Senator SCHUMER's amendment on debts incurred through the commission of violence to health service clinics is a good one. It closes a real-life loophole in our bankruptcy code because some people are using the bankruptcy laws to avoid paying debts arising from clinic violence.

That is a dangerous precedent that Congress should stop. It would be the same if somebody was doing this using the bankruptcy laws to escape paying bills for violence against anybody, whether groups with which I agree or groups with which I disagree.

We should not use the bankruptcy laws for this. It is wrong to allow court judgments under the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act to be discharged under our bankruptcy laws. In fact, 12 individuals who created the Nuremberg Files web site filed bankruptcy to avoid their debts under the law.

If I could make a personal note on this, at a time when a doctor was murdered in New York because his name was on the Nuremberg Files, within days they determined that the chief suspect was a man from Vermont. I went to the Nuremberg Files. My name was listed among those to be shot.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from Vermont has expired.

Mr. LEAHY. I ask for another 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. This was a very chilling thing for both me and my family. To think somebody could use laws to escape any penalties they might receive under their use of our bankruptcy laws is wrong.

I agree with the Senator from New York.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

If no one yields time, it will be charged equally between the two sides.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, might I renew the request of Senator REID that we have a quorum call not to be counted against either side until Senator Sessions can get here? Is there a way?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We have done it that way already.

Mr. REID. I am sorry. I sure wasn't in on the request.

Mr. SCHUMER. If I might answer the question—Mr. President, may I respond to Senator REID's question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is the Senator from New York suggesting the absence of a quorum without the time being charged to either side?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I discussed this with the Senator from Iowa, and he has graciously agreed to $1\frac{1}{2}$ additional minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Then all time will have expired. Is that right? OK.

I thank the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has 6 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We will take care of ours. We will yield it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I say in conclusion to my colleagues that this is an extremely important amendment to keep a bipartisan law, the FACE law, alive and well. If we don't pass this amendment, there will be hundreds and hundreds of instances where people perpetrate violence, and violate the FACE law, and they will not be held accountable.

Let me repeat again what the Nuremberg Files people, who list Members of this body as people who ought to be looked at, say:

The judgment in this case, in my view, is not only . . . non-priority unsecured debt but fully dischargeable debt.

Even a car loan has priority over your judgment.

That makes a mockery of the rule of law in this country. This is not a prochoice or a pro-life law. This is the law that says those who seek violence, threat, and intimidation against legal clinics in America because they somehow feel they have a moral superiority to every one of us will be punished for their actions.

It is a desperately needed proposal. I urge my colleagues to support it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. L. CHAFEE. Mr. President, clinics that provide family planning services and counseling as well as abortions are engaged in an honest, law-abiding activity. These services enable women to exercise their right to make reasoned and informed decisions about their reproductive futures. Yet, given the escalating culture of violence surrounding these clinics, abortion providers and clinic workers risk their lives coming to work each day.

In my own state of Rhode Island, I have heard troubling reports of clinic violence from people such as Pablo Rodriguez M.D., medical director of Planned Parenthood Rhode Island.

Although Congress has made strides to stem clinic violence by passing the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act (FACE), this statute has not been a panacea. While FACE empowered those victimized by clinic violence to sue, many plaintiffs found liable in civil court for clinic violence seek refuge under our nation's bankruptcy law to avoid paying the financial penalties levied against them.

Providing women's health services is legal; clinic violence is not. I believe we must do anything we can to discourage these horrible acts of violence. Senator SCHUMER's amendment closes a loophole that allows perpetrators of clinic violence to escape the consequences of their actions.

The bankruptcy code was intended to provide a fresh start for honest debtors, not those who have violated the law and endangered innocent lives. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to vote in favor of Senator Schumer's amendment.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the 10 minutes set aside for the Harkin amendment be given to Senator Kennedy to speak on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Following the statement by Senator Kennedy, the amendment will be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Harkin amendment is not pending.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the amendment that is now pending be set aside and the Harkin amendment be in order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. For 10 minutes?

Mr. REID. Yes, and following the statement by Senator Kennedy, the amendment be withdrawn. And, of course it goes without saying, the time of the majority would be reserved, not be taken as a result of this unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. Mr. REID. I thank the Chair.

AMENDMENT NO. 2770

(Purpose: Invalidating hidden security interests on nearly valueless household liens)

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Nevada [Mr. Reid], for Mr. Harkin, proposes an amendment numbered 2770.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following section:

SEC. . (a) INVALIDATING HIDDEN SECURITY INTERESTS AND NEARLY VALUELESS HOUSEHOLD LIENS

(1) EXEMPT PROPERTY.—Section 522(f) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(4) A lien held by a creditor on an interest of the debtor in any item of household furnishings, household goods, wearing apparel, appliances, books, animals, crops, musical instruments, or jewelry held primarily for the personal, family, or household use of the debtor or a dependent of the debtor shall be void unless—

"(A) the holder of the lien files with the court and serves on the debtor, within 30 days after the meeting of creditors or before the hearing on confirmation of a plan, whichever occurs first, a sworn declaration that the purchase price for the particular item that is subject to such lien exceeded $1,000 or that the item was purchased within 180 days prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition, and

"(B)(i) the debtor does not timely object to such declaration; or

"(ii)(I) the debtor objects to such declaration; and

"(II) the court finds that the purchase price of the item exceeded $1,000 or that the item was purchased within 180 days prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition and that such lien is not avoidable under paragraph (f)(1) of this section."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS—Section 104(b)(1) of title 11, United States Code, is amended by inserting '522(f),' after '522(d)'.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. I thank the leaders. Mr. President, I yield myself 8 minutes at this time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator will be recognized for 8 minutes.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, as the Senate completes its work on the bankruptcy bill, we are more aware than ever of the potential impact of this legislation on American citizens and businesses.

This legislation purports to reform the bankruptcy system and eliminate debtor abuses, and the banking and credit card industries have been urging action on it for the past two years. They argue that during this time of economic expansion, Congress should deal with the increase in bankruptcy filings by curtailing pervasive debtor fraud. If Congress doesn't act, they say, the economy will suffer.

But the industry's cure is worse than the disease. First, they fail to acknowledge a key fact—the steady decline in bankruptcy filings. Without any action by Congress, the number of bankruptcy filings is going down. Filings have dropped in 42 states. Overall, there were 112,000 fewer personal bankruptcies in 1999 than in 1998—the largest one-year drop on record.

Leading economists believe that the bankruptcy crisis is self-correcting. The significant drop in filing is ample indication that a harsh bankruptcy bill is not needed

It is abundantly clear that the bill before us is unnecessarily harsh. As House Judiciary Committee Chairman HENRY HYDE acknowledged, it contains dozens of provisions that favor creditors, and it fails to address the serious problems that often force citizens into bankruptcy.

The bill will make it more difficult for thousands of debtors who file for bankruptcy because of the layoffs and corporate downsizing that take place after mergers, and that are ordered by businesses to improve profits.

This bill also makes it more difficult for families already torn apart by divorce—particularly divorced women, who are four times more likely to file for bankruptcy than married women or single men.

The bill would also have a devastating effect on the millions of Americans who have no health insurance or substandard coverage. For almost 20 percent of those filing for bankruptcy protection, a health-related problem led to their economic problems.

Earlier in the debate we took the time of the Senate to go through each of those categories, the numbers of people who went into bankruptcy as a result of the mergers and downsizing of major companies and corporations. These are American men and women who have worked hard all of their lives and through no fault of their own were put in very difficult economic straits and run into bankruptcy.

Because of the escalation of divorce, large numbers of single women are particularly vulnerable, because of their credit situation, to run into problems with bankruptcy. We have seen with the decline of health care coverage, particularly among older workers in their fifties, before they are eligible for Medicare, they have been the increasing targets of bankruptcy. These are groups of Americans who have been hard-working all of their lives and now are going to be caught up in this particular legislation which I think is particularly harsh on these individuals, and needlessly so.

In addition, this bill fails to significantly address the serious problems created by the credit card industry. In an average month, 7 percent of all households in the country receive a credit card solicitation. In recent years, the credit card industry has also begun to offer new lines of credit targeted at people with low incomes—people they know cannot afford to pile up credit card debt.

Facts such as these have reduced the economic stability of millions of families, and have led many of them to file for bankruptcy. Two out of every three bankruptcy filers have an employment problem. One out of every five has a health-care problem. Divorced or separated people are three times more likely than married couples to file for bankruptcy. Working men and women in economic free fall often have no choice except bankruptcy.

Although the Senate spent two weeks debating and amending the bankruptcy bill last year and several additional days this year, this bill still does not acknowledge the problems that force so many Americans into bankruptcy. It remains heavily tilted toward the financial services industry, and many needed amendments were defeated.

Simultaneously, amendments were adopted that should be an embarrassment to the Senate. By a one-vote margin, the Senate adopted an amendment that provides for school vouchers, as well as harmful changes in the nation's anti-drug policy.

The Republican leadership offered a watered-down minimum wage increase, tied to a poison pill that cuts overtime pay, and an enormous $71 billion in tax breaks that disproportionately benefit the wealthiest Americans. Those provisions are now part of this bankruptcy bill—making a bad bill even worse.

By failing to increase the minimum wage last year, Congress failed the American people. It is time—long past time—to raise the minimum wage.

Our proposal is modest—a one dollar increase in two installments—50 cents now, and 50 cents a year from now. Over 10 million American workers will benefit. Our position is clear, it's "50–50 or fight!"

Our Democratic proposal to increase the minimum wage by a dollar over the next year will make a significant difference in the lives of all workers who earn the minimum wage and their families.

Unlike the Republican proposal, our Democratic proposal will give minimum wage workers the pay raise they need and deserve, so that they can care more effectively for their families and pay for the food and clothing and housing they need.

We shouldn't delay an increase. We shouldn't stretch it out. We shouldn't use it to slash overtime pay. We shouldn't use it as an excuse to give tax breaks to the wealthy.

Raising the minimum wage is an issue of fairness and dignity. No one who works for a living should have to live in poverty.

Before casting our final votes on this legislation, we have the opportunity to adopt several very important amendments that deserve our support. Yesterday, we started debate on the Levin-Durbin gun amendment, which would prevent gun manufacturers from abusing the bankruptcy system.

Today, Senator Schumer offered an amendment that eliminates a loop-hole currently being exploited by perpetrators of clinic violence.

Senator Schumer's proposed amendment is neither a prochoice amendment nor an anti-choice amendment. At its heart, it is not about abortion at all. Rather, it is about accountability for violent, illegal acts. It is about preventing those who use tactics of violence and intimidation against reproductive health clinics from using the bankruptcy laws as a shield from financial liability for their unlawful acts.

In response to a wave of violence which included murder, arson, bombing and harassment, Congress enacted the Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act in 1994. That Act established criminal penalties and financial penalties for violence and intimidation directed against reproductive health service patients and providers.

I'm proud to be the Senate author of that legislation because since its passage, incidents of clinic violence have declined significantly. In addition, under the act and other federal and state laws, victims of clinic violence have been able to obtain remedies, and perpetrators of unlawful clinic violence have paid substantial fines and civil penalties.

Unfortunately, some of these offenders are attempting to evade their liability by exploiting the bankruptcy system.

For example, last year a federal judge ordered two anti-abortion groups and twelve individuals to pay in excess of $107 million for anti-choice activities and threats. However, within the last few months, five of those defendants, who collectively owe more than $45.5 million in clinic-violence debts, filed for bankruptcy to avoid the judgments.

For over 100 years, our bankruptcy system has enabled honest debtors to receive a fresh start—but, the bankruptcy laws were never intended to be a safe haven for the deliberate disregard of Federal or State laws.

The Schumer amendment preserves the integrity of the bankruptcy laws, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The Schumer amendment, the Levin amendment, and others are critical in the needed effort to salvage this bill. Our goal is to enact responsible bankruptcy reform, not a sweetheart deal for the credit card industry.

Mr. President, at the appropriate time, I intend to offer a motion to instruct the conferees on the bankruptcy bill to fix the deeply flawed minimum wage proposal contained in the bill. The watered-down wage proposal in this bill is an insult to the hard-working men and women earning the minimum wage. In this time of plenty, we must not shortchange these workers. We should provide a 50-cent raise now and 50 cents a year from now.

Finally, it is fair to ask when we look at any piece of legislation we do who is going to benefit and who is going to lose. As has been demonstrated during the hearings and during the debate, just about every thoughtful person who has studied the bankruptcy bills remarks about how Congress, over the history of our Nation, has proposed bankruptcy bills which have been balanced between the debtor and the creditor, with the understanding that there are so many millions of Americans who may fall onto hard times briefly but are hardworking, decent people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that 2 minutes of the time that has been set aside for Senator Feingold be allotted to Senator Kennedy. I have cleared this with Senator Feingold.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized for 2 minutes

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, it has been remarkably balanced, with the exception of this legislation.

Finally, when you come down to it, one has to ask who benefits and who loses. It is very clear the winners in this are the credit card companies and the losers are the hard-working men and women who have fallen on difficult times, in most instances due to no fault of their own. They are men and women who have been downsized as a result of mergers. They are men and women who have fallen into serious economic times because of the failure of their health insurance to cover those individuals. They are primarily women who, as a result of their personal relationships, have been divorced and find it difficult to maintain a system of credit

One can look back over all of these and find they are the victims of this legislation and they are the ones who are going to suffer the harsh penalties of it. It is fundamentally wrong. We have not had the opportunity in this debate to see protections for children and mothers. The reason for the Dodd amendment is to give special protections which historically have been a part of our bankruptcy laws. That has been defeated, as well as the amendments to remedy some of the harsh provisions of the means test.

This legislation is not the legislation that passed the Congress a little over a year ago in which I joined others in supporting. This is not balanced legislation.

For those reasons, plus the fact we have $73 billion of tax breaks for wealthy individuals in here and a denial to the hardest working Americans for fairness in treating them with a minimum wage, it ought to be voted down.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield 6 minutes, or whatever he consumes of the time I have remaining on the SCHUMER amendment, to the Senator from Alabama. What he does not use I will yield back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The SCHUMER amendment is now pending. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 2650, AS FURTHER MODIFIED, AS PREVIOUSLY AGREED TO

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, my good friend Senator REED and I have worked together for quite some time now to adopt a provision involving reaffirmations, amendment No. 2650. We have a few technical corrections to which we have agreed, and we have reached an agreement to make these technical corrections.

I send to the desk a modified amendment which includes the technical corrections. I ask unanimous consent that the original amendment No. 2650 be vitiated and that the modified amendment be accepted, substituted, and adopted in its place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the agreement, the Senator has that right. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I have checked with the staff of Senator REED and the floor staff on this side, and there is no objection to the unanimous consent request of the Senator from Alabama. Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise to speak briefly on a technical amendment offered by myself and Senator SESSIONS. Senator SESSIONS and I are offering this technical amendment merely to correct some provisions which we felt were needed in order to avoid an unintended reading of the amendment. Reaffirmations are essentially agreements between creditors and consumers whereby the consumer agrees to continue to repay the debt owed the creditor, even after all other debts may be discharged in bankruptcy. Unfortunately, there have been many instances in the past in which consumers have not been well-informed going into these agreements, and in some cases have been coerced into signing them. As some of my colleagues may recall, in offering our original amendment on reaffirmations, Senator Sessions and I had two major goals: the first was to improve consumer's understanding of what they are doing when they agree to reaffirm a debt that they were entitled to, under the law, have discharged. The second goal was to promote efficient handling of reaffirmations in the bankruptcy process. Our November amendment developed a uniform disclosure form that is to be filed with the court along with the reaffirmation agreement into which the consumer is entering. The amendment also expands the authority of the bankruptcy court to review those reaffirmations that are most likely to fail, such as debtors whose income and other expenses clearly indicate that they do not have the ability to repay the debt which they are reaffirming. In that respect, the Reed-Sessions amendment seeks to provide courts with the information they need to determine quickly and efficiently whether these reaffirmations are appropriate or not. The specific changes that we are making today to our original amendment simply clarify certain points we felt may be open to misinterpretation. For example, we want to make it clear that the debt a consumer is reaffirming includes two totals: First is the total amount of the debt the consumer owes, and second is the total amount of any other costs accrued by the consumer since the date they were given the disclosure statement. At another point, we wanted to make clear to the consumer that the payments they would be making on the reaffirmed debt are subject to change, based on their reaffirmation or original credit agreement.

In the part of the amendment detailing certain steps the consumer needs to undertake, we wanted to make clear that consumers would not be penalized if their attorney decides not to sign the reaffirmation agreement and the disclosure statement.

We also want to make clear to consumers that in certain circumstances. they can also redeem the item, rather than reaffirming the debt they have on it. to redeem it, they can simply make one payment equal to the actual value of the item.

All of these mostly minor changes will make the original amendment that much more clear and easier for the consumer to understand when they are going through the unpleasant process of bankruptcy. With all that said, it was my hope to have another point included in the final version of this amendment, but I have agreed not to push for its inclusion at this time. This last piece that I was seeking deals with the amount of time one has to file reaffirmations. I would first like to make it clear that it is not my intention to suggest that the original Reed-Sessions amendment was unclear about the need for timely filing of reaffirmations and the new disclosure form with the court. However, in the course of discussions with consumer advocacy groups, there were strong arguments that it could be interpreted that way. Therefore, I sought what I thought was a judicious approach, which was to create a 50-day window-between the first meeting a debtor has with creditors until the time of discharge—to enter into a reaffirmation agreement. The original Reed-Sessions amendment goes to some length to carefully define the information that must be presented to the debtor, the instructions that the debtor must receive, and the conditions under which this information must be presented to the courts. However, I think we will all recognize that this information is most useful to the courts if it can be provided in a timely man-

The underlying bill already contains a number of provisions that outline certain deadlines for actions that the consumer must undertake within the course of bankruptcy. Therefore, this new deadline would be entirely consistent with those others already present in the bill. I believe a deadline of some kind is necessary in this case as we have seen certain abuses in the past, most notable in the case of Sears, where there appeared to be no effort to file these reaffirmation agreements with the court, yet all the while consumers continue to pay as if they had been. I would also like to point out that several advocates and bankruptcy judges were consulted on the timing issue, notably Judge Eugene Weedoff of Chicago and Judge Thomas Carlson of California, as well as Professor Elizabeth Warren of Harvard University. However, I'm pleased to say that I have come to an agreement with Senator SESSIONS on the technical amendment and on addressing the timing issue with regard to filing reaffirmations. Therefore, I would urge the support of this amendment.

The amendment (No. 2650), as further modified, as previously agreed to, reads as follows:

SEC. 1. REAFFIRMATION.

- In S. 625, strike section 203 and section 204(a) and (c), and insert in lieu of 204 (a) the following-
- "(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 524 of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 202 of this Act, is amended-
- (1) In subsection (c) by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:
- "(2) the debtor received the disclosures described in subsection (i) at or before the time the debtor signed the agreement.
- (2) By inserting at the end of the section the following-
- "(i)(1) the disclosures required under subsection (c) paragraph (2) of this section shall consist of the disclosure statement described in paragraph (3), completed as required in that paragraph, together with the agreement, statement, declaration, motion and order described, respectively, in paragraphs (4) through (8) of this subsection, and shall be the only disclosures required in connection with the reaffirmation.
- "(2) Disclosures made under this paragraph shall be made clearly and conspicuously and in writing. The terms "Amount Reaffirmed" and "Annual Percentage Rate" shall be disclosed more conspicuously than other terms, data or information provides in connection with this disclosure, except that the phrases "Before agreeing to reaffirm a debt, review these important disclosures' and "Summary of Reaffirmation Agreement" may be equally conspicuous. Disclosures may be made in a different order and may use terminology different from that set forth in paragraphs [(2) through (8)], except that the terms 'Amount Reaffirmed' and "Annual Percentage Rate" must be used where indicated.
- "(3) The disclosure statement required under this paragraph shall consist of the following-
- '(A) The statement: "Part A: Before agreeing to reaffirm a debt, review these important disclosures:
- "(B) Under the heading "Summary of Reaffirmation Agreement", the statement: "This Summary is made pursuant to the requirements of the Bankruptcy Code":
- "(C) The "Amount Reaffirmed", using that term, which shall be (I) the total amount which the debtor agrees to reaffirm and (II) the total of any other fees or cost accrued as of the date of the disclosure statement."
- "(D) In conjunction with the disclosure of
- the "Amount Reaffirmed", the statements
 (I) "The amount of debt you have agreed to reaffirm": and
- (II) "Your credit agreement may obligate you to pay additional amounts which may come due after the date of this disclosure. Consult your credit agreement";
- "(E) The "Annual Percentage Rate", using that term, which shall be disclosed as
- "(I) If, at the time the petition is filed, the debt is open end credit as defined pursuant to the Truth in Lending Act, title 15 United States Code section 1601 et. seq., then
- "(aa) the annual percentage rate mined pursuant to title 15 United States Code section 1637(b)(5) and (6), as applicable, as disclosed to the debtor in the most recent periodic statement print to the agreement or, if no such periodic statement has been provided the debtor during the prior six months, the annual percentage rate as it would have been so disclosed at the time the disclosure statement is given the debtor, or to the extent this annual percentage rate is not readily available or not applicable, then

"(bb) the simple interest rate applicable to the amount reaffirmed as of the date the disclosure statement is given to the debtor, or if different simple interest rates apply to different balances, the simple interest rate applicable to each such balance, identifying the amount of each such balance included in the amount reaffirmed; or

"(cc) if the entity making the disclosure elects, to disclose the annual percentage rate under (aa) and the simple interest rate under

"(II) if, at the time the petition is filed, the debt is closed end credit as defined pursuant to the Truth in Lending Act, title 15 United States Code section 1601 et. seq., then

"(aa) the annual percentage rate pursuant to title 15 United States Code section 1638(a)(4) as disclosed to the debtor in the most recent disclosure statement given the debtor prior to the reaffirmation agreement with respect to the debt, or, if no such disclosure statement was provided the debtor, the annual percentage rate as it would have been so disclosed at the time the disclosure statement is given the debtor; or to the extent this annual percentage rate is not readily available or not applicable, then

"(bb) the simple interest rate applicable to the amount reaffirmed as of the date the disclosure statement is given the debtor, or if different simple interest rates apply to different balances, the simple interest rate applicable to each such balance, identifying the amount of such balance included in the amount reaffirmed; or

"(cc) if the entity making the disclosure elects, to disclose the annual percentage rate under (aa) and the simple interest rate under (bb)"

"(F) If the underlying debt transaction was disclosed as a variable rate transaction on the most recent disclosure given pursuant to the Truth in Lending Act, title 15, United States Code, section 1601 et. seq, by stating "The interest rate on your loan may be a variable interest rate which changes from time to time, so that the annual percentage rate disclosed here may be higher or lower."

"(G) If the debt is secured by a security interest which has not been waived in whole or in part or determined to be void by a final order of the court at the time of the disclosure, by disclosing that a security interest or lien in goods or property is asserted over some or all of the obligations you are reaffirming and listing the items and their original purchase price that are subject to the asserted security interest, or if not a purchase-money security interest then listing by items or types and the original amount of the loan."

"(H) At the election of the creditor, a statement of the repayment schedule using one or a combination of the following—

"(I) by making the statement: "Your first payment in the amount $_____ is due on ____ but the future payment amount may be different. Consult your reaffirmation or credit agreement, as applicable.", and stating the amount of he first payment and the due date of that payment in the places provided;

"(II) by making the statement: "Your payment schedule will be:", and describing the repayment schedule with the number, amount and due dates or period of payments scheduled to repay the obligations reaffirmed to the extent then known by the disclosing party; or

"(III) by describing the debtor's repayment obligations with reasonable specificity to the extent then known by the disclosing party.

"(I) The following statement: "Note: When this disclosure talks about what a creditor "may" do, it does not use the word "may" to give the creditor specific permission. The word "may" is used to tell you what might occur if the law permits the creditor to take the action. If you have questions about your reaffirmation or what the law requires, talk to the attorney who helped you negotiate this agreement. If you don't have an attorney helping you, the judge will explain the effect of your reaffirmation when the reaffirmation hearing is held.":

"(J) The following additional statements:

"Reaffirming a debt is a serious financial decision. The law requires you to take certain steps to make sure the decision is in your best interest. If these steps are not completed, the reaffirmation agreement is not effective, even though you have signed it it.

"1. Read the disclosures in this Part A carefully. Consider the decision to reaffirm carefully. Then, if you want to reaffirm, sign the reaffirmation agreement in Part B (or you may use a separate agreement you and your creditor agree on).

"2. Complete and sign part D and be sure you can afford to make the payments you are agreeing to make and have received a copy of the disclosure statement and a completed and signed reaffirmation agreement.

"3. If you were represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, the attorney must have signed the certification in Part C.

"4. If you were not represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, you must have completed and signed Part E.

"5. The original of this disclosure must be filed with the court by you or your creditor. If a separate reaffirmation agreement (other than the one in Part B) has been signed, it must be attached.

"6. If you were represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, your reaffirmation agreement becomes effective upon filing with the court unless the reaffirmation is presumed to be an undue hardship as explained in part D."

"7. If you were not represented by an attorney during the negotiation of the reaffirmation agreement, it will not be effective unless the court approves it. The court will notify you of the hearing on your reaffirmation agreement. You must attend this hearing in bankruptcy court where the judge will review your agreement. The bankruptcy court must approve the agreement as consistent with your best interest, except that no curt approval is required if the agreement is for a consumer debt secured by a mortgage, deed of trust, security deed or other lien on your real property, like your home.

"Your right to rescind a reaffirmation. You may rescind (cancel) your reaffirmation at any time before the bankruptcy court enters a discharge order or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court, whichever is longer. To rescind or cancel, you must notify the creditor that the agreement is canceled.

'What are your obligations if you reaffirm the debt? A reaffirmed debt remains your personal legal obligation. It is not discharged in your bankruptcy. That means that if you default on your reaffirmed debt after your bankruptcy is over, your creditor may be able to take your property or your wages. Otherwise, your obligations will be determined by the reaffirmation agreement which may have changed the terms of the original agreement. For example, if your are reaffirming an open end credit agreement, the creditor may be permitted by that agreement and/or applicable law to change the terms of the agreement in the future under certain conditions.

"Are you required to enter into a reaffirmation agreement by any law? No, you are not required to reaffirm a debt by any law. Only agree to reaffirm a debt if it is in your best interest. Be sure you can afford the payments you agree to make.
"What if your creditor has a security interest or lien? Your bankruptcy discharge does not eliminate any lien on your property. A "lien" is often referred to as a security interest, deed of trust, mortgage or security deed. Even if you do not reaffirm and your personal liability on the debt is discharged, because of the lien your creditor may still have the right to take the security property if you do not pay the debt or default on it. If the lien is on an item of personal property that is exempt under your state's law or that the trustee has abandoned, you may be able to redeem the item rather than reaffirm the debt. To redeem. you make a single payment to the creditor equal to the current value of the security property, as agreed by the parties or determined by the court.'

"(4) To form of reaffirmation agreement required under this paragraph shall consist of the following—

"Part B: Reaffirmation Agreement. I/we agree to reaffirm the obligations arising under the credit agreement described below.

"Brief description of credit agreement: Description of any changes to the credit agreement made as part of this reaffirmation agreement:

Signature: Date:

Borrower:

Co-borrower, if also reaffirming:

Accepted by creditor:

Date of creditor acceptance:";

"(5)(i) The declaration shall consist of the following:
"Part C: Certification by Debtor's Attor-

"Part C: Certification by Debtor's Attorney (If Any)

I hereby certify that (1) this agreement represents a fully informed and voluntary agreement by the debtor(s); (2) this agreement does not impose an undue hardship on the debtor or any dependent of the debtor; and (3) I have fully advised the debtor of the legal effect and consequences of this agreement and any default under this agreement.

Signature of Debtor's Attorney: Date:":

(ii) In the case of reaffirmations in which a presumption of undue hardship has been established, the certification shall state that in the opinion of the attorney, the debtor is able to make the payment."

"(6) The statement in support of reaffirmation agreement, which the debtor shall sign and date prior to filing with the court, shall consist of the following—

"Part D: Debtor's Statement in Support of Reaffirmation Agreement.

1. I believe this agreement will not impose an undue hardship on my dependents or me. I can afford to make the payments on the reaffirmed debt because my monthly income (take home pay plus any other income re-_, and my actual current ceived) is $ monthly expenses including monthly payments on post-bankruptcy debt and other reaffirmation agreements total $ to make the required payments ing $ on this reaffirmed debt. I understand that if my income less my monthly expenses does not leave enough to make the payments, this reaffirmation agreement is presumed to be an undue hardship on me and must be reviewed by the court. However, this presumption may be overcome if I explain to the satisfaction of the court how I can afford to make the payments here:

2. I received a copy of the Reaffirmation Disclosure Statement in Part A and a completed and signed reaffirmation agreement.":

"(7) The motion, which may be used if approval of the agreement by the court is required in order for it to be effective and shall be signed and dated by the moving party, shall consist of the following—

"Part E: Motion for Court Approval (To be completed only where debtor is not represented by an attorney.) I (we), the debtor, affirm the following to be true and correct:

"I am not represented by an attorney in connection with this reaffirmation agreement.

"I believe this agreement is in my best interest based on the income and expenses I have disclosed in my Statement in Support of this reaffirmation agreement above, and because (provide any additional relevant reasons the court should consider):

"Therefore, I ask the court for an order approving this reaffirmation agreement."

"(8) The court order, which may be used to approve a reaffirmation, shall consist of the following—

"Court Order: The court grants the debtor's motion and approves the reaffirmation agreement described above.":

"(j) Notwithstanding any other provision of this title—

"(1) A creditor may accept payments from a debtor before and after the filing of a reaffirmation agreement with the court.

"(2) A creditor may accept payments from a debtor under a reaffirmation agreement which the creditor believes in good faith to be effective.

"(3) The requirements of subsections (c)(2) and (i) shall be satisfied if disclosures required under those subsections are given in good faith.

"(k) Until 60 days after a reaffirmation agreement is filed with the court (or such additional period as the court, after notice and hearing and for cause, orders before the expiration of such period), it shall be presumed that the reaffirmation agreement is an undue hardship on the debtor if the debtor's monthly income less the debtor's monthly expenses as shown on the debtor's completed and signed statement in support of the reaffirmation agreement required under subsection (i)(6) of this section is less than the scheduled payments on the reaffirmed debt. This presumption must be reviewed by the court. The presumption may be rebutted in writing by the debtor if the statement includes an explanation which identifies additional sources of funds to make the payments as agreed upon under the terms of the reaffirmation agreement. If the presumption is not rebutted to the satisfaction of the court, the court may disapprove the agreement. However, no agreement shall be disapproved without notice and hearing to the debtor and creditor and such hearing must be concluded before the entry to the debtor's discharge '

SEC. 2. JUDICIAL EDUCATION.

Add at the appropriate place the following: "() JUDICIAL EDUCATION.—The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, in consultation with the Director of the Executive Office for United States Trustees, shall develop materials and conduct such training as may be useful to courts in implementing the act, including the requirements relating to the 707(b) means test and reaffirmations."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama still has the floor.

REAFFIRMATIONS

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to address an issue that Senator REED and I have been working on for many months. We have sought to reform the process of reaffirmations, to fully inform debtors of the details and consequences of reaffirming debts, to prevent abuse of this process by dishonest debtors and creditors, and protect honest individuals who wish to enter a reaffirmation agreement. Senator REED and I have worked for months to reach this point, and we have tried to craft a balanced amendment that protects the interests of everyone involved. That amendment passed the Senate last year. At this point. Senator REED and I have agreed on a few technical changes, and identified one substantive issue that remains outstanding. The substantive issue concerns the time limit for reaffirmation agreements to be approved by the court. Current law provides 90 days, and Senator REED would prefer 50 days. Given the support for the underlying amendment, Senator REED and I were most concerned with making the technical changes to ensure that the agreement that was reached accurately represented the common intent and to reserve the timing issue for conference.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, my friend from Alabama is correct. I believe that we have an honest, fair reform to the reaffirmation process and procedure. I know there has been a great deal of work dedicated to this end, and I am pleased we have arrived at this common ground. I have some concerns about the time limits for approval of these reaffirmation agreements. I had hoped this timing issue would be resolved, but I share Senator Sessions' desire to see this amendment passed with the technical corrections. I would ask my friend if he shares my interest in addressing this timing issue in conference?

Mr. SESSIONS. I believe your concern is reasonable, and I will work with you to see that this issue is addressed in conference. I am confident that we can reach a consensus on the timing issue, and that all sides will be able to accept the change.

Mr. REED. I thank the Senator.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I will briefly say in response to the comments made by the distinguished senior Senator from Massachusetts that this is a fair and balanced bill. It does a number of good things to help those who have financial difficulties. It closes loopholes and ends unfairness in provisions that are being abused and making a mockery out of legitimate bankruptcy law.

For example, children or those who are eligible to receive child support and alimony are raised to the highest possible level, even above attorney fees and trustee fees in bankruptcy. They are the highest possible level. If an individual owes a number of debts and one of those is for child support, the child support is to be paid first.

There is nothing in this bill that is harsh. Any American making below the median income level will fundamentally find their bankruptcy filing procedure under the needs-based rule has not changed. It is only for those who make above the median income that a question will be raised as to whether or not they can pay back some of their debts.

There are literally thousands of individuals in America today who owe limited debts, who may have incomes of $80,000, $90,000, or $200,000, and choose to file for bankruptcy. Under the current law, they can wipe out all their debts, even those owed to people much less wealthy than they, and not pay any debts.

Under this provision of law, if you have an income above the median income level, the bankruptcy court may conclude you can pay some of your debts, and if you can, you are given 5 years to pay some of those debts to somebody from whom you have received a benefit or else you would not have a debt.

I thank Senator GRASSLEY for his work on this bill. I am troubled that anyone would say it is unfair and does not help make this system better. I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We have now yielded back all time on the SCHUMER amendment. It is my understanding this side has 10 minutes reserved under the Harkin amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is correct.

All time has expired on the SCHUMER amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2770

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself such time as I might consume on the Harkin amendment. I will not use all of the time because I want to encourage Senator FEINGOLD or Senator LEVIN to go ahead with their amendments.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from Iowa, as soon as the Senator completes his statement the Senator from Michigan is ready to proceed.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I wish to respond to what the Senator from Massachusetts spoke about so passionately. I probably do not speak with the same passion he does, but I do want to say that he has it completely wrong. You cannot ignore the fact that since 1980 bankruptcies have increased from around 330,000 in that year to just under 1.4 million in 1999. That is a fact that cannot be ignored.

Consequently, it seems to me to be completely wrong for some other Senator to say we do not have a bankruptcy problem in the United States. Congress ought to deal with it, and changing the law will help. I do not pretend changing the law is going to entirely respond to that problem, but the extent to which it does, we should do it because this increase in bankruptcies is a huge increase. The small dip in the filings that Senator Kennedy has referred to will not erase this very basic, fundamental problem we have in our economy with the bankruptcy laws. We have a real bankruptcy crisis on our hands. We cannot ignore that.

Perhaps the Senator from Massachusetts does not remember what his own President said in the State of the Union Address. The President of the United States said, just a few days ago, these are prosperous times. People are not in bankruptcy then because of hard times. If this is a problem when we have very prosperous times, what sort of a bankruptcy problem are we going to have when we have a recession or a depression?

One other point that the Senator from Massachusetts spent a great deal of time on is how he sees the problems of minimum wage in this bill. There is a minimum wage increase in this bill. It isn't there because we Republicans sought to join minimum wage with the bankruptcy bill. We were going to debate minimum wage at another time. We were going to increase minimum wage at another time, but it was the Democratic Party that made a decision to put minimum wage on the bankruptcy bill.

Î do not even like nongermane things being included on other pieces of legislation, but it is a pattern too often adopted and too readily accepted in the Senate. So it is done. But on this side of the aisle, I argued that we should not mix minimum wage with bankruptcy. I do not want the weight of that issue, as important as increasing the minimum wage is, with the issue of reforming the bankruptcy code. But on the other side of the aisle they chose to do it. So what do we hear?

Now we are hearing complaints about the minimum wage bill on the bankruptcy bill. We are hearing threats about instructing conferees to do something about it. If it is a problem, it is a problem because the other side of the aisle made it a problem by including it. I remind them that they ought to be very careful what they wish for because sometimes they get it.

The Senator from Massachusetts has asked who will win and who will lose. Under this bill, the honest American people, who have to pay the higher prices because other people go into bankruptcy and do not pay their bills—because we have deadbeats out there—are the ones who will win by this legislation.

We still preserve the historic principle of our bankruptcy laws that some people who are in debt, through no fault of their own, are entitled to a fresh start. But when it comes to this basic principle of economics that there is no free lunch, there is no free lunch in bankruptcy, either. Somebody pays.

In this particular instance, the honest American consumer is paying $400, for a family of four, to cover debts of somewhere between $30 billion and $50 billion a year that go unpaid because of people who ought to be paying their bills. Worse yet, we have a situation where some people who do have the ability to pay their bills are not paying their bills, either. We are sending a clear signal that those who have the ability to pay are not going to get off scot-free.

I relinquish the remainder of our time. Hopefully, we can proceed, then, to the next amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time has expired on the Harkin amendment.

AMENDMENT NO. 2770, WITHDRAWN

Mr. REID. Mr. President, it is my understanding that automatically, based on the unanimous consent request previously agreed to, the Harkin amendment is withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Who yields time?

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, what is the pending amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the Schumer amendment No. 2763.

AMENDMENT NO. 2748, AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To provide for an exception to a limitation on an automatic stay under section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, relating to evictions and similar proceedings to provide for the payment of rent that becomes due after the petition of a debtor is filed, and for other purposes)

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that amendment be temporarily laid aside so I can call up amendment No. 2748, as modified by amendment No. 2779.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. Fein-GOLD] proposes an amendment numbered 2748, as modified.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 108, line 15, strike "; and" and insert a semicolon.

Beginning on page 108, strike line 18 and all that follows through page 109, line 7, and insert the following:

"(23) under subsection (a)(3) of the commencement or continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property—

"(A) on which the debtor resides as a tenant under a rental agreement; and

"(B) with respect to which—

"(i) the debtor fails to make a rent payment that initially becomes due under the rental agreement or applicable State law after the date of filing of the petition or within the 10 days prior to the filing of the petition, if the lessor files with the court a certification that the debtor has not made a payment for rent and serves a copy of the certification to the debtor; or

"(ii) the debtor's lease has expired according to its terms and (a) or a member of the lessor's immediate family intends to personally occupy that property or (b) the lessor has entered into an enforceable lease agreement with another tenant prior to the filing of the petition, if the lessor files with the court a certification of such facts and serves a copy of the certification to the debtor:

"(24) under subsection (a)(3) of the commencement or continuation of any eviction, unlawful detainer action, or similar proceeding by a lessor against a debtor involving residential real property, if during the 1-year period preceding the filing of the petition the debtor—

``(A) commenced another case under this title; and

"(B) failed to make a rent payment that initially became due under an applicable rental agreement or State law after the date of filing of the petition for that other case; or

"(25) under subsection (a)(3), of an eviction action based on endangerment of property or the use of an illegal drug, if the lessor files with the court a certification that the debtor has endangered property or used an illegal drug and serves a copy of the certification to the debtor"; and

(4) by adding at the end of the flush material at the end of the subsection the following: "With respect to the applicability of paragraph (23) or (25) to a debtor with respect to the commencement or continuation of a proceeding described in that paragraph, the exception to the automatic stay shall become effective on the 15th day after the lessor meets the filing and notification requirements under that paragraph, unless the debtor takes such action as may be necessary to address the subject of the certification or the court orders that the exception to the automatic stay shall not become effective or provides for a later date of applicability."

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, how much time am I allotted on this amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin has 13 minutes on this amendment.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, this amendment is what we have referred to in this debate on the bankruptcy bill as the "landlord-tenant amendment." We had extensive debate on this amendment in November before we recessed for the year. We did make some progress in identifying the areas of dispute and, I think, in narrowing our differences as well.

To remind my colleagues, this amendment is designed to reduce the harsh consequences of section 311 of the bill on tenants, while at the same time protecting legitimate financial interests of landlords.

To review, current law provides for an automatic stay of eviction proceedings upon the filing of a bankruptcy case. Landlords can apply for relief from that stay so the eviction can proceed, but it is a process that often takes a few months.

What section 311 of the bill does is eliminate the stay in all landlord-tenant cases so an eviction can proceed immediately, completely, regardless of the circumstances.

What my amendment would do is allow tenants to remain in their apartments as they try to sort out the difficult consequences of bankruptcy, if—and only if—they are willing to pay the rent that comes due after they file for bankruptcy or that comes due within the 10 days before bankruptcy. If the tenant fails to pay rent, the stay can be lifted without further proceedings 15 days after the landlord provides notice to the court that the rent has not been paid. If the reason for the eviction is drug use or property damage, the stay can also be lifted after 15 days. Finally, if the lease has actually expired by its terms—in other words, if there is no more time on the lease—and if the landlord or a member of his or her family plans to move in to the property, then again, after 15 days notice, the eviction can proceed

There is no 15-day notice period, with a chance for the tenant to go into court and challenge the allegations of the landlord, if the tenant has filed for bankruptcy previously. In other words in cases of repeat filings, the stay never takes effect, just as under section 311 in this bill. That is the main abuse that has been alleged in Los Angeles County, where unscrupulous bankruptcy petition preparers advertise filing bankruptcy as a way to live "rent free." So under my amendment, a debtor can never live "rent free." The debtor has to pay rent after filing for bankruptcy. If a debtor misses a rent payment, the stay will be lifted 15 days later. And the automatic stay does not take effect at all if the tenant is a repeat filer.

So my amendment gets at the abuse. and it protects the rights and economic interests of the landlord. What it eliminates is the punitive aspect of Section 311, and the possibility that tenants who are willing and able to pay rent once they get a little breathing room from their other creditors will instead be put out on the street. I am frankly disappointed that my colleague from Alabama, with whom I have had a good debate on this issue, and the property owners organizations are insisting on the harsh aspects of section 311 when my amendment would get at the problems they have identified just as well.

It is also important to note that even in cases where a tenant pays the rent that is due after filing for bankruptcy, my amendment leaves intact the current law that allows landlords to get relief from the automatic stay. Let me be very clear about that. My amendment does not eliminate the ability of landlords to apply for relief from the stay under current law. The law now gives debtors some breathing room in legal proceedings, including eviction proceedings. But landlords can apply for relief from the stay. It is not an abuse of the law to take advantage of the automatic stay to get your affairs in order. Many tenants use that time to work out a payment schedule for their back rent so they can avoid eviction altogether.

Most landlords don't want to throw people out on the street—they just want to be paid. My amendment requires that they be paid once bankruptcy is filed, or the eviction can proceed immediately. But even if the rent is paid while the bankruptcy case is pending, a landlord can still seek relief from stay under the normal procedures and press forward with the eviction.

I have a letter from the National Association of Realtors, a powerful lobbying association, that is unalterably opposed to my amendment. This letter is dated January 24, 2000, several days ago. It urges opposition to my amendment, which it says will "seriously weaken" the bill. But listen to what it says about the bill. The letter says that current law allows for "serious fraud and abuse." But my amendment deals with the cases of fraud and abuse by disallowing the automatic stay in the case of repeat filings. And the Realtor's letter says that current law allows tenant to "live rent free at the expense of the property owner." But my amendment does not allow tenants to live rent free. They have to pay rent once the bankruptcy is filed. And it says that prospective tenants often "have to wait 6 months or longer, as they do now, to get into rental property units occupied by residents overstaying their lease." Well that is simply not true under my amendment. This amendment allows for expedited relief from stay in any case where the lease has expired according to its terms and the landlord has entered into a valid rental agreement with another tenant prior to the filing of the bankruptcy petition.

Every single one of the arguments made by the National Association of Realtors against the amendment is refuted by the amendment itself, every one. Yet this group persists in urging the Senate to reject the amendment. It says, speaking about the provisions of the bill that the amendment will modify: "we believe these common sense provisions will curb abusive use of the Bankruptcy Code." If the Realtors were honest, they would admit that my amendment will do exactly the same thing. It will curb abusive use of the Bankruptcy Code. But it will also continue to allow the code to provide protection to people who are not abusing the system, but simply using it to get back on their feet, and keep a roof over their heads. Those people would be treated too harshly by the current bill, and it is unfortunate that the Realtors. in their zeal to get as many advantages for landlords as they can, refuse to see that.

I have modified this amendment in the spirit of compromise to address all of the concerns that the Senator from Alabama raised in debate last year. This amendment addresses the abuse, it is fair to landlords and makes sure they are not economically harmed when a tenant files for bankruptcy, and it is fair to debtors who file for bankruptcy in good faith and simply need a little breathing space to get their lives in order.

I urge my colleagues to look carefully at this amendment, and I hope they will support it.

I reserve the remainder of my time and yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who vields time?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Alabama wants to speak against the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin and also against the amendment of the Senator from Michigan very shortly. The manager of the bill has asked permission that we go immediately to the Levin amendment and reserve the remainder of the time of the Senator from Wisconsin, and that the Senator from Alabama, Mr. SESSIONS, be allowed to speak at the same time against both amendments. Does the Senator from Wisconsin have objection to that?

Mr. FEINGOLD. I have no objection. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from Wisconsin has 6 minutes remaining on his amendment.

The Senator from Michigan.

AMENDMENT NO. 2658

(Purpose: To provide for the nondischargeability of debts arising from firearm-related debts, and for other purposes)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, what is the pending matter?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the Levin amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows: The Senator from Michigan [Mr. Levin], for himself, Mr. Durbin, Mr. Wyden, Mr. Kennedy, Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Lautenberg, and Mr. Schumer, proposes an amendment numbered 2658.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 124, between lines 14 and 15, insert the following:

SEC. ___. CHAPTER 11 NONDISCHARGEABILITY OF DEBTS ARISING FROM FIREARMRELATED DEBTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1141(d) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 708 of this Act, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(6) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the confirmation of a plan does not discharge a debtor that is a corporation from any debt that is—

"(A) related to the use or transfer of a firearm (as defined in section 921(3) of title 18 or section 5845(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986); and

"(B) based in whole or in part on fraud, recklessness, misrepresentation, nuisance, negligence, or product liability.".

(b) AUTOMATIC STAY.—Section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, as amended by section 901(d) of this Act, is amended—

(1) in paragraph (27), by striking "or" at the end:

(2) in paragraph (28), by striking the period at the end and inserting "; or"; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (28) the following:

"(29) under subsection (a) of this section, of—

"(A) the commencement or continuation, and conclusion to the entry of final judgment or order, of a judicial, administrative, or other action or proceeding for debts that are nondischargeable under section 1141(d)(6); or

"(B) the perfection or enforcement of a judgment or order referred to in subparagraph (A) against property of the estate or property of the debtor."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized for 20 minutes.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair.

This amendment, which is cosponsored by a number of our colleagues, provides that gun manufacturers and distributors cannot evade responsibility for damages that are caused by their reckless or negligent conduct or their fraudulent conduct by seeking reorganization in bankruptcy court. It is that straightforward. We already have about 18 provisions in the bankruptcy law based on public policy which provide that certain kinds of debts are not dischargeable.

For instance, we have in the law a provision that says if you drive while drunk and you injure somebody, you cannot discharge that obligation by going bankrupt. Senator Danforth made an eloquent statement on this floor arguing for justification for that particular exception, that nondischargeability, when he said:

Today there exists an unconscionable loophole in the bankruptcy statute which makes it possible for drunk drivers who have injured, killed or caused property damage to others to escape civil liability for their actions by having their judgment debt discharged in Federal bankruptcy court. This loophole affords opportunities for scandalous abuse of the judicial process.

Following Senator Danforth's and others' pleas that we make liability resulting from drunken driving nondischargeable in bankruptcy, this Congress added another nondischargeable obligation in our bankruptcy law. We have about 18 of those provisions. We have a provision that says if you have an obligation to the Government for a student loan, you are not going to be able to get rid of that by going bankrupt. We have a provision in the bankruptcy law which says if you have an obligation to a co-op or to a condo for a fee you owe to them, under certain circumstances that is not going to be dischargeable in bankruptcy.

And what we are saying now in this amendment is that where a gun manufacturer or a distributor, through his own reckless, negligent, or fraudulent conduct causes damages to individuals or our communities, they should not be able to reorganize in bankruptcy court and get rid of that debt.

This is the public policy purpose beyond this particular provision. It has the support of many organizations such as Handgun Control, which is Sarah Brady's group, has written in support of this amendment, saying:

Gun manufacturers, distributors, and dealers should not be able to evade these legitimate claims for damages.

In 1996, Lorcin Engineering Company, one of the chief manufacturers of Saturday night specials, or junk guns, filed for chapter 11 bankruptcy. Other gun manufacturers such as Davis Industries and Sundance Industries have followed Lorcin's lead and have filed for bankruptcy to avoid liability. We must not allow other companies to take advantage of this bankruptcy system.

We have an unusual provision in the law that exempts the gun industry from safety and health regulation. It is the only industry that is explicitly exempt from health and safety regulations and from the jurisdiction of the Consumer Product Safety Commission. No agency has safety oversight over manufacturers who have produced unsafe firearms, and so litigation serves as the only mechanism that can hold the industry responsible.

What this amendment says is that where there is damage caused by fraud or reckless or negligent conduct of a manufacturer or distributor, that manufacturer or distributor should not be able to reorganize itself out of accountability, away from responsibility by going to bankruptcy court. The public policy purpose behind this amendment is a powerful one, indeed.

In addition to Sarah Brady's organization, which I have mentioned, the National League of Cities supports this amendment. They have written a letter dated November 16:

Like debts incurred by drunk driving, Congress must send a clear and convincing message that it will not permit debtors to escape debts incurred by improper conduct. It is crucial that the Federal Government do all that it can to help local law enforcement effectively address gun violence with commonsense legislation that curtails access to firearms, including altering the bankruptcy code.

Too many of these companies have already said they are going to try to reorganize to escape liability. It is a tactic they are using. That is not what the bankruptcy law is all about. The bankruptcy law is not intended to provide that kind of a haven for companies that have engaged in reckless conduct or negligent conduct, to evade responsibility for their obligations.

Now, the reasons the National League of Cities has taken this position are many, but one of them is that 30 cities and counties have filed lawsuits against gun manufacturers or distributors alleging reckless, negligent, or fraudulent conduct on the part of those manufacturers or distributors. New Orleans, LA; Chicago, IL; Miami, FL; Atlanta, GA; Cleveland and Cincinnati, OH; Detroit, MI; San Francisco, CA; St. Louis, MO; and other cities and communities have filed lawsuits alleging reckless conduct, negligent conduct, or fraudulent conduct on the part of a gun manufacturer or distributor. They very strongly support this amendment, as does the U.S. Conference of Mayors and the Violence Policy Center.

The Violence Policy Center issued a statement saying that this amendment is necessary to ensure that firearm manufacturers, which are exempt from Federal health and safety regulation and I emphasize the only group that is exempt from Federal health and safety regulation explicitly is the firearms manufacturers. They have gotten that exemption. Yet when it comes to trying to close a loophole in the bankruptcy law, which they are using tactically to evade responsibility, they claim they are being singled out. Indeed, they have singled themselves out in gaining exemption from Federal health and safety regulation, and the only way in which they can be held accountable is through the civil justice system. That is why the Violence Policy Center has written a letter of support, indicating that lack of health and safety regulation means the civil justice system is the only mechanism available to regulate the conduct of gun manufacturers.

Mr. President, this amendment is in response to a tactic that has now been declared by a number of gun manufacturers, that when faced with allegations or judgments based on damages caused by reckless or negligent misconduct, they will seek protection through reorganization in the bankruptcy courts. We are trying to reduce the level of gun violence in this country, and one way to do it, a way to support the cities and the mayors and the individuals who have been victimized by reckless or negligent manufacture or distribution, is to close a loophole in the bankruptcy system which a number of gun manufacturers have explicitly said they will use tactically to try to evade responsibility for their misconduct.

Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CAMPBELL). The Senator has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I yield such time as he consumes to the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 2748, AS MODIFIED

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, Senator FEINGOLD has again presented an amendment involving landlords and eviction cases. It is one of the biggest problems we have in the bankruptcy code. He has made some progress from his original amendment, but it still basically makes a Federal case out of eviction proceedings. Under Senator FEINGOLD's amendment, when a lease has expired, tenants can go to bankruptcy court to delay and file motions and have hearings that can draw out the case even longer than the time that the Senator has suggested would normally occur. That ought to be done in State systems where eviction cases are traditionally litigated—not in Federal Bankruptcy court.

Every State has a procedure and remedies and rights for tenants being evicted. That is where those cases ought to be handled, not in bankruptcy court. We know that 3,886 people filed bankruptcy in Los Angeles County in 1996 simply for the purpose of defeating eviction. We have seen advertisements in newspapers saying, "hire us as your bankruptcy lawyer and we can delay your eviction for 7 months." This is the kind of thing that is not healthy, the kind of thing that has disrupted and distorted bankruptcy law. I believe bankruptcy law upsets legitimate landlords, many of whom are retirees and people who have only a few apartments or a duplex that they manage, when they can't get a tenant out.

So this amendment that he proposes, in effect, continues the process of allowing the tenant to take his eviction case to bankruptcy court. This is what has been happening and what will continue to happen if the Senator's amendment is adopted. A tenant contests an eviction in State court, and as he moves toward the conclusion of that case, he then has his bankruptcy lawyer file bankruptcy. An automatic stay would occur even with this notice Senator FEINGOLD proposes, at least for 2 weeks. Then they would be eligible for a hearing in bankruptcy court on the certification that had been submitted, and then that would delay things.

After the landlord eventually wins, for example, in a case in which the lease has expired, the case still then has to go back to State court and has to be revived because it is at the bottom of the judge's docket. The landlord has to go back to the State court lawyer to proceed with it. I think that is a completely unworkable proposal. I do understand the Senator's concern. We ought to do all we can to help those who are homeless. We have many provisions for dealing with homeless people, but mandating private landlords to provide housing for people who do not have a valid lease is not the right approach, in my view.

Mr. President, with regard to the gun issue, I think we need to think clearly about what we are doing. We are talking about removing bankruptcy protection from two kinds of judgments: Judgments incurred by people who "potentially" violate the law near an abortion clinic and judgments incurred by firearms manufacturers or dealers when some third party breaks the law by using a firearm to injure another person.

Each of us has a special responsibility, I believe, to this Senate and our constitutional responsibilities to create a coherent, fair justice system for allowing citizens' debts to be discharged. That is what bankruptcy is Every time someone declares bankruptcy, someone whom he or she justly owes is not paid—a store owner, a doctor, a bank, or whoever.

So most of us are here to achieve honest bankruptcy reform. These amendments, however, involving the abortion clinic exception and the gun manufacturers exception have all the earmarks of partisan injection of politics into the bankruptcy code and an attack on people who are unpopular, particularly groups or institutions that are unpopular with the political left. These political attacks come at the expense of the integrity and consistency of our bankruptcy system. We should not allow these kinds of attacks to happen. It is our duty to create a legal system for all Americans and not just to pursue special interest politics.

One Senator who proposed this amendment said, well, if it is political, it is popular. I do not believe it would be popular if we had a group of citizens and we explained exactly with regard to the abortion clinic or with regard to the gun manufacturers how they were being targeted specifically in ways that similar businesses and institutions were not being targeted and were not being given an exemption from bankruptey.

I suggest that this is not a targeting of violence. These amendments are basically targeting political enemies. The amendments create an exception to the generally applicable bankruptcy protections for two specific classes: Prolife activists who are overzealous and may violate Federal law, and firearms manufacturers that in general adhere to the law with great attention and, as a matter of fact, do what they are supposed to do and sell firearms according to Federal regulations.

Remember that by the established rule of law, any debt that arises from "wilful or malicious" conduct by any institution today is not dischargeable in bankruptcy. In other words, if you commit an action that is malicious or willful and you go into bankruptcy court, you can't wipe out that debt; you still have to pay it.

If we remove the general bankruptcy protection for court judgment against these targeted groups, why aren't we eliminating these protections for other types of debtors whose acts other people may not like in this country? If the goal were to stop violence and protect children from exposure to bad products, you might expect my colleagues who support this amendment to offer amendments that remove generally applicable bankruptcy protections from other entities.

For example, I don't see them proposing to remove protections for union leaders who may acquiesce in strike violence around a plant, or environmental terrorists or their organization who may damage the equipment of logging companies. They are not proposing we provide special protections for Hollywood production companies that inundate our children with smut and violence.

Take, for example, the Hollywood entertainment industry. Through pornographic, violent movies and other activities, this industry pumps violent images into the minds of our people, especially children.

Michael Carneal, the high school student in Paducah, KY, who killed several of his classmates, stated that the violent Hollywood movie, "The Basketball Diaries," which featured a disaffected high school student who shoots a gun into a classroom of students, influenced him to commit his horrible crime.

Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold—the killers in the Littleton, CO, Columbine High School—were avid players of the video game "Doom" in which they hunted down and shot their victims. As the New York Times stated, "the search for the cause in the Littleton shootings continues, and much of it has come to focus on violent video games."

Will there be lawsuits against those companies?

Who can forget Ted Bundy, a serial killer who preyed on young co-eds, who was convicted and sentenced to death in the electric chair? He confessed that he became addicted to pornography and that pornography played a major role in developing his homicidal fantasies that led to his violent and horrific crimes.

As Senator Hatch's recent Report entitled, "Children, Violence, and the Media" noted: "The debate is over," begins a position paper on media violence by the American Psychiatric Association, "[f]or the last three decades, the one predominant finding in research on the mass media is that exposure to media portrayals of violence increases aggressive behavior in children." In the words of Jeffrey McIntyre, legislative and federal affairs officer for the American Psychological Association, "To argue against it is like arguing against gravity."

But Hollywood and other activist groups are not targets of these bankruptcy penalties. Why? Because they are friends of some of the people proposing these amendments.

After criticizing Hollywood in public for violent movies and video games that could be responsible for tragedies such as the one at Columbine High School, President Clinton that same day went to a fundraiser in which Hollywood contributors gave $2 million to the Democratic Party.

Supporters of this amendment say they want to stop those who peddle violence to children; that is, punish gun manufacturers, they say. But what about these others who could be sued and have judgments against them? I could say let's provide an exception to them. But, really, that is not the right approach for us to take. We ought not to be carving out exceptions and protections and targeting groups we don't like. We need to create a basic bankruptcy law that treats all lawful businesses the same.

It certainly strikes me as odd that we would want to target people who feel deeply about an issue such as abortion and who, through perhaps excess zeal, may potentially violate the law when protesting against abortion. But what about other groups? Union leaders are also picketing. Civil rights groups, ACLU groups—why aren't they being singled out by this amendment?

These amendments do not represent a high-minded, moral stance against the marketing of violence or against violence itself. Instead, the real reason behind these proposals, it appears to me, is to attack political enemies of certain people.

I could consider offering amendments to include groups such as pornographers, but I don't think that is the right approach. I believe we ought to stay with the historic general principles of law that say those who are willful and those who are malicious cannot discharge their debt.

I would like to say a couple of things about the gun manufacturer lawsuits.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, will the Senator withhold?

Mr. SESSIONS. I will.

Mr. REID. We had a number of Senators calling to find out when the votes are going to occur. I think we are in a position now where we could, with the courtesy of the Senator from Alabama, ask unanimous consent to set a time for the votes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the amendments be voted in the order in which they were debated today, with 4 minutes prior to each vote for explanation, divided equally.

I ask unanimous consent the remaining parameters of the consent agreement then be in place.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Therefore, a series of votes will shortly occur in the following order, with passage the last in this series: Schumer amendment No. 2763, Feingold amendment No. 2748, Levin amendment No. 2658, and the Schumer amendment No. 2762.

I might mention that on the last amendment there is a possibility we may be able to resolve that amendment. If we do, then there will only be three votes and final passage. If we cannot resolve it, we will have four votes and final passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Was that a unanimous consent request?

Mr. HATCH. Yes. We already had that.

Mr. LEAHY. I beg the indulgence of the Senator from Alabama. I am hoping we can resolve the last amendment of the Senator from New York. I think it is one that makes sense and one that has broad agreement on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Senator from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Pardon me, that is not the Senator from Arizona.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama is not the Senator from Georgia, and the acting Presiding ator from Alabama is not the Senator from Georgia, and the acting Presiding Officer apologizes to the distinguished Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Presiding Officer from—

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Kansas.

Mr. SESSIONS. I trust we will remember next time.

The argument was made previously that we target and provide an exception in the bill for drunk drivers and drunk boaters. Yes, the current law does do that. But drunk drivers and drunk boaters are the people who conduct themselves in a reckless and endangering way. They ought to be punished. It is legitimate for us to give them a different treatment. But the proposed amendment dealing with gun manufacturers does not target the illegal or irresponsible gun user. It targets a responsible, federally licensed, lawabiding gun manufacturer. That is a big difference.

I have not heard any of my colleagues across the aisle argue that automobile and boat manufacturers should have their product liability debt classified as "nondischargeable." And they should not be. Because those manufacturers, as firearm manufacturers, are not at fault. It is the irresponsible driver or the irresponsible shooter.

Briefly, I will say this. With regard to the suits against gun manufacturers, I think it is very instructive to note the Department of Justice, the Presidentially appointed Attorney General, has not agreed to file these lawsuits. The reason is there is no legal basis for them. Two of them have already been dismissed. They have conjured up a political appointee in HUD, the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to come up with this idea that if you sell a gun precisely according to Federal law, with all the regulations and do everything you can possible, and then the buyer goes out and uses it illegally, the seller or manufacturer is liable. That is not going to hold up in a court of law. If they want to make that law, let's pass a law, let's put it on the floor and vote for it. We have to stop utilizing the litigation process to set public policy in this country. And that is what this is. It is a dangerous trend.

Indeed, a number of institutions which you would not expect, and individuals, have commented on this. The Washington Post, which is absolutely committed to gun control in America, as much as any institution I know of, wrote this recently, on the threats of HUD to file a lawsuit. The Post said:

It seems wrong for an agency of the Federal Government to organize other plaintiffs to put pressure on an industry—even a distasteful industry—to achieve policy results the administration has not been able to achieve through normal legislation and regulation.

They went on:

It is an abuse of a valuable system, [the legal system] one that could make it less valuable [the legal system could be less valuable] as people come to view the legal system as nothing more than an arm of policymakers.

I remember a number of years ago, Hodding Carter, who used to serve President Jimmy Carter, said on a national TV program, we liberals have gotten to the point where we want to use the legal system to carry out our agenda we can no longer win at the ballot box.

Robert Reich, President Clinton's former Secretary of Labor, has characterized these tactics as:

... blatant end-runs around the democratic process ... and nothing short of a faux legislation, which sacrifices democracy to the discretion of administrative officials operating under utter secrecy.... Mr. Reich goes on to say:

The way to fix everything isn't to turn our backs on the democratic process and pursue litigation as the administration [his former administration] is doing.

That is precisely what we are doing. A lawsuit by lawyers who file these actions to set public policy is dangerous because they were not elected to set that policy. They are not accountable to the people, as we are. If we want to pass a law to burden gun manufacturers further, so be it. We are accountable to the American people and we are responsible for the law. But who are these people who, through lawsuits and secret negotiations, are going do that? That is how we got into this. I don't think these lawsuits are going to be successful, but I certainly do not believe we ought to provide a particular exception, that if somehow they are successful and judgments are rendered so the companies have to go into bankruptcy, somehow they cannot even go into bankruptcy and discharge their debts. That is what we are talking about.

With regard to both of these amendments, they are targeted. They have the earmarks of having a political agenda behind them. They interfere with the objectivity and fairness of the bankruptcy code. We ought not pass them. We ought to reject them both, and we ought to reject the Feingold amendment on rent because we do not need to continue to provide a Federal court trial of matters involving eviction.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the distinguished Senator from the great and sovereign State of Alabama, where he served as attorney general, the great State of Alabama, wish to be recognized any further?

Mr. SESSIONS. The Senator from Alabama yields the floor and thanks the Chair.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will oppose the Levin-Durbin amendment, which would make certain judgments against gun manufacturers dischargeable in Chapter 11 bankruptcy proceedings. I appreciate the sincere views of my friends from Michigan and Illinois who have proposed this amendment as a way to highlight the serious issues of gun violence in this country. I do not believe, however, that this amendment is necessary, and I think it has the potential to set a dangerous precedent in our business bankruptcy system.

First, there is a real question of whether this amendment is necessary. Chapter 11 business bankruptcy is not like Chapter 7 personal bankruptcy where debts are simply wiped out by the bankruptcy decree. In a Chapter 11 bankruptcy, a business's reorganization plan must receive the approval of the court and of the other creditors. It is far from clear that the kind of judgments that are at issue in the Levin amendment will automatically be discharged in a bankruptcy reorganization

In addition, Chapter 11 bankruptcy often provides a useful forum for making sure that all claimants against a company are treated fairly. We have seen that happen with respect to suits against asbestos and IUD manufacturers. Without it, plaintiffs may end up in a race to the courthouse to try to claim the limited assets of a company.

Because I have some doubt that the amendment is necessary, and whether it is advisable even from the point of view of potential plaintiffs against gun manufacturers, I am reluctant to set the precedent of using the business bankruptcy system in this way. I believe this amendment is different from some of the non-dischargeability provisions already applicable to personal bankruptcies or that will be voted on here before we complete this bill. Whereas we can say to someone who is contemplating personal bankruptcy that it is our judgment that certain debts simply should not be discharged because of the circumstances or culpability that led to the bankruptcy in the first place, it is hard to see how delivering that message in this particular narrow business bankruptcy context accomplishes the same goal. I will therefore vote against this amendment.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I oppose this amendment offered to the bankruptcy reform bill by Senator LEVIN that would prohibit gun manufacturers from discharging debt associated with firearm sales.

Currently, the families of victims who have been harmed by a firearm can sue the gun manufacturer for financial damages in civil court. The bankruptcy code allows for the gun manufacturer to file for bankruptcy protection and discharge the debt that the manufacturer may owe to the victim's family. This amendment would prohibit a gun manufacturer from discharging that debt.

I am voting against this amendment because, at this time, I have not received significant evidence to suggest that gun manufacturers are abusing loopholes in the bankruptcy code to avoid paying their liabilities. Additionally, this amendment is not narrowly tailored to gun manufacturers who are illegally selling firearms. It targets the industry as a whole, and would set an unfortunate precedent by legally separating this industry from other industries in the bankruptcy code.

While I understand the concerns of people who would argue that gun manufacturers are abusing the bankruptcy code, I cannot support the separate treatment of certain industries under our nation's bankruptcy laws absent more significant evidence of actual abuse.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The distinguished Senator from New York.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, the Senator from New Jersey seeks recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. I thank the Senator from Kansas for his recognition.

Mr. President, I rise in strong support of the amendment being offered by my friends and colleagues, Senators Levin and Durbin. It would prevent gun manufacturers from using the bankruptcy system to evade responsibility for the damage caused by their deadly products.

It is time for this Congress to catch up with the American people. The public is demanding an end to the epidemic of gun violence that has turned parts of this country into shooting galleries. Criminals are amassing arsenals of deadly weapons and using them to gun down whole groups of people, from Hawaii to Seattle, from Texas to Kentucky, yet Congress has failed to see the lesson in these tragedies.

As a result, the American people in cities across the country are turning to the legal system, desperate for help. Thirty cities and counties are suing gun manufacturers for death and injuries caused by firearms. Individual families are suing to hold gunmakers accountable for the loss or harm brought to loved ones.

These lawsuits are already making significant headway against the formidable power of the gun industry. In the case of Hamilton v. Accutek, a jury in Brooklyn, NY, found several gun manufacturers responsible for the damage caused by that product.

In Georgia, a judge allowed a suit filed by Atlanta against the gun industry to move forward.

In California, a Federal judge barred gun manufacturers from using bankruptcy as a shield when their products caused death or injury.

It was not long ago that gunmakers would laugh when you suggested they take some responsibility for the devastation firearms have caused. But the tears of our citizens have finally wiped away the smile now that 30 cities and counties across the country are taking them to court.

Today, gun manufacturers are talking about making safer firearms and working to keep guns away from criminals, things they never would have considered discussing just a year ago.

They are making these changes because gun victims are holding them accountable in court. Families, friends, and neighbors of gun victims are using the legal system to seek some measure of solace. Congress ought not to get in the way. The Levin-Durbin amendment sends a clear message that the gun industry must face up to its responsibilities, that it will not find an easy escape in the bankruptcy court when families bring valid lawsuits.

And this Congress has to do more to stop gun violence. It is disgraceful that the Congress has not passed reasonable gun safety measures, including my amendment that requires criminal background checks at gun shows. It is especially troublesome when one stops to consider that the Nation's largest gun manufacturer, Sturm, Ruger and Co., has expressed concern about the sale of its guns at gun shows.

The gunmakers themselves are seeing the light, but Congress is still fumbling for the switch. Most Americans assumed the horrific shootings in Columbine would be enough. Most Americans thought the vision of two high school students systematically killing 12 classmates and a teacher and wounding 23 others would finally spur this Congress to action.

April 20 will mark one year since that terrible tragedy at Columbine, and it would be outrageous for Congress to let that day pass without having passed a single piece of gun safety legislation. The Senate did pass sensible gun safety measures as a part of the juvenile justice bill, including the amendment I offered that would prevent criminals from getting guns at gun shows, but we simply need to finalize a good, tough bill and send it to the President.

While this legislation is technically stuck in conference, I am afraid it is being held hostage by the extremists at the National Rifle Association, and we should not allow that to continue. I am going to continue to speak on the Senate floor. I will take whatever other steps are necessary to engage Congress in that action.

When the Congress wants to act quickly, it does. We often push legislation through the process in a matter of days, but not legislation aimed at reducing gun violence. Those measures run into one delay after another, even though the vast majority of the American people are pleading for action. Failing to act by that horrible anniversary date, April 20, will be a travesty. How will we be able to answer the families who ask what we have done to ston the killing?

I urge my colleagues to join me and others in bringing this nationwide epidemic under control. The forces on the other side are powerful, but we have to help keep our families and communities safe and make the gun industry accountable. Support the Levin-Durbin amendment, and then we ought to complete the work on the gun safety measures in the juvenile justice bill.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, how much time is left for this side on the Levin amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield such time as he might consume to the Senator from Idaho.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the distinguished Presiding Officer from Kansas for recognizing the Senator from Idaho.

Mr. President, I said yesterday—and I meant it most sincerely—that I am very respectful of the Senator from Iowa and the Senator from Utah who have tried to reshape bankruptcy law in this country to be fair and equitable and representative of those who find themselves in desperate straits as a result of debt and the need to reorganize and reshape that and, in some instances, to discharge it altogether. We have said historically that those who willfully, maliciously, or recklessly cause endangerment cannot do that. That has been the standard, and that ought to remain the standard.

Today, there is an attempt by the Senator from Michigan to use the bankruptcy code to be politically correct, to be more political than substantive as it relates to the law; that is, to single out an industry and that industry's legal distributors as somehow being separate, special, and unique and, therefore, not being allowed to use the bankruptcy law.

It is a great mistake for the Senate to begin to play that kind of game. That is raw politics, and we have not done that in the past. I am not sure we should ever do it for any reason other than the ones we have already said: a willful, malicious kind of action.

They say this is for gun manufacturers, those folks whom they attempt to paint as a very evil group who produce a legal and legitimate product and sell it through federally licensed dealers. Somehow they are all wrong now because the Senator from Michigan and the Senator from New Jersey say the American people sweepingly demand that we change. The American people do not sweepingly demand this change; they demand that the Justice Department enforce the laws, which we know they have not, and, as a result, some misuse of firearms has certainly gone on in our country.

The issue is not with the Kmarts, it is not with the Wal-Marts, it is not with the local hardware dealer, and it should not be with the manufacturer. But for some reason today, for political correctness in this Chamber, that is exactly what they are attempting to do. I hope my colleagues understand and recognize that we are not shielding somebody who acts willfully and maliciously but who acts knowing their action endangers others. They are not going to be exempt because they are not now and they will not be later.

The Senator from Alabama is right; judges are already dismissing these kinds of frivolous, politically motivated lawsuits, and they will keep filing them hoping someday they can find a judge on whom they can hang it and he will say OK.

If that happens, then what happens? If a company that finds itself in this situation is not allowed to use chapter 11 to reorganize, then they will use chapter 7. What does that mean? It means they will go bankrupt, they will iquidate, they will go overseas, if they need to, to manufacture their product, and jobs on Main Street in a lot of our communities can and will be lost.

Is this a jobs issue? It can be when you straitjacket the law, when you pick winners and losers, when you want to play the politically correct game against someone who, by their judgment, has fallen out of favor with the American people. I hope we do not use bankruptcy law or any other part of the Federal code of this country for that kind of political gamesmanship.

Last year, my colleagues on the other side of the aisle worked overtime trying to make guns an issue, and they failed. The reason they failed is that the American people said: Wait a moment; there are tragedies being perpetrated out there and guns being used in those tragedies, and there are 60,000 gun laws in America and the Justice Department is not enforcing them.

Somehow we just stack more laws up and the world becomes safer? No. The American people are way ahead of us by last year's polling and this year's current polling. They say: Don't do that. More laws do not a safer world make unless the laws are effectively enforced and administered against the criminal element of our society or those who would misuse their rights.

Here the Senator from Michigan is deciding who is going to be criminal and who is going to be malicious by standing in this Chamber and saying: I think I will find these people less than popular in my judgment because back home it might be politically correct with my base of support.

That is not good policy. It may be good politics. We have already found even that politics is not working very well.

I ask my colleagues to join in a motion to table. We should not mess up the bankruptcy law. It ought to be used for the purposes it is being used, and those who find themselves misusing the laws of our land or acting in a reckless, willful, malicious way are going to be treated appropriately within the law; that is, to not discharge their debt or their liability if they find themselves in this kind of an environment.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRASSLEY addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Iowa is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 2762, AS MODIFIED

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I have an opportunity to avoid one vote by sending to the desk a modified amendment. It is amendment No. 2762. So I send it to the desk and ask unanimous consent that the amendment be modified and that the modified amendment be agreed to, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table. If necessary, I ask unanimous consent to lay the pending amendment aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LEVIN. No objection on this side. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 2762), as modified, was agreed to, as follows:

On page 14, strike lines 8 through 14 and insert the following:

"(5)(A) Only the judge, United States trustee, bankruptcy administrator, or panel trustee may bring a motion under section 707(b), if the current monthly income of the debtor, or in a joint case, the debtor and the debtor's spouse, as of the data of the order for relief, when multiplied by 12, is equal to or less than—

"(i) the national or applicable state median family income reported for a family of equal or lesser size, whichever is greater; or

"(ii) in the case of a household of 1 person, the national or applicable State median household income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for 1 earner, whichever is greater.

"(B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), the national or applicable State median family income for a family of more than 4 individuals shall be the national or applicable State median family income last reported by the Bureau of the Census for a family of 4 individuals, whichever is greater, plus $583 for each additional member of that family."

Nothing in this title shall limit the ability of a creditor to provide information to a judge, U.S. trustee, Bankruptcy administrator or panel trustee.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Does the other side of the aisle have speakers?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I think we are ready to yield back whatever time we have, if the other side is ready to yield back whatever time they have.

I withdraw that.

Mr. FEINGOLD addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Wisconsin is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 2748, AS MODIFIED

Mr. FEINGOLD. I believe I have 6 minutes remaining, is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 6 minutes remaining on his amendment.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask if I can use a portion of that time at this point to respond on the landlord-tenant amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I wish to respond briefly to the short remarks the Senator from Alabama made with regard to the landlord-tenant amendment.

I want to reiterate, as the Senator from Alabama acknowledged, that he raised a whole series of concerns out here on the floor in the course of our debate on the amendment a few months ago. And he does not dispute that we addressed every single one of those concerns, as we modified the amendment. We have been very attentive to the fact there were aspects of the amendment that made the Senator, and others, uncomfortable. We made changes in the spirit of compromise in order to try to get something done.

By eliminating the automatic stay, section 311 of this bill is an enormous change in the law in favor of landlords. What the Senator does not make clear is that we are not undoing that change with this amendment. What our amendment does is streamline the process for lifting the automatic stay, rather than eliminating the stay altogether. So instead of a 6- or 8-week period, or longer, to get the stay lifted, our amendment provides a 15-day period, and the State eviction proceedings go forward. But those proceedings cannot go forward when the tenant is paying rent.

All we are saying is that if a person is truly trying to get his or her act together, and is willing, from the time of the bankruptcy filing forward, to pay rent every month, on time, then in those cases the stay should be in place. I think that is enormously reasonable.

For the Senator to suggest this is somehow federalizing this area is the opposite of what is going on. In fact, this bill, as it will undoubtedly pass, will remove Federal court, in effect, in an awful lot of cases that currently are protected by Federal bankruptcy proceedings because of the automatic stay. And so will our amendment. If a tenant misses a rent payment, or is damaging the apartment, all the landlord has to do is file a simple one page certification to that effect with the bankruptcy court and the stay is lifted.

All we are saying is, in some cases there still needs to be that stay in place where someone is honestly trying to stay in that apartment, someone is truly trying to get their life together, and is willing to make the rent payments

So it is simply incorrect to say this is going to gut the provision in the bill. Our amendment still is a dramatic change from current law. It is a change that is very pro-landlord. All we are saying is, let's be fair.

It is not accurate when the Senator from Alabama says there is automatically going to be a hearing at the end of the 15 days. That is not the case. Yes, it is conceivable that tenants could come and seek a hearing if they claimed that the landlord's certification was inadequate or mistaken, but there is no automatic right to a hearing. If those 15 days lapse, that is it. The State eviction proceeding goes ahead, the automatic stay is lifted.

In summary, I think this is a classic case of where, instead of there being a fundamental disagreement that we cannot bridge, we tried very hard to add a few elements of fairness to the bill. I think the Senator from Alabama would have to concede we did do that. It would be appropriate for Members to take a good look at this modified amendment and adopt it to make sure we do not have an unduly harsh change in the law. I cannot believe even the harshest landlord would want to have some of the consequences that could result if we do not adopt the reasonable modifications contained in this amendment.

Mr. President, with that, I ask, how much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator has 3 minutes remaining.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, with the understanding the other side will yield their time, I will yield my time, as well. But if, instead, they wish to speak again, I will keep the 3 minutes. Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, after much deliberation, I am voting in favor of tabling the Feingold amendment on the use of the automatic stay in eviction proceedings.

In California, we have had very serious problems with bankruptcy mills, fly-by-night firms that have advised tenants to avoid eviction by filing for bankruptcy. These firms have even gone so far as to place ads in newspapers which encourage renters to "stop evictions from one to six months by filing for bankruptcy," or promise to "legally stop your eviction for up to 120 days at rock bottom prices."

In 1996 alone, the Los Angles County Sheriff's Department reported 3,800 cases in which the tenant filed for bankruptcy after all state eviction proceedings were exhausted—causing an extra $ 6 million in costs.

While the Feingold amendment is well-intentioned, it does not adequately address the misuse of the "automatic stay" in eviction proceedings.

Let me explain why:

First, once an individual files for bankruptcy, the Feingold amendment only permits an eviction to go forward if the tenant subsequently fails to pay rent again. Thus, a debtor could refuse to pay debts for many months, and when the landlord begins the eviction proceeding, the landlord's hands would be tied if the debtor then starts paying the rent.

This in effect gives a renter the ability not to pay rent, go through bankruptcy, and, by agreeing to pay future rent, get to keep the apartment even if no back rent is paid. In the meantime, he could have had eight or ten or twelve months of free rent.

Second, the amendment gives land-lords the incentive to evict tenants immediately upon non-payment. If, according to the Feingold amendment, the landlord begins eviction proceedings more than 10 days after non-payment of rent and then the tenant files bankruptcy, the eviction would be subject to the automatic stay. This quirk in the amendment could deter landlords from entering into negotiations with tenants and lead to quicker evictions.

Finally, I have concerns about the impact of this amendment on small landlords. I have received letters from small, private landlords about the burden of current bankruptey law. These landlords, who may own just one or two apartments, report that the non-payment of rent by tenants threatens their own ability to meet mortgage payments.

I believe strongly in protecting the rights of tenants. However, the Feingold amendment tips the scales too far. A more balanced approach is needed.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, how much time do we have on the amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 15 minutes.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield myself 2

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I wish to take this particular time to not speak on either one of the amendments before us but to speak about the necessity of passing this bill. Because we have votes on two or three amendments and then final passage, I will not take the time of the Senate at the time of final passage.

As we prepare for final passage on this bankruptcy bill, I remind all my colleagues what we are voting for and on. The most fundamental question we face with this bill is whether or not people should repay their debts.

This bill says that when someone can repay their debts, they are not going to be able to take the easy way out. This bill will end the free ride for wealthy freeloaders and deadbeats who walk away from their debts and pass the bill on to the rest of us, to the consumers, who are honest and who should not pick up the tab for those who are not.

We have a real bankruptcy crisis in need of action. This bill does it without violating the principle that people who are entitled to a fresh start have that fresh start.

As a result of an amendment offered by Senator Torricelli and myself, this bill contains the most sweeping, wideranging set of consumer protections the Senate has enacted in a long time.

Those of us from farm country have an extra reason to vote for this bill since it contains crucial protections for family farmers who may face bankruptcy due to low commodity prices. Chapter 12 will expire in June unless we pass this bill. Under this bill, farmers in chapter 12 will get significant tax relief when they sell off assets.

Mr. President, this bill is fair and balanced and deserves to be passed by an overwhelming vote.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that two newspaper articles on the subject of bankruptcy be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Des Moines Register, May 20, 1999]
THE BANKRUPTCY PARADOX

If you are a single parent in Iowa whose spouse takes the family can, takes the family bank account and takes a powder, society will provide you with something over $300 per month, plus health care and food stamps while you hunt a job. If you don't get on your feet in the alloted time, society may take action to take your kids away.

If you have some assets but have managed to go thousands of dollars in debt by losing big at the casino, society will forgive your debt immediately and let you keep the house and car and continue to gamble. If you're back in the red in a few years, society will heal you out again. And again bail you out again. And again.

That's the paradox posed by bankruptcy laws. The average American declaring bankruptcy is forgiven $11,000 in debt with no obligation to pay it back. Instead, society pays it. The deadbeat's debts show up in the higher prices you pay and the higher interest on borrowed money.

borrowed money.

Don't look for help from the consumer groups or the civil-rights groups or the bank-ruptcy attorneys. They're fighting against efforts to hold debtors more responsible, and blaming the credit-card industry for luring the reckless into bankruptcy. No question but that the industry is guilty of inviting deadbeats to go into debt by its indiscriminate pushing of credit cards. For the industry to now complain because some are defaulting is the height of chutzpah.

Their critics argue that the lenders simply want the government, by tightening bank-ruptcy laws, to become a collection agency for them.

There's plenty of blame for everyone. Too many Americans are flat-out irresponsible in handling money; too many lenders are equally irresponsible in taking advantage of that irresponsibility, and our bankruptcy laws are too eager to make responsible society pay for the mess. As usual.

It's impossible to legislate responsibility. But steps could be taken. We could discourage the credit-card industry from offering credit without checking creditworthiness. We could require that lenders describe credit terms exactly, and explain why paying only the "minimum balance" is like owing your soul to the company store. We could eliminate "Chapter 7" bankruptcies, which free debtors of any responsibility.

debtors of any responsibility.
Legislation tightening up the bankruptcy law has cleared the House, with "yea" votes from the entire Iowa delegation. Unfortunately, it lets state bankruptcy laws continue to allow the bankrupt to keep their homes, no matter how expensive. Millionaires can still sell their homes, buy mansions in certain states like Florida and Texas, and become "bankrupt" millionaires, paying their creditors nothing.

The saddest aspect of the credit mess is in its indictment of the integrity of modern culture. Today's society no longer sees bankruptcy as carrying any stigma, seems no longer to attach any guilt to financial irresponsibility, and teaches that when anything goes wrong in one's personal affairs, it is someone else's fault, and the bailout is someone else's duty.

The price we will eventually pay for this collective soft-headedness could be staggering.

[From the Omaha World-Herald, May 10, 1999]

BANKRUPTCY IS FOR THE NEEDY

The ability to declare bankruptcy and dump one's debts should not become regarded as merely another financial management tool to facilitate irresponsible spending. Such a remedy should be limited to people who truly cannot repay their creditors. That is one of the principles underlying legislation passed by the House despite a veto threat by the White House.

The proposal is an attempt to slow a flood of bankruptcies in the United States. Nearly 1.4 million people filed for personal bankruptcy protection last year, an increase of 95 percent since 1990.

Bankruptcy is a substantial problem. While no official figures exist, creditors have said that the amount of debt that gets wiped out by bankruptcy proceedings each year totals between $30 billion and $50 billion. Some people might say that's good. But such a view would be uninformed. Debts that the law forces creditors to forgive are ultimately paid by others in the form of higher prices.

All sides in the debate agree that current law allows debts to be written off even though the debtor is capable of partial repayment. Studies by the Justice Department and the American Bankruptcy Institute, a nonpartisan think tank in Alexandria. Va., indicate the figure is between $800 million and $1 billion. A study paid for by major credit-card companies came up with $3 billion.

The legislation, pushed by credit card companies, would make it nearly impossible for people earning more than the national median income ($50,000 for a family of four) to wipe out their debts entirely. Rather, the higher income family would have to gradually repay its debts on a schedule set by the court.

Blame for the surge in bankruptcies can be spread widely. Lenders suggest that the number has risen because the laws making it easier to take cover under the bankruptcy laws. Consumer organizations have asserted that lenders, particularly credit-card issuers, are largely at fault because they aggressively push credit—even households with marginal financial resources are targeted by many companies these days.

Clinton administration officials object to the legislation, arguing that it would hurt people who are not capable of repaying their debts

Debtor attorneys and some bankruptcy experts have said that the new law would bring increased paperwork, raising the cost of filing bankruptcy and making it more difficult for low-income families to take advantage of it.

The problems seem small, however, in relation to the worthy principle that would be strengthened. Anyone who can repay his debts should do so. Period, Bankruptcy should not be an easy out for people who live it up beyond their means. The proposed legislation would redirect the law to cut off their escape route.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who seeks time?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, before we have a quorum call, I have a message from Senator SESSIONS, that Senator SESSIONS is willing to have me yield back our time on our side if Senator FEINGOLD is willing to yield back the time on his side.

Mr. FEINGOLD. With that understanding, I yield back my remaining time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. We yield back the time on our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has been yielded back.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: Would the Chair inform the Senators how much time remains? It is my understanding Senator LEVIN has approximately 4 minutes on his amendment. Is that true?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time remaining is 4 minutes for the distinguished Senator from Michigan and 2 minutes for the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

Mr. REID. What other time is remaining on the amendments?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All of the other time has expired.

Mr. REID. I suggest the absence of a quorum, with the time running against both the majority and minority.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, at the end of this matter we are going to vote on these amendments. Then we will have a managers' amendment and finish the bill.

I want to personally express my respect for and appreciation of both Senators Grassley, Torricelli, and others for the hard work they have done in bringing this bill through the subcommittee and through the Judiciary Committee and on to the floor. Senator SESSIONS has been a very solid supporter of good bankruptcy legislation, as well as others on the Judiciary Committee-I hate to leave anybody outbut especially Senators GRASSLEY and TORRICELLI. They deserve a lot of respect for what was a very difficult bill to bring through even a subcommittee, let alone the full committee and the floor.

I am hopeful we will get this bill all the way through and signed by the President. It is a bill that will make a great deal of difference in everybody's lives and, I think, will set the bankruptcy code in the direction it should go and stop some of the fraud and some of the misuses of bankruptcy that are going on currently in our bankruptcy system.

There are some things we will have to work on in conference; there is no question about that. We will try to perfect this bill as best we can, hopefully, so that both sides are pleased with it. There are some problems that naturally do exist, but we will work with our friends on the other side and see what we can do to resolve any conflicts we have.

Again, I thank the distinguished ranking member on the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY. He and his staff have played an excellent role, along with the staffs of Senators GRASSLEY and TORRICELLI, in helping to bring this about.

I thank my own staff for the work they have done. All of these staff members have worked diligently to do what is a very good job on bankruptcy.

Having said that, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, there are 4 minutes remaining for the Senator from Michigan.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. I yield those to the Senator from Vermont, ranking member of the committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Vermont is recognized.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I intend to vote for the Bankruptcy Reform Act to send it to conference in the hope that we can continue to improve the bill so that a balanced bankruptcy reform bill can be signed into law by President Clinton this year.

We have adopted 45 amendments during the floor debate on this bill—amendments offered by Republicans and Democrats.

During the course of our floor debate, Senators from both sides of the aisle have come forward to made bipartisan progress to improve this bill from that reported by the Judiciary Committee. I want to thank Chairman HATCH and Senator GRASSLEY for working with us, with me and Senator REID and Senator TORRICELLI, and with the proponents of many amendments. This debate has not been easy with more than 300 amendments filed to the bill back in November. We have worked through those amendments.

Let there be no confusion: This is certainly not the bill that I would have drafted, even now after the amendment process. This is not as good or as balanced a bill as that which the Senate passed by a 97 to one vote in 1998. Still, it has been significantly improved in its bankruptcy provisions through a bipartisan amendment process.

We have worked in good faith with the Republican managers to have an open debate. This is how the Senate works and how it should work. From a total of 320 amendments, we have now worked through them all. That is a bipartisan accomplishment of which we can all be proud.

I have tried during the course of this consideration to protect the rights of Democratic Senators to offer and debate their amendments. While we have not always prevailed after a vote, we have at least been faithful to our Senate tradition and preserved the opportunity to offer, debate and vote in relation to those amendments.

In some significant regard, we have been successful in improving this bill. Over the course of the last three years we have been able to help reshape the bill to protect child support payments as a priority in bankruptcy.

We added modest but essential credit industry reforms to the bill. The millions of credit card solicitations made to American consumers the past few years have caused, in part, the rise in consumer bankruptcies. The credit card industry should bear some responsibility for these problems. The improvements to the Truth In Lending Act that we have been able to add to this measure provide for more disclosure of information so that consumers may better manage their debts and avoid bankruptcy altogether.

We adopted other important amendments to improve the bill, as well. Indeed, we adopted amendments during Senate debate on this bill. I want to list just a few of these important amendments for the record.

The Senate overwhelmingly voted to close the homestead exemption loophole in the Bankruptcy Code. By a vote of 76 to 22, the Senate adopted the Kohl-Sessions amendment to cap any homestead exemption at $100,000. In States such as Florida and Texas, debtors have been permitted to take an unlimited exemption from their creditors for the value of their home. This has lead wealthy debtors to abuse their State laws to protect million dollar mansions from creditors. This has been a real abuse of bankruptcy's fresh start protection.

We adopted the Leahy-Murray-Feinstein amendment to clarify that expenses to protect victims of domestic abuse are necessary expenses in a bankruptcy proceeding. We adopted a Feingold amendment to clarify the long-term expenses of a debtor caring for a nondependent parent or relative are necessary expenses in a bankruptcy proceeding. We adopted the Kennedy amendment to protect a debtor's Social Security benefits in a bankruptcy proceeding. These are good amendments that improve the bill.

We adopted the Grassley-Torricelli-Specter-Feingold-Biden amendment to provide bankruptcy judges with the discretion to waive filing fees for lowcome debtors. Bankruptcy is the only civil proceeding without in forma pauperis filing status and this amendment corrects that anomaly. And we adopted the Feingold-Specter amendment that struck the bill's requirement that a debtor's attorney must pay a trustee's attorney fees if the debtor is not "substantially justified" in filing for chapter 7. That requirement could have discouraged honest debtors from filing for chapter 7 for fear of paying future attorney fees. Together these amendments improve the fairness of bankruptcy proceedings.

We adopted the Leahy amendment that struck the bill's mandate for all debtors to file past tax returns and instead permits parties in interest to request tax information if needed. The wasteful provision stricken by my amendment should save taxpayers an estimated $24 million over the next five years by cutting down on unnecessary storage costs and paperwork burdens.

We adopted the Reed-Sessions amendment to protect debtors by giving them adequate information for decisions about reaffirmations of unsecured and low-value secured debt. We adopted the Sarbanes-Durbin amendment on disclosure of consumer credit information

Forty-three amendments were adopted to the Committee bill, many made important improvements, many on a bipartisan basis.

while Unfortunately. we made progress on the underlying bill in many regards, it still lacks the balance that it needs to become good law and remains tilted too far toward making taxpayers and the bankruptcy courts pay for the excesses of the credit industry. It is my hope that with the help of the Administration and the continuing cooperation of Chairman HATCH and Senator Grassley and our House counterparts that we can continue to improve this measure during the course of a House-Senate conference and report a consensus bill that we can all proudly support

Most threatening to the prospects of this bill becoming law are the nonrelevant, nongermane amendments adopted last November to this bill. Last year, Senate adoption of those nonrelevant, nongermane amendments quite properly led to a presidential veto threat. I will work in the House-Senate conference to have those amendments removed from the conference report and final bill. If they are not, I have grave doubt whether any bankruptcy reform bill can become law this year.

Regrettably the Senate rejected the Kennedy amendment to provide a real minimum wage increase and, on a virtual party line vote, chose to adopt an amendment that includes unpaid tax breaks and a watered down increment in the minimum wage for working people. The President noted that the Republican majority used its amendment "as a cynical tool to advance special interest tax breaks."

Last year, the Senate also adopted by a one-vote margin, a poison pill amendment regarding sentencing policy. I opposed this amendment because it attempted to solve the unfair discrepancy between sentences for powder and crack cocaine in precisely the wrong way—by increasing the use of mandatory minimums for those who possess, import, manufacture, or distribute powder cocaine, without taking any steps to reduce the use of disproportionate mandatory minimums for those who commit crack cocaine offenses.

I have repeatedly stated my objections to the shortsighted use of mandatory minimums in the battle against illegal drugs, and my objections are all the more grave when an attempt is made to increase the use of mandatory minimums through provisions placed in the middle of a unrelated bill offered at the end of a session. Returning to the failed drug policies of the recent past is not the way to enact a fair and balanced bankruptcy reform bill.

The bipartisan methamphetamine legislation included in that amendment was passed separately at the end of the last session. Accordingly, the only portion of that amendment worth voting for has already been passed separately. That nonrelevant, nongermane amendment should also be jettisoned in conference.

The Senate's actions last year in adopting the two Republican nonrelevant and nongermane amendments were both unfortunate and unwise. I hope the House-Senate conference committee will discard these two poison pill amendments as we craft a final bankruptcy reform bill that can become law.

I look forward to working with the Senate and House conferees to improve the Bankruptcy Reform Act in conference. I hope the majority has learned from the mistakes made during the bankruptcy reform conference in the last Congress two years ago. This year, we should work together to make further improvements and add balance to the Bankruptcy Reform Act.

Finally, I want to commend Chairman HATCH and Senator GRASSLEY for their management of this bill and thank Senator Reid, our Assistant Democratic Leader, for all his effort and assistance in connection with this matter.

Senator GRASSLEY has persevered in this effort when lesser men would have given up and he continues to work with us in good faith to craft reform legislation.

Chairman Hatch has returned to his important leadership responsibilities in the Senate without missing a step. He is a legislator of the first order with whom I am glad to work on many matters. Today we culminate our work together on initial Senate passage of the Bankruptcy Reform Act so that we can continue our efforts in a House-Senate conference.

Senator REID has worked with me to protect the rights of Democratic Senators and to improve the bill. I have thanked him many times in the days and weeks that we have been on the Senate floor together working to improve this bill and do so, again, today.

I look forward to working together with Chairman HATCH, Senator GRASS-LEY, Senator TORRICELLI, the House conferees, and the Clinton Administration on a conference report that leads to enactment of a fair and balanced Bankruptcy Reform Act.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, we yield back the remainder of the time on our side.

Mr. LEAHY. We will on this side, too.

AMENDMENT NO. 2763

The PRESIDING OFFICER. By previous agreement, the amendment pending is on the Schumer amendment No. 2763, with 4 minutes equally divided for final argument and explanation. Who seeks time?

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, the distinguished Senator from New York is coming to the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum until we start the 2 minutes of debate on each side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I reiterate to my colleagues how important this amendment is. Six years ago, the rule of law was challenged in this country because some who believed that they had more moral authority than the rest of us could take the law into their own hands and commit acts of violence against clinics, against doctors, against health care workers. They could harass; they could threaten; they could blockade, because they thought they had more moral authority than the rest of us.

The FACE law, a bipartisan law even supported by Henry Hyde, caused that violence to decline significantly. Now they have found a new way against these clinics; that is, once a judgment is made against them because they have violated the law, to hide behind the false shield of bankruptcy.

We will see violence increase. We will see a woman's right to choose impinged upon if we don't pass the Schumer-Reid-Snowe-Jeffords amendment. This is not an issue of simply pro-choice or pro-life. This is an issue about violence against women. This is an issue about the rule of law in America. I urge my colleagues to support the Schumer amendment and preserve a woman's right to make her own decision on the issue of choice.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Utah is recognized.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, many Members have come to different conclusions as to the need for this amendment concerning the dischargeability of debts related to abortion clinic violence. It is clear from today's debate, nobody in the Congress supports violence at abortion clinics, or at any other venue. Those of us who support bankruptcy reform do not believe that the bankruptcy laws should be used to shield any acts of violence.

Many of us believe that current law already precludes those found guilty of violent activities at abortion clinics from discharging debts arising from such activity in bankruptcy. But apparently the sponsors of the amendment believe there is more than can be done in this area.

Although I believe this amendment to be tremendously flawed, the majority leader, Senator Grassley, and I recommend that members on both sides vote for this amendment. We will, in good faith, in conference correct the amendment and resolve these problems at that time. With this amendment accepted, nobody will be able to politically demagogue this issue in the context of true bankruptcy reform.

We pledge to work with our friends on both sides of the aisle who are interested in this issue during conference to make sure that the law is clear, that with due respect for the first amendment, debts arising from violent acts cannot be discharged in bankruptcy.

Mr. President, have the yeas and nays been ordered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. They have not.

Mr. HATCH. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment of the Senator from New York.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Montana (Mr. BURNS) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCAIN) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) would vote "no."

The result was announced—yeas 80, nays 17, as follows:—

[Rollcall Vote No. 2 Leg.]

YEAS-80

Edwards

Abraham

Akaka Feingold Mack Ashcroft Feinstein McConnell Baucus Mikulski Ba.vh Gorton Moynihan Bennett Graham Murkowski Biden Grassley Murray Bingaman Gregg Reed Bond Hagel Reid Boxer Harkin Robb Breaux Hatch Rockefeller Brvan Hollings Roth Hutchison Byrd Santorum Campbell Inhofe Sarbanes Chafee, Lincoln Inouye Schumer Cleland Jeffords Shelby Cochran Johnson Smith (OR) Collins Kennedy Snowe Conrad Kerrev Specter Coverdell Kerrv Stevens Craig Kohl Thomas CrapoLandrieu Daschle Lautenberg Thurmond Dodd Leahy Torricelli Domenici Levin Warner Dorgan Wellstone Lieberman Durbin Lincoln Wyden

NAYS-17

Allard Grams Roberts Brownback Helms Sessions Bunning Hutchinson Smith (NH) DeWine Kyl Thompson Enzi Lugar Voinovich Gramm Nickles

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING-2

Burns McCain

The amendment (No. 2763) was agreed to.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HATCH. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, could we have order, please.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senate will be in order. Senators will cease all conversation or retire to the Cloakrooms.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I ask unanimous consent the next series of votes be limited to 10 minutes in length.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I did want to thank the Presiding Officer. I know he has had a busy day and evening and night. I thank him for coming back and joining those of us who supported this amendment.

I will not object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered. There remains 4 minutes equally divided on the Feingold amendment.

The Senator from Wisconsin is recognized.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, my amendment is designed to lessen the harsh effects of section 311 of the bill on tenants, while at the same time protecting the legitimate financial interests of landlords.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, could we have order in the Chamber, please?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators will cease audible conversation. Even on the dais.

The Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, current law provides for an automatic stay of eviction proceedings upon the filing of a bankruptcy case. Landlords can apply for relief from that stay so eviction can proceed, but under current law the process often takes several months. Section 311 of the bill eliminates the stay in all landlord-tenant cases so eviction can proceed immediately.

My amendment would allow tenants to remain in their apartments as they try to sort out the difficult consequences of bankruptcy, if and only if they are willing to pay the rent that comes due after they file for bankruptcy. If the tenant fails to pay the rent, the stay can be lifted 15 days after the landlord provides notice to the court that the rent has not been paid. So no hearing and no delay. If the reason for the eviction is drug use or property damage, the stay can also be lifted after 15 days. Under the amendment, this 15-day notice period does not apply if the tenant has filed for bankruptcy previously. In other words, in the case of repeat filings, the automatic stay would never take effect, just as under section 311 in the bill.

Under my amendment, therefore, you could never live rent free as some of the opponents suggest. The debtor has to pay rent after filing for bankruptcy. If a debtor misses a rent payment, the stav will be lifted after 15 days. So the amendment gets at the abuse and it protects the rights and economic interests of the landlord. What it does eliminate is the punitive aspect of the bill. We have modified this so it is fair. The major reform in favor of landlords still holds, but there has to be some fairness and balance with regard to the effect of the bill on evictions. That is what I am trying to protect through this amendment.

I vield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROB-ERTS). The time allotted to the distinguished Senator has expired. The Senator from Iowa is recognized for 2 minutes. The Senate will be in order.

The Senator from Iowa?

Mr. GRASSLEY. I yield my time to the Senator from Alabama.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Chair. You got it right.

Mr. President, I must register my strongest opposition to this amendment. It continues the one thing that causes so much grief. It makes a Federal case out of eviction proceedings. We know that in Los Angeles 3,886 bankruptcy cases were filed in 1996 simply to delay the eviction cases that were pending in the State court. In other words, if you file for eviction, under the current law when a person files bankruptcy, that eviction case is stayed. It then goes to bankruptcy court.

The landlord, many of whom are individual people without great wealth, have already hired a lawyer to handle the eviction and now has to hire a Federal court bankruptcy lawyer to go into Federal court. After they win, as they always do because an expired lease is not an asset of the estate and cannot be subject to the control of the bankruptcy judge, they have to then go back to State court, ask the State judge to pick up the litigation, and proceed.

The 15-days that the Senator suggests is better than his first amendment, but it does in no way deny the person from going to Federal court. They can then have a hearing after the 15 days. They can contest whether the tenant used drugs or not in Federal court. They are evicting them from the apartment because of drug use or other reasons.

We simply should not do this. The true fact is that eventually all these contests in bankruptcy court are eventually lost. Why go through the process? Let the State court eviction proceedings hold sway and make the decisions where they have always been made.

Mr. FEINGOLD. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). The yeas and nays have been requested. Is there a sufficient second?

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There appears to be a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2748, as modified. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) would vote "yea."

The result was announced—yeas 54, nays 43, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 3 Leg.]

YEAS—54

Abraham	Bunning	Coverdell
Allard	Campbell	Craig
Ashcroft	Chafee, Lincoln	Crapo
Bennett	Cochran	DeWine
Bond	Collins	Domenici
Brownback	Conrad	Enzi

einstein	Inhofe	Santorum
Frist	Kyl	Sessions
Forton	Lieberman	Shelby
Framm	Lincoln	Smith (NH)
Frams	Lott	Smith (OR)
Frassley	Lugar	Snowe
Fregg	Mack	Stevens
Iagel	McConnell	Thomas
Iatch	Murkowski	Thompson
Helms	Nickles	Thurmond
Hutchinson	Roberts	Voinovich
Hutchison	Roth	Warner

NAYS-43

Akaka	Feingold	Mikulski
Baucus	Graham	Moynihan
Bayh	Harkin	Murray
Biden	Hollings	Reed
Bingaman	Inouye	Reid
Boxer	Jeffords	Robb
Breaux	Johnson	Rockefeller
Bryan	Kennedy	Sarbanes
Byrd	Kerrey	Schumer
Cleland	Kerry
Daschle	Kohl	Specter
Dodd	Landrieu	Torricelli
Dorgan	Lautenberg	Wellstone
Durbin	Leahy	Wyden
Edwards	Levin

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING—2

urns McCain

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 2658

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under a previous order, there are 4 minutes divided on the Levin amendment. Who yields time?

The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, my amendment very simply provides that gun manufacturers or distributors cannot evade responsibility for damages which are caused by their reckless or negligent conduct or their fraudulent conduct by reorganizing in bankruptcy.

The question has been raised, why single out one industry? The answer is, there are 18 exemptions in the bankruptcy law. We have singled out 18 different instances where public policy is such that we have decided people should not be able to discharge their debts. For instance, students who take out student loans cannot discharge their obligations in bankruptcy. So where public policy indicates we should say something is not dischargeable, we have done that on 18 different occasions.

This amendment is strongly supported by the League of Cities and by the Conference of Mayors. About 30 cities have initiated lawsuits, cities from all parts of the country: New Orleans, Chicago, Atlanta, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and San Francisco being among them.

This is a response to a tactic which is being used by a number of gun manufacturers that are being sued for reckless or negligent or fraudulent conduct, saying: No, we are going to hold you accountable. You cannot reorganize yourself in bankruptcy out of accountability and responsibility for the damages that have been caused by your own reckless or negligent conduct.

I hope this amendment will pass. It has the support of the Violence Policy Center which points out that the gun industry is the only industry that is exempt from Federal health and safety regulations. There is no other industry explicitly exempt except for firearms manufacturers. Insisting they not be able to escape liability for their own reckless or negligent conduct is certainly in keeping with the exemption they sought from Federal health and safety regulations since judicial liability is the only way in which they can be held accountable.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator has expired.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I have said before, this amendment bars firearm manufacturers and sellers including retailers, from business reorganization under the bankruptcy code by not allowing the discharge of debts that might result from one of these recently filed tort suits. That means a major retailer could go bankrupt and would not be able to reorganize to be able to pay off their debts. It would just gradually be sold off to meet the needs of this particular amendment. Manufacturers that could pay off injured parties substantially in full over time would simply not be able to do so under this amendment. Instead, they would be forced into liquidation.

It is both poor policy and a dangerous precedent to single out an unpopular industry for unfavorable treatment under the bankruptcy code. This is political correctness gone awry. As I recall, there are 18 exemptions on the personal side but none on the corporate side in this bill so far. Let us keep the bankruptcy laws nondiscriminatory in the sense of attacking and loading it up on an unpopular business just for political purposes. That is the wrong political correctness to be used. In this particular case, it just doesn't make sense. We ought to want them to go into reorganization so the debts could be paid and the business might be able to survive. That is why this amendment needs to be voted down.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 2658. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll. Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) would vote "no."

The result was announced—yeas 29, nay 68, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 4 Leg.]

YEAS-29

Akaka Biden Boxer Chafee, L. Cleland Daschle Durbin Feinstein	Hollings Inouye Johnson Kennedy Kerry Kohl Lautenberg Levin	Murray Reed Reid Rockefeller Sarbanes Schumer Torricelli
Feinstein Graham Harkin		Wellstone Wyden

NAYS-68

Dorgan	Lott
Edwards	Lugar
Enzi	Mack
Feingold	McConnell
Frist	Murkowski
Gorton	Nickles
Gramm	Robb
Grams	Roberts
Grassley	Roth
Gregg	Santorum
Hagel	Sessions
Hatch	Shelby
Helms
Hutchinson	Smith (NH)
Hutchison	Smith (OR)
Inhofe	Snowe
Jeffords	Specter
Kerrey	Stevens
Kyl	Thomas
Landrieu	Thompson
Leahy	Thurmond
Lieberman	Voinovich
Lincoln	Warner
	Edwards Enzi Feingold Frist Gorton Gramm Grams Grassley Gregg Hagel Hatch Helms Hutchinson Hutchison Inhofe Jeffords Kerrey Kyl Landrieu Leahy Lieberman

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING-2

Burns McCain

The amendment (No. 2658) was rejected.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEAHY. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill (S. 625) was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading and was read the third time.

BANKRUPTCY JUDGESHIPS

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, the Judicial Conference recommends that Congress authorize 24 new bankruptcy judgeship positions in districts where bankruptcy filings and judicial caseloads are particularly burdensome. S. 625 authorizes 18 of these judgeships; these same positions were included in the conference report to the bankruptcy legislation in the 105th Congress. S. 625 does not, however, include six positions that the Judicial Conference submitted to Congress on March 24, 1999.

I thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts for working so closely with me in my efforts to include these judges in the pending legislation. The chairman conducted a joint hearing with the House Judiciary Committee on November 2, 1999 to consider these six additional judgeships and has given them appropriate scrutiny. I have consulted with the Chairman both before and after this hearing regarding these judgeships, and I believe I have his commitment to address these positions when S. 625 is conferenced with the House.

Mr. GRASSLEY. If the Senator from Georgia will yield. I can assure him that during the conference with the House on S. 625, I will in good faith address the Judicial Conference's recommendation for the additional judgeships. The hearing in November was indeed useful in helping us assess the merits of authorizing these additional judgeships. Subsequent to that hearing, my staff and I have engaged in discussions with the Administrative Office to clarify some remaining questions and concerns. I can report that most of my requests have been satisfactorily addressed. However, I am still awaiting some additional information, and so I am reluctant to add these positions to S. 625 at this time.

Mr. COVERDELL. I thank the Chairman for his efforts and assurances. As a fiscal conservative myself, I understand and appreciate his dedication to ensuring that these positions are truly warranted.

One of these new judgeships would help address a judicial caseload problem in Georgia. This new position would actually provide relief to two Georgia districts where caseloads far exceed the national average. By authorizing a new judgeship for the Southern District, an existing judgeship that is currently split between the Southern and Middle districts would move full-time to the Middle District.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank the Senator for his statement and for his efforts in moving this issue forward.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise today to voice my concern over the bankruptcy bill that is before the Senate. I do this not because I am an expert on bankruptcy law, but because I have been involved with social policy for almost a half-century and can tell you that this is no way to reform the bankruptcy system.

A May 9, 1999, New York Times editorial said that the House bill is "bankruptcy reform that spares the wealthy . . . and makes life harder for poor and middle-class people who file bankruptcy." Representative for HENRY HYDE (R-IL) said the bill is "truly tilted toward the creditors." The Senate bill is not much better. The effect of the bill is not complicatedthe wealthy benefit, the poor suffer. After the President signed the Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Act of 1996—the so-called welfare reform bill-I stated that "this act terminates the basic Federal commitment of support for dependent children in hopes of altering the behavior of their mothers." That bill broke the Social Contract of the 1930s. We would care for the elderly, the unemployed, the dependent children. Drop the latter; watch the others fall. We broke the social contract then, and will again if this bill passes.

We were born a nation of debtors. A large number of early European settlers came here indentured. The British rejection of debtor relief laws in Massachusetts and Virginia was one of the precipitating factors of the Revolutionary War. In justifying its actions, the British Board of Trade noted that 9 out of every 10 creditors resided in Great Britain—the Americans were the debtors. Shays' Rebellion, which followed the War of Independence, was a direct response by farmers to the courts' attempt to imprison fellow farmers for their debts.

Daniel Webster understood the tension and possible dangers that could arise between debtor and creditor. Speaking in Congress on the Bankruptcy Act of 1841, the Massachusetts statesman remarked on the post-Revolutionary crisis:

The relation between debtor and creditors, always delicate, and always dangerous, whenever it divides society, and draws out the respective parties into different ranks and classes, was in such condition in the years 1787, 1788, and 1789 as to threaten the overthrow of all government; and a revolution was menaced, much more critical and alarming than that through which the country had recently passed.

In an attempt to address the relationship between debtor and creditor. the U.S. Constitution was adopted with explicit bankruptcy authority granted to Congress. Congress came up with the Bankruptcy Act of 1800, which was similar to the English law in effect at the time of independence. The 1800 Act was repealed in 1803. One of the unfortunate stories from this period was that of Robert Morris, who had the honor to sign the Declaration of Independence, the Articles of Confederacy, and the U.S. Constitution. After creating the budget for the early American government and heading the Yorktown campaign, he experienced considerable misfortune speculating on land out West, incurring debts that landed him in Philadelphia's Prune Street Jail from 1798 to 1801. Morris was eventually relieved by the Bankruptey Act of 1800.

Following the devastating Panic of 1837, the controversial Bankruptcy Act of 1841 became law. It was repealed 18 months later. The 1841 Act for the first time in British or American law allowed the debtor to file for bankruptcy. Until this time, only creditors could put a debtor into bankruptcy, which made it easier to collect their debts. Although the Supreme Court did not address the 1841 Act before it was repealed in 1843 because of political resistance, its constitutionality was upheld at the circuit level, bringing voluntary bankruptcy by non-merchants within the scope of Congress' bankruptcy power.

Under the 1841 Act, 33,739 debtors were adjudicated bankrupt, of whom only 765 were denied a discharge. (If you were to declare bankruptcy in Illinois, your attorney very likely would have been Abraham Lincoln.)

The panic of 1857 and the devastation of the Civil War brought enactment of the Bankruptcy Act of 1867, repealed in 1878. The 1867 Act allowed the debtor to retain increased exempt property under state or Federal exemptions and required a 50 percent distribution to creditors and creditor consent as preconditions to a discharge. But, the 1867 Act contained so many grounds for denying discharge that fewer than one-third of the debtors filing under the Act ever received one discharge.

These three laws were born and died amid controversy. But taken together, they contained grand innovations that greatly helped ordinary American debtors: Individual debtors were given voluntary access to bankruptcy relief, to broader state exemptions, and to the discharge of their debts with less creditor approval.

The Bankruptcy Act of 1898, largely with us today in concept although supplanted by the 1978 Bankruptcy Reform Act and subsequent amendments, consolidated and improved many of these innovations for the benefit of debtors.

In 1934 the United States Supreme Court encapsulated the American view toward the discharge of individual debtors through bankruptcy as follows:

One of the primary purposes of the Bankruptcy Act is to relieve the honest debtor from the weight of oppressive indebtedness and permit him to start afresh free from the obligations and responsibilities consequent upon business misfortunes. This purpose of the act has been again and again emphasized by the courts as being of public as well as private interest, in that it gives to the honest but unfortunate debtor who surrenders for distribution the property which he owns at the time of bankruptcy, a new opportunity in life and a clear field for future effort, unhampered by the pressure and discouragement of pre-existing debt.

America is truly the land of the second chance. To repeat the Supreme Court, our nation believes in a bankruptcy system that "gives the honest but unfortunate debtor who surrenders for distribution the property which he owns at the time of bankruptcy, a new opportunity in life and a clear field for future effort, unhampered by the pressure and discouragement of pre-existing debt." This nation has been blessed with a hard-working, independent, creative, and risk-taking citizenry. We also have embraced a free-market economy that has brought us great wealth and prosperity. But with this economic system comes great risks (and opportunities) for our citizens, and relatively meager safety nets are provided. The fresh start that bankruptcy provides is one of those safety nets. Let's not shred that safety net with this bill.

The bill before us contains an arbitrary means test that makes it harder for low to moderate income people to wipe out their debts and start clean, includes provisions favoring the credit card industry, provides inadequate consumer protections, incorporates insufficient privacy safeguards, and will have a disproportionately negative impact on individuals with lower incomes, minorities, and older Americans

This bill punishes the wrong people. We seem hell-bent to punish elderly people who incur unexpected health bills or individuals who unexpectedly lose their jobs. Instead, why don't we address the credit card industry's predatory practices? Credit card issuers mailed out 3.45 billion—not million but billion—solicitation letters last year. Professor Elizabeth Warner of Harvard Law School said that banks make so much money on unpaid credit card balances—thanks to interest rates much higher than those of home mortgages, car loans or other forms of "secured" debt-that they deliberately lure people into borrowing beyond their means. Now, they are trying to get Congress to rig rules so their own loan losses will be reduced. This is special interest legislation at its worst.

Locke wrote that government has a fiduciary responsibility to act in the best interest of the people. If we pass this bill, we will be breaching that duty and undermining the fundamental sense that our government is founded on the twin principles of decency and fairness, a unique system that believes in extending a helping hand rather than a boot across the throat.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, the Senate has been debating, S. 625, the bankruptcy reform bill for weeks. I am happy to say that many Democratic amendments have been accepted which have brought much needed balance to the bill.

The issue of bankruptcy is a highly technical and convoluted area of our law replete with terms like cram downs, reaffirmations, panel trustees, automatic stays, nondischargeable debt, priority debt, secured debt, and even something known as a "superdischarge."

And the bankruptcy code is not only complex and arcane. It is the fulcrum point of a delicate balance. When you push one thing, almost invariably something else will give. That's because no matter how hard you try there is a limited resource pie. All we do many times is increase the fighting over the small pie—and usually no one really wins that fight.

The Senate made several improvements to ease the burdens on low income debtors while making sure that wealthy debtors pay their fair share. The Senate adopted my amendment to allow debtors to attend mandatory credit counseling by telephone or over the Internet, which will make it easier for debtors with transportation difficulties. By adopting a cap on the homestead exemption of $100,000, Congress will continue the longstanding policy of giving a debtor a fresh start—not a windfall.

Improvements were also made to make the bill more cost effective and less expensive for taxpayers. My amendment to streamline the means test for debtors between 100 and 150% of the median income was adopted and will save the taxpayers $8 million a year in administrative costs. In addition, Senator Leahy's amendment to exempt certain debtors from the requirement of filing 3 years of tax returns will reduce both costs and undue burdens on low income debtors.

Finally, tremendous progress was made on the bill in the area of credit card disclosure. If we are going to make it harder for people to file for bankruptcy, then we need to provide them enough information to ensure they are making informed decisions about their credit.

I was happy to join Senator SAR-BANES in an effort to require creditors to warn consumers about interest costs and provide toll free numbers where debtors can learn how long it will take to eliminate a credit card balance by making only the minimum monthly payment.

I will be watching the bankruptcy conference closely to ensure that all of the hard fought amendments adopted on the Senate floor remain in the bill through conference. If these provisions are stripped out in conference, then this bill will likely face the same fate as last year's bill—it will never become law.

Because of improvements in areas of concern to me, I will vote for the underlying bankruptcy legislation, but I want to make clear my opposition to the Republican minimum wage measure. It was clear from last year's debate and it's clear today that the Republican minimum wage does little to help America's lowest wage earners. In fact, it's a slap in the face for all of our hardworking citizens who strive every day to lift themselves out of poverty and into a better way of life.

Over the next three years, a minimum wage worker would receive over $1,200 less under the GOP version than the Democratic proposal. Let's break that down, Mr. President, into real terms. For America's lowest wage earners: $1,200 a year translates into over four months worth of groceries, over three months of rent, almost half a year worth of utilities. For the lucky ones, that's one full year of tuition and fees at a two-year college. Yet, the Republicans want to deny their constituents this opportunity and I can't understand why.

Mr. President, this Republican minimum wage proposal sounds vaguely familiar to us. You may recall how the other side of the aisle tried to stretch out tax refunds for our lowest income workers under the Earned Income Tax Credit. We grant tax relief to those that need it most and then the Republicans turn around and try to delaying their refunds. These types of delaying tactics didn't work for the EITC and they certainly won't work for an increase in the minimum wage.

Something I've heard very little about, and maybe it's because the Republicans don't want you to know about it, is Section Two of their amendment that effectively repeals overtime pay provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act that have been the law for over 60 years. This provision would eliminate the requirement that bonuses, commissions, and other compensations based on productivity, quality, and efficiency be considered part of a worker's "regular rate" of pay for purposes of calculating overtime pay. Because overtime pay is based on one and a half times regular pay, overtime pay is lower if a worker's regular pay is lower. Today, almost 73 million Americans are entitled to overtime pay and the GOP provision jeopardizes their overtime benefits. Think about it. If employers can pay less for overtime, they have a financial incentive to require workers to work overtime without getting the pay they deserve. That's another slap in the face on top of the one they get from this half-hearted attempt to raise their wages from $5.15 an hour.

Mr. President, it's clear that the Democratic bill would do a better job at getting a pay increase to those who need it most. On our side of the aisle, we believe it's not only our obligation, but our duty to help those who need it the most. It is my hope that the conference committee will wake up and remedy this malady that will be imposed on the American people by the Republicans should this bill become law.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I would like to begin by thanking my colleagues, Senators Torricelli and Grassley, for their leadership in putting together the bankruptcy legislation that is before us today. I was one of the co-sponsors of the initial bankruptcy bill and continue to support the legislation that is before us today. I'm concerned, however, that we are including a tax provision which runs counter to the entire essence of the bill.

As we finish debate on this measure, we ought to focus on one overriding theme: responsibility. In the context of bankruptcy, this includes both financial and social responsibility. Debtors need to be more responsible when making decisions about purchasing goods or services. And just as we expect those who purchase goods and services to pay for these benefits, we expect lenders and sellers to be responsible in their business practices. This is going to be a difficult balancing act—both sides are going to have to give a little bit. Right now, I hope that we are closer to fixing many of the problems that needed to be addressed

Financial responsibility, however, is not just relevant for our debate today—it needs to become a theme for this Congress. This bankruptcy bill is based on a simple premise: if you are able to pay your debts, you should. I believe this premise should also be applied to the federal government. For decades, the government spent more than it took in. It ran up a $5 trillion debt. We are now in a position to pay our debts. Before we go on a massive tax-cutting or spending binge, we should focus on reducing our debt. It rings hollow for us to insist upon financial responsibility from individuals and then fail to exercise financial responsibility ourselves.

We should start this session exercising fiscal restraint, and we should begin with this bill. It is ironic that this bill contains a tax cut that costs more than it should and fails to hit its target. Although the tax package contained in this bill is being described as helping small businesses, it is poorly targeted and will provide little help to the businesses that will be most affected by the minimum wage bill.

If minimum wage legislation continues to move forward, I urge my colleagues to look once again at S. 1867, The Small Business Tax Reduction Act of 1999, the bill that Senator BAUCUS and I introduced last November. This tax package offers real relief to those employers who will be most affected by the minimum wage increase. That was the purpose of the minimum wage tax bill, and our bill accomplishes that goal.

For instance, our bill would accelerate the full deduction for self-employed health insurance so that it takes effect immediately instead of delaying it for several more years. Our bill would increase the expensing limit for small businesses so they can purchase new and better equipment. We would also raise the business meals deduction from 50% to 60% to help restaurants accommodate increased labor costs.

At the same time, we would provide estate tax relief for small family-owned farms and businesses. Death is an inappropriate catalyst for the forced sale of a family-held business or farm. Farmers would benefit as our bill would be sure that income averaging does not increase a farmer's potential Alternative Minimum Tax liability. We also provide farmers with a longer period to use their net operating losses if they have them. These are real tax provisions that help real people.

The Small Business Tax Reduction Act of 1999 also contains provisions targeted to geographic areas with the greatest need of economic assistance. The New Markets proposal, for example, would reward employers who operate in economically distressed areas, where the minimum wage is the most prevalent. It also includes a credit that encourages employers to give their lower income employees information technology training. We also expand current empowerment zones credits so that more communities and more people are able to take advantage of these credits. These are all provisions that will provide assistance to areas that are most in need of help.

Moreover, the pension provisions in our bill are designed to address the needs of small employers struggling to develop effective retirement plans for their employees. For example, we would allow small businesses to take plan loans as large businesses can, and we have included Senator BAUCUS' proposal to provide a credit for new small business pension plans. Everyone benefits when small businesses are better able to offer their employees retirement plans.

In short, the tax package I offered accomplishes the purpose of providing relief to those employers who will have higher costs when the minimum wage increases. And it is responsible. It does not squander the surplus that we have fought so hard to achieve, but rather maintains it for debt reduction. At the same time, it protects Social Security Trust Funds from being misallocated to other programs and expenditures. The tax package that is currently contained in the bill is not responsible and must be substantially improved in conference. We are going to face several tough issues this year. I hope that our colleagues agree that this is the time to start.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise today to express my guarded support for the Bankruptcy Reform Act currently before the Senate. The troubling and dramatic rise in the number of bankruptcy filings demands our careful attention, and this legislation—if balanced and fair—will shore up the most significant cracks in our current system, but still grant a "fresh start" to those debtors who truly deserve it.

One of the ways this bill works to eliminate the most egregious abuses of the bankruptcy code is by finally placing a federal cap on the unlimited homestead exemption. This provision, which I introduced with Senators SESSIONS and GRASSLEY, would close an inexcusable loophole which currently allows millionaire deadbeats to keep their luxury homes while their legitimate creditors get left out in the cold. A cap is not only the best policy, it sends the best message: that bankruptcy is a tool of last resort, not a tool for financial planning.

And don't just take my word for it: ask my colleagues in the Senate. At the end of last session, we passed our $100,000 homestead cap by an overwhelming margin of 76–22.

However Mr. President, if this legislation comes out of Conference unbalanced, rest assured that I will be happy to vote against final passage of the bill, as I did last Congress. A major factor in my determination of what constitutes "balance" will be the status of the homestead cap.

That said, I support this bill today because I believe it will repair and improve our bankruptcy system, and help restore the stigma to bankruptcy. But without the homestead cap, this bill will likely fall short of its goal.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, in the 105th Congress, the Senate passed a meaningful bankruptcy reform bill by an almost unanimous vote. I voted for that bill because I thought it was a well-balanced reform bill that would discourage abuse of the system and provide enhanced protections and reasonable information to consumers. The final version of that bill was not approved in the 105th Congress, and so, once again, we engaged in debate over how to restructure the nation's bankruptcy laws. When we started debate on this bill, it was substantially different from the moderate, bi-partisan bill of last Congress. I was particularly concerned with the provisions relative to the means-test and consumer credit card disclosures. However, over the course of this debate, the Senate has adopted more than 40 amendments, making this a more reasonable approach to bankruptcy reform.

As reported out of the Judiciary Committee, the bankruptcy reform bill did not include consumer protections providing reasonable disclosures of unsecured credit such as credit cards. Studies show that bankruptcy filings increase as household debt increases. High debt-to-income ratios makes working Americans more vulnerable to financial emergencies. I am pleased that the Senate accepted an amendment to provide enhanced access to consumer credit information. Creditors will be responsible for warning debtors about potential dangers of paying only minimum monthly payments and will make a toll free number available to the debtor for more specific information. Although this is not as helpful as the Senate's 1998 bill, it is a step in the right direction. The previous bankruptcy bill gave specific information to consumers about the months and years it would take for consumers to pay off their debts by paying the minimum payment and provided them with their total costs in interest and principle. A more detailed disclosure regarding minimum monthly payments will help families exercise personal responsibility and limit financial vulnerability.

In addition, the Senate has made modest steps relative to the bankruptcy bill's means-test. The purpose of a means-test is to prevent consumers, who can afford to repay some of their debts, from abusing the system by filing for Chapter 7. Directing socalled abusive debtors away from Chapter 7, where debts are forgiven, and into Chapter 13, where the debtor must enter into a debt repayment plan, makes sense. But an inflexible means test, with virtually no exceptions, will, in the words of HENRY HYDE, "deprive debtors and their families of the means to pay for their basic needs." I hope that in conference, the Senate-House conferees will work toward establishing a more flexible means-test, one that makes allowances for basic expenses such as transportation, food and

I am pleased that two amendments I sponsored, a credit card redlining study and the prohibition of retroactive interest charges, were accepted by the Senate. The redlining amendment requires the Federal Reserve to conduct a study and report to the Banking committee about whether financial institutions use place of residence as a factor in determining credit worthiness. It is an important study that will bring to light the problem of unequal credit opportunity.

My other amendment seeks to clarify what credit card companies refer to as a "grace period." Credit card lenders use complicated definitions to explain that "grace periods" only apply if the balance is paid in full. For example, assume that a consumer charges an average of $1000 each month and always repays in full on time. If one month, due to an error he writes a check that is $10 less than the full amount he owes, but which is paid on time and is within the "grace period." he probably would expect to pay the $10 charge and the interest on the $10 unpaid balance. However, he is really charged retroactively on the full $1,000 balance to the date the charges were made, even though he had paid 99% of the balance. This consumer's $10 error ends up costing him up to four times that in interest

Current practice by these companies undermines reasonable consumer expectations about what how a grace period for their payment works and results in monetary penalties from the application of interest charges. This amendment makes clear that the definition of a grace period is one where a consumer is extended credit. No finance charge can be imposed on the amount paid before the end of the "grace period."

I have decided to support this bill. However, I am very concerned by the inclusion of non-germane tax provisions which spend $76 billion of the projected non-Social Security surplus over the next ten years. While some of the provisions included in this package make sense, it is premature and unwise for the Congress to begin spending a surplus which is uncertain before we have begun to pay down the national debt and assured that our priorities in protecting Social Security and Medicare, investing in education, and considering other types of tax cuts have been met. For that reason, should this legislation come back from conference with some of these tax provisions or without the modest amendments we adopted in the Senate, I will consider opposing the bill at that time.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I shall vote in favor of S. 625, the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999, in order to restore fiscal responsibility to the nation's bankruptcy code. Last year, a record 1.4 million people declared bankruptcy, which was almost triple the number in 1988 (549.612) and five times the number in 1980 (287,057). That the number of households in severe financial difficulty has risen so dramatically is perplexing, given the prosperous economy, and suggests that some filers are abusing the bankruptcy code to erase debts they are able to pay. The dramatic rise in bankruptcy filings may also suggest that there is no longer a stigma attached to bankruptcy filers, and that the bankruptcy laws are seen more as a financial planning tool rather than a system of last resort. This bill would curb potential abuses of the bankruptcy code by channeling debtors away from chapter 7 liquidation, where a debtor's liabilities are erased, and towards chapter 13 repayment, where debts are reorganized under a repayment plan. While I am not satisfied that this bill will decrease the bankruptcy rate as dramatically as advocates claim, I am convinced that S. 625 is a worthwhile effort in restoring fiscal responsibility.

However, during the bankruptcy debate, the Republican-controlled Senate passed an amendment that would attach $75 billion in tax cuts over ten years to the bankruptcy bill. These tax cuts were adopted in lieu of targeted cuts that would have benefitted low-income and rural families, which I supported, and that would have been fully paid-for by closing down tax loopholes that would force businesses to pay their fair share of taxes. Instead, the Senate adopted a tax package that would not have been paid-for, and would largely benefit high-income taxpayers. This means that Congress may have to borrow needed money or cut spending to vital programs that benefit hundred of thousands of West Virginians in order to pay for these tax cuts. It is almost ironic that Congress attached these unpaid-for tax cuts to the bankruptcy bill. Here we are today voting on a bill that would demand financial prudence of debtors at the same time that Congress is providing for $75 billion in unpaid-for tax cuts.

In addition to these tax cuts, the Senate rejected a minimum wage proposal by Senator Kennedy, which I supported, that would have raised the minimum wage from $5.15 to $6.15 over two years. Instead, the Senate adopted a one dollar rise in the minimum wage over three years that was proposed by Senator DOMENICI. This would effectively delay a pay raise to minimum wage workers, and cost year-round, full-time minimum wage workers approximately $1,200 over three years. I have always supported the minimum wage because of the 11.4 million workers who rely on it to support their families. The two-year minimum wage proposal would have provided an additional $2,000 a year for 11.4 million minimum wage workers. That $2,000 translates into an additional seven months of groceries, five months of rent, almost ten months of utilities, and eighteen months of tuition and fees at a two year college.

My hope and expectation is that the three year minimum wage hike and $75 billion tax cut provisions will be replaced with a two year minimum wage rise and more targeted tax package when the conferees from the House of Representatives and the Senate meet in the coming months to work out the differences between the House- and Senate-passed versions of this legislation. Consequently, I have joined with forty-four other senators in sending a letter to the bankruptcy conferees urging that they remove the Domenici provisions and accept the Kennedy proposal.

Mrs. LINCOLN. Mr. President, I voted for final passage of the Bankruptcy Reform Act today because bankruptcy reform has been desperately needed in this country and I have worked throughout my public career to bring it about. This bill, however, is not without its problems. It is my sincere hope that the Bankruptcy bill that emerges from the Conference Committee will be just that, a Bankruptcy Bill. I believe that the nonbankruptcy and poison pill riders that were added to the bill on the floor should be stripped, or at least reformed in Conference, so that we can move forward on bankruptcy. Our country needs, and we owe to our constituents. a bankruptcy bill that the President will sign.

Mr. President, we made various amendments to this bill which should be readdressed in Conference and changed. For instance, I am pleased that this body passed an increase in the minimum wage for working families in Arkansas. However, I urge my Colleagues in Congress to strengthen this provision in Conference implementing the $1.00 increase over two years instead of three.

I also support tax cuts, however, the tax cuts in this bill are not paid for and will do nothing to help small business and working people. I am especially disappointed that this body failed to pass the needed estate tax relief for family farms and small businesses that was included in the tax amendment offered by the Minority.

The Senate also agreed to an amendment during consideration of this bill designed to combat the spread of methamphetamine use in rural and urban areas. While I agree we must do something to stop the terrible spread of meth use in our country, I voted against that amendment because, as the language stands, it will allow federal education funding to be spent for tuition at private and religious schools. Everyone wants to fight the scourge of drugs. Let's have a clean amendment so we can move forward as a nation and fight against methamphetamine with a concerted effort.

These are just a few examples of what needs to be fixed in this bill. If we really want bankruptcy reform to become a reality we have to craft a bill that the President will sign. Without a hard working conference and bipartisan efforts, this can't possibly happen. I urge my colleagues to work together to bring a clean bill back from the conference, and to bring needed bankruptcy reform home to the American people.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise to support the underlying goal of the bankruptcy bill, which is to promote personal financial responsibility. Bankruptcy filings have increased at an astonishing pace since the last overhaul of the Bankruptcy Code in 1978. In 1978, there were 182,000 consumer bankruptcy filings. Twenty years later in 1998, 1,444,812 people filed for bankruptcy. Bankruptcy has become so commonplace that more than one in a hundred households will file for bankruptcy this year.

The rise in bankruptcy filings is particularly disconcerting given the record expansion of our economy, which this week became the longest expansion in our Nation's history.

Bankruptcy should be a last-resort legal option, and not a vehicle for avoiding personal responsibility. People should not be able to file bankruptcy if they can easily pay back their debts.

Another key aspect of bankruptcy reform is the need to address the growth of consumer credit. It's a simple matter of arithmetic. The typical family filing for bankruptcy in 1998 owed more than one-and-a-half times its annual income in short-term, high-interest debt. This means the average family in bankruptcy with a median income of just over $17,500, and $28,955 in credit card and other short-term high interest debt.

There are over a billion credit cards in circulation—a dozen credit cards for every household in the country. Three-quarters of all households have at least one credit card. Credit debt has doubled between 1993 and 1997 to $422 billion from just over $200 billion.

A constituent from Lakewood, California describes the situation aptly: "What really bugs me about this is that credit card companies send out these solicitations for their plastic cards and then when they get burned, they start crying foul. They want all kinds of laws passed to protect them from taking hits when it's their own practices that caused the problem."

This legislation has taken some steps to address the problem of consumer credit, but more needs to be done.

One of the major reasons that I am supporting the bill is that it includes my amendment to require the Federal Reserve Board to investigate the practice of issuing credit cards indiscriminately, without taking steps to ensure that consumers are capable of repaying their debt, or in a manner that encourages consumers to accumulate additional debt.

The amendment allows the Federal Reserve Board to issue regulations that would require additional disclosures to consumers, and to take any other actions, consistent with its statutory authority, that the Board finds necessary to ensure responsible industry-wide practices and to prevent resulting consumer debt and insolvency.

In addition, I am pleased that the bill requires credit card companies to warn consumers about interest costs, and provide a toll-free phone where they can find out how long it would take to eliminate a balance when just paying the minimum balance each month. Credit card companies also are required to better explain teaser rates and late fees in their solicitations.

The Senate also has made important improvements to this bill, both in the Judiciary Committee and on the floor. In my home state of California, for example, we have suffered from the abusive practices of bankruptcy mills including price gouging of debtors, incompetent service, and fraud. The bill includes an amendment to curb this abusive practice.

However, I remain very concerned about the minimum wage and tax amendments attached to this bill. Let me first say that I am strong supporter of raising the minimum wager. In the four years since Congress last past a minimum wage increase, the U.S. economy has continued to surge at an unprecedented rate.

Nine million new jobs have been added to the economy. More than a million of those are in the retail sector. Unemployment is down and the number of jobs for women, African-Americans, Hispanic Americans, and teenagers has grown. Clearly the increase in the minimum wage has helped working families and it is time to do so again.

The problem with the minimum wage increase in this bill is that it is spread out over too long a period of time. The amendment would raise the minimum wage by $1 in three steps of 35 cents, 35 cents, and 30 cents.

California's minimum wage is $5.75. Under this proposal, working families there would not benefit at all in the first year, receive only a 10 cent wage increase in the second year, and would not feel the full increase until 2003. That is simply unacceptable.

The time to raise the minimum wage is not when the economy is ailing. It's when the economy is flush and that time is now.

Congress should raise the minimum by $1 over two years as proposed by Democrats and we should do it now.

The bill also contains a $77 billion tax package whose benefits are skewed toward upper-income taxpayers. Specifically, the package has health insurance and long-term care provisions which would disproportionately benefit higher income taxpayers. I am also concerned about the fairness of the package's pension provision which would principally benefit highly-compensated employees.

In summary, I think there is a lot of good in the bankruptcy bill, and I intend to vote for it because it can still yield a worthwhile final product. However, extensive improvements are still needed in conference. The Conference negotiations must resolve the minimum wage and tax problems, and other deficiencies is the bill.

I need to work with my Senate colleagues to implement these needed changes.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today we will vote overwhelmingly in support of a measure to dramatically reform the bankruptcy system. I join my colleagues in support of this bill, because I believe it is time we repair the bankruptcy system and I believe that this bill should progress to conference. However, the bill we support today is seriously flawed. It is my hope that some of the bill's more serious problems will be addressed in conference.

The Bankruptcy Reform Act fails to provide disclosures which would tell consumers how long it would take to pay off their balance at the minimum rate and what their total costs in interest and principle would be. Without this simple provision, American consumers will not receive the kind of specific information that will encourage them to pay their balance off more quickly, and avoid falling into debt in the first place.

I am also concerned that this bill fails to protect women and children who are entitled to child support and alimony. The bill increases the amount of debt for which debtors will remain liable through the creation of new types of nondischargeable debts to credit card companies and by permitting coercive "reaffirmation" agreements. With more competition for limited debtor resources, the bill fails to insure that parents and children will prevail over credit card companies and banks.

This bill includes an arbitrary and inflexible means test to determine which debtors must file Chapter 7 bankruptcy instead of Chapter 13. It is based on IRS standards not drafted for bankruptcy purposes that do not take into account individual family needs for expenses like transportation, food and rent. If we are going to shift individuals from Chapter 7 to Chapter 13 bankruptcies, we must ensure that we are taking into account individual needs and do not inadvertently harm those who need bankruptcy protections the most.

The bill also contains a number of nongermane provisions that concern me. The methamphetamine amendment increases the sentences for powder cocaine, thereby causing further overcrowding in prisons and increasing the representation of young minority males in prisons. I am also opposed to another provision that authorizes the use of public funds to pay for private school tuition for students who were injured by violent criminal offenses on public school grounds.

Despite its flaws, which I sincerely hope will be addressed in conference, the bill has a number of provisions I support, I take this opportunity to thank the managers of this bill, Senators Grassley, Torricelli, and Ranking Member Leahy for their consideration and assistance in accepting three amendments that I believe are important to fishermen in Massachusetts and small businesses across America

First, I believe that the small business provisions originally in this bill establish too short a time for small businesses that must resort to bankruptcy. These provisions are counter to this country's long held policy of fostering small business creation and expansion. The amendment to the bill which was accepted will increase the time for small businesses to develop a reorganization plan to 300 days. This will allow small businesses to continue to have adequate time to develop a reorganization plan during bankruptcy proceedings. The amendment will also allow bankruptcy judges more discretion to develop an appropriate time frame for small business reorganiza-

I thank Senator COLLINS and her staff for their fine work in developing an amendment which was accepted to make Chapter 12 of the Bankruptcy Code, which now applies to family farmers, applicable for fishermen. I was proud to be the lead Democratic cosponsor of this amendment that will make bankruptcy a more effective tool to help fishermen reorganize effectively and allow them to keep fishing while they do so.

The final amendment which was accepted allows the expansion of the credit committee membership under Chapter 11 bankruptcies to include a small business when it is determined that the small business' claims are disproportionally large to its gross revenues. This will ensure better access to information for those small businesses not included in the committee by allowing the committee to be open for comment and subject to additional reports or disclosures.

It is my hope that each of these amendments will be included in the Conference Report for the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1999. I look forward to working with the Managers of the bill during Conference on these and other issues.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, S. 625, the Consumer Bankruptcy Reform Act, is one of the most important legislative efforts to reform the bankruptcy laws in decades.

I want to thank a few of the people who have worked on this bill. Let me first acknowledge the Majority Leader, who has worked very hard to keep this bill moving forward. Given the demanding Senate schedule, it would have been easier for him to have refused to take up the bill, but because of his dedication to the important reforms in this bill, we now have legislation that makes enormous strides in eliminating abuse in the bankruptcy system. I am also grateful to the assistant majority leader, Senator Nick-LES, along with Senators DASCHLE and REID for their efforts in working with us to move the legislation forward.

Let me also acknowledge the Ranking Member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, Senator Leahy, who has worked tirelessly to reach agreement on many of the bill's provisions, and who ably managed the bill for his side of the aisle. I also want to commend my colleagues, Senators GRASSLEY and TORRICELLI, the Chairman and ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on Administrative Oversight and the Courts, respectively, for their tremendous efforts in crafting this much needed legislation. I particularly appreciate the dedication they have shown in making the passage of this bill an inclusive and bipartisan process.

Also, let me express my thanks to Senator Sessions who has shown unwavering dedication to accomplishing the important reforms in this bill, to Senator BIDEN for his efforts over the past two years in helping see sensible reform through the Senate, and to the many other members of the Senate for their hard work and cooperation.

At the Committee staff level, let me acknowledge a few people who have worked very hard on this bill. Kolan Davis and John McMickle of the Administrative Oversight and the Courts Subcommittee staff, along with Ed Haden, Kristi Lee and Sean Costello of the Youth Violence Subcommittee staff deserve praise for their impressive efforts on this legislation. In addition, Judiciary Committee Counsels Makan Delrahim, who was the lead counsel on this bill, Rene Augustine, and Kyle Sampson, as well as staff assistant Karen Wright, are to be commended for their hard work on this important bill. Thanks as well should be given to the Judiciary Committee's Chief Counsel and Staff Director, Manus Cooney, one of the most able and hard-working Chief Counsels the Committee has had.

On Senator Leahy's Committee staff, I want to acknowledge Minority Chief Counsel Bruce Cohen, along with counsel Ed Pagano for their efforts. In addition, I want to recognize the tireless efforts of Eric Shuffler and Jennifer Leach of Senator Torricelli's staff, as well as the hard work of Jim Greene of Senator Biden's staff, the Youth Violence Subcommittee's Minority Chief Counsel Sheryl Walter, as well as Ben Lawsky of Senator Schumer's staff.

I also want to commend Jim Hecht of the majority leader's staff, Stewart Verdery, Eric Ueland, and Matt Kirk of the assistant majority leader's staff, Jonathan Adelstein of Senator DASCHLE's staff, and Eddie Ayoob and Peter Arapis of the Minority Whip's staff for their efforts on this legislation.

The compelling need for this reform is underscored by the dramatic rise we have seen over the past several years in bankruptcy filings. The Bankruptcy Code was liberalized back in 1978, and since that time, consumer bankruptcy filings have risen at an unprecedented rate.

Mr. President, the bankruptcy system was intended to provide a "fresh start" for those who truly need it. We need to preserve the bankruptcy system within limits to allow individuals to emerge from severe financial hardship. What we do not need is to preserve the elements of the system that allow it to be abused—that allow some debtors to use bankruptcy as a financial planning tool rather than as a last resort. I firmly believe that by allowing people who can repay their debts to avoid their financial obligations, we are doing a disservice to the honest and hardworking people in this country who end up paying for it.

Mr. President, again I would like to applaud the bipartisan efforts of my colleagues who have made S. 625 a broadly-supported bill. The impact of this important legislation not only will be to curb the rampant number of frivolous bankruptcy filings, but also will be to give a boost to our economy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the House bill.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 833) to amend title 11 of the U.S. Code, and for other purposes.

The Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, all after the enacting clause of H.R. 833 is stricken and the text of S. 625, as amended, is inserted in lieu thereof.

The question is on the third reading of the bill.

The bill (H.R. 833), as amended, was ordered to a third reading and was read the third time.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall it pass?

The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. FITZGERALD (when his name was called). Present.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCain) are necessarily absent.

I further announce that, if present and voting, the Senator from Montana (Mr. Burns) would vote "yea."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 83, nays 14, as follows:—

[Rollcall Vote No. 5 Leg.]

YEAS-83

Abraham	DeWine	Kohl
Akaka	Domenici	Kyl
Allard	Dorgan	Landrieu
Ashcroft	Durbin	Leahy
Baucus	Edwards	Levin
Bayh	Enzi	Lieberman
Bennett	Feinstein	Lincoln
Biden	Frist	Lott
Bingaman	Gorton	Lugar
Bond	Gramm	Mack
Breaux	Grams	McConnell
Bryan	Grassley	Mikulski
Bunning	Gregg	Murkowski
Byrd	Hagel	Murray
Campbell	Hatch	Nickles
Chafee, Lincoln	Helms	Reid
Cleland	Hollings	Robb
Cochran	Hutchinson	Roberts
Collins	Inhofe	Rockefeller
Conrad	Inouye	Roth
Coverdell	Jeffords	Santorum
Craig	Johnson	Sessions
Crapo	Kerrey	Shelby
Daschle	Kerry	Smith (NH)

Smith (OR) Thomas Voinovich Snowe Thompson Warner Specter Thurmond Wyden Stevens Torricelli

NAYS-14

BoxerHarkinReedBrownbackHutchisonSarbanesDoddKennedySchumerFeingoldLautenbergWellstoneGrahamMoynihan

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—1

Fitzgerald

NOT VOTING-2

Burns McCain

The bill (H.R. 833), as amended, was passed.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote, and I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate insists on its amendment and requests a conference with the House. S. 625 is returned to the calendar.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, the Senate has taken an important step toward real bankruptcy reform on a bipartisan basis. None of this would have been possible without the hard work and cooperation of the ranking member on the subcommittee, Senator TORRICELLI. We introduced the bill together.

We have a good bill that will restore personal responsibility and crack down on abuses of debt collectors and provide key information to credit card customers about the problems of minimum payment.

I believe we go into conference in a strong position. I think our bill in the Senate is better than the House companion. We will have a spirited conference, I believe, but this year will be easier than last year since the bills are much closer.

In any event, the Senate has done a good job. I thank Senators HATCH, SESSIONS, REID, TORRICELLI, BIDEN, and LEAHY for the strong support they showed for reform.

I also thank Rene Augustine and Makan Delrahim of Senator HATCH's staff; Jennifer Leach and Eric Shuffler of Senator TORRICELLI's staff; Jim Greene of Senator BIDEN's staff; Eddie Ayoob of Senator REID's staff; and Kolan Davis and John McMickle of my own staff for their hard work on this bill.

I also thank Ed Haden and Sean Costello of Senator SESSIONS' staff.

Of course, this bill would not be here if not for Senator REID working with us on the floor and Senators HATCH and LEAHY helping steer this very difficult bill through the Senate as they helped get it out of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Of course, in this regard, I also thank the people who supported our legislation.

Most important, if anybody had asked me when we adjourned last year if we could have passed the bill this early this year, if at all, I would have been very pessimistic about it. But because of the cooperation we have had on the other side of the aisle, it was possible. Once again, in a very generic sense, I thank all who made this a bipartisan effort and made it possible to accomplish this goal.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Iowa for his kind remarks. He has persevered in this effort. He and I talked about this last fall when we were about ready to recess. We both committed ourselves to the fact that if this came back up this year, we would try to make it work. We told our respective leaders, Senator Lott and Senator Daschle, that we would continue to work whittling down amendments. We were able to dispose of, I believe, well over 300 amendments.

The distinguished Senator from New Jersey, Mr. Torricelli, and the distinguished Senator from Utah, Mr. Hatch, worked so hard on this. Lesser people might have given up. They did not. They continued on.

The chairman, Senator HATCH, returned to his important leadership responsibilities without missing a step. I have been glad to work with him on this. We culminated our work on initial Senate passage of this bankruptcy act. Now we can go to conference.

Senators TORRICELLI and GRASSLEY will have their work cut out for them, as well as the rest of us, in trying to work that out. We will not have the help of the distinguished Senator from Nevada, Mr. REID, in removing a lot of amendments for us as he did on the floor. He has been tremendous in working that out.

On this side of the aisle, he worked to protect the rights of Democratic Senators and to improve the bill, and he has worked with his counterparts on the other side of the aisle in our joint effort to get amendments off this bill.

As the Senator from Iowa and I discussed earlier, we both have been here long enough to know we did have an enormous number of amendments to a bill, but we also know many are called but few are chosen.

So we will work together with Chairman HATCH, Senator GRASSLEY, Senator TORRICELLI, the House conferees, and the Clinton administration on a conference report that I think will be well worthwhile.

I hope we will not make the mistake of the past Congress where we came out of conference with something that never went anywhere. We have demonstrated in the Senate now twice, in lopsided votes, that we can pass a bankruptcy reform act. I hope we will come out of the conference with something that we can pass.

Lastly, I know a number of staff members, all of whom deserve praise, have been mentioned on this floor, but it is often said Senators are usually only constitutional necessities to the staff who really do the work around here. In that regard, Bruce Cohen and Ed Pagano of the Senate Judiciary Committee staff have worked long hours, many weekends, and late nights to get us this far, and they deserve a great deal of credit.

I see my good friend from New Jersey, the ranking member of the subcommittee, who told us it would be possible to get a bill through here back when many thought it would not be possible. He was right. He worked very hard. He deserves a great deal of credit.

I yield the floor to him.

Mr. TORRICELLI. I thank Senator Leahy for his very kind comments and leadership in bringing this legislation to the floor, as well as, certainly, Senator Grassley, who began this effort so long ago and worked so very hard. So many Senators have played an important role that I think it bears some analysis of how we came to this point. And there are some provisions of the bill that should be mentioned before we go to conference in order to set our clear agenda.

I know there are those from the outset who doubted whether, indeed, real reform of bankruptcy law could be achieved in this Congress. There was some reason to be skeptical because there were some conflicting provisions. Some of us had some very real needs that had to be met before the beginning legislation could ever be enacted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HUTCHINSON). If the Senator would suspend, there is a previous order. It will take unanimous consent for the Senator to continue.

Mr. TORRICELLI. I ask unanimous consent that the order be postponed for 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Most important of these objectives, in my mind, was dealing with the need for some consumer credit protection because, indeed, while there may be abuses in bankruptcy by debtors, to be certain, there are clearly problems in the credit industry.

I believe several important amendments have achieved this goal. Most importantly, in my mind, was the adoption of the Grassley-Torricelli disclosure amendment. Other important amendments were additions by Senators Schumer and Sarbanes that will together provide real consumer protection.

All three amendments are based on the belief that if consumers have knowledge, they will make rational choices. Simply providing information will avoid many credit problems from which the American people are currently suffering. These include—if you look at the Torricelli-Grassley, Schumer, and Sarbanes amendments—a combination of disclosing prominently on credit documents: The effects of only making minimum payments on your account every month; second, when late fees will be imposed; and, third, the date on which introductory or teaser rates will expire and what the permanent rate will be upon that expiration.

Additionally, the Grassley-Torricelli amendment includes a provision authored by Senator Jack Reed prohibiting the canceling of an account because the consumer pays the balance in full every month. That was a growing problem where people with good credit and good bill-paying habits were being penalized unnecessarily. That provision is now in the bill.

For all of these good additions that have made this better legislation, there are some problems which I hope and trust can be resolved in conference so that this can genuinely be bipartisan legislation, broadly accepted, and signed by the President.

The principal obstacle between what we want to achieve and that reality is obviously the minimum wage provisions in this legislation.

Mr. President, 12 million Americans continue to earn the minimum wage. Although they work all day, every day, throughout the year, they are in a daily struggle simply to survive. A mother of two working at the minimum wage earns only $10,712 per year, 22 percent below the poverty line, a wage at which it is impossible to provide housing and food and clothing for a child, no less two children—or even a person, no less a family. It is not a minimum wage; it is a poverty wage.

In the last 15 years, inflation rose by 86 percent, but the minimum wage rose by only 37 percent. The fact remains that the United States is allowing a standard of living by working people below what those who stood in this institution only 15, 20, and 25 years ago were permitting by law.

We in America are allowing the establishment of a near-permanent underclass of working people doomed to poverty and children who do not have a chance of breaking out of these circumstances, who are likely to enter life malnourished, poorly clothed, inadequately housed, knowing only poverty.

We need to reach the same judgment that our grandparents and our parents have reached for 70 years: A working, fair minimum wage.

With the proposed new minimum wage, a full-time worker will have an annual income of $12,700, an increase of $2,000 a year. The problem with our bill is that this change is brought over the course of 3 years rather than 2 years, as many of us have proposed.

If it is the right thing to do, upon which most Senators seem to agree, it is the right thing to do now. Leaving millions of American children in poverty for this extra time makes no sense, and it is indefensible.

Indeed, during that extra time it denies $1,200 to families who are struggling trying to work their way out of poverty.

I can think of no better addition to legislation dealing with debts and the struggling realities of American economic life in this reform of bankruptcy legislation than including a real minimum wage.

It is obviously my hope that when the bill returns from conference we will return to a 2-year increase in the minimum wage rather than the 3-year provisions in this legislation.

The second area of concern—for all that we have achieved in this legislation—is the creation of a new school voucher program which was contained in a Republican antidrug amendment.

I want to make clear that I voted against this amendment last fall. I did so not because of objections to the underlying amphetamine prevention legislation, which I voted for in the Judiciary Committee, but to the voucher program.

When we considered this provision in the Judiciary Committee, it did not have this voucher provision. It actually was dealing with narcotics problems in schools with younger people. It was a good provision. It has now been changed on the floor to include this voucher program. It is a simple diversion of desperately needed public moneys in the public schools, which can only make the problem worse. Money that would go to children at risk to deal with many problems, including narcotics problems, would now be removed from the schools. This provision does not make sense. It should be removed

I believe if these objections are dealt with, we can return to this floor with a conference committee report of which we can all be proud.

For all the divisions we might have faced when this legislation began, I think we all now understand there is a problem with bankruptcy abuse in the United States. In 1998, 1.4 million Americans sought bankruptcy protection. Something is wrong. There either are not adequate credit protections to ensure people under the circumstances when they borrow money, or the law does not properly deal with their filings for bankruptcy, or both and other factors. In my judgment, it is all of these things.

Currently, 70 percent of bankruptcy petitions are filed in chapter 7, which provides relief from most unsecured debt. Just 30 percent of petitions were filed under chapter 13, which requires a repayment of debt.

More than anything else, in addition to consumer protection, we will assure that people who can pay back part of these debts will do so. That is not simply a benefit to the financial industry; it is also a benefit to every mom-andpop store, every small business in America that is being abused by these unnecessary filings for bankruptcy. Indeed, it is estimated by the Department of Justice that 182,000 people every year can afford to pay back some of the debts they are now escaping by inappropriate filings. This means $4 billion to creditors, financial institutions, to be sure, but also many small businesses that cannot afford losing these funds.

I conclude, once again, by thanking Senator Grassley for his extraordinary leadership, Senator Leahy for his patience through this process, Senator Hatch in chairing our committee and bringing us to this point, and the very great contributions made by Senators BIDEN, REID, SCHUMER, and Senator DURBIN who worked on this legislation so tirelessly in the last Congress.

This is good legislation. We can be proud of it. With modest adjustments, we can, indeed, make it something that both parties in both Chambers can bring to the President for his signature.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I understand we are about to go into executive session for the consideration of the nomination of Alan Greenspan. I wish to speak on another subject, so I ask unanimous consent that the order be set aside and I be permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COSTS OF WTO MINISTERIAL

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, earlier this afternoon the distinguished Senator from Vermont, Mr. Leahy, welcomed to the chair in which the Acting President now sits the Vice President of the United States in his capacity as President of the Senate. It was out of order for me to speak at that point, and I regret the fact that I was unable to do so because my message is to the Vice President of the United States.

Leaving this place, he is now on his way to Seattle, my home State, in pursuance of the Democratic nomination for the Presidency. On a number of occasions during the course of the last year when the Vice President has graced us with his presence, I have asked on this floor and elsewhere that he address some of the controversial and burning issues in the Pacific Northwest, usually without getting a particularly significant response.

I don't intend to do that today. I welcome the Vice President to Seattle, and I am going to ask him for his help and for a favor to the people of that city and the region.

Early last year, the Clinton administration picked Seattle out of 40 city applicants to host a conference by the World Trade Organization for an extended period of time. Careful preparations for that meeting were made by the administration, by State officials, by officials in the city of Seattle and in the surrounding area, and by private organizations that desired to take part in the WTO meetings.

We, as is customary when a major international conference goes to an American city, recognized the extra costs that would accrue to Seattle and the region by directing the State Department to reimburse Seattle and surrounding communities by upwards of $5 million for the extra costs of law enforcement that were inevitably to be a part of that WTO conference. Senator MURRAY, my colleague, and I joined in strongly supporting that proposal, and it was accepted, not only by the Senate but by the Congress, memorialized in the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill.

As we all know now, to our regret. the preparations for that WTO meeting were inadequate to meet the deluge of demonstrators who descended on Seattle, some of them quite violent in nature. While in my view our law enforcement officers performed in exemplary fashion under extremely difficult circumstances, neither the political preparation for that meeting on the part of their superiors, the disposition of the law enforcement officers, nor their leadership was up to the task. We ended up with a very regrettable and probably disastrous experience in the city with security for the organization, added to, very significantly, for the future of our trade relations by what I consider to be the utterly inappropriate performance of the President of the United States in undercutting his own negotiators.

Nevertheless, the net result was approximately a cost of $12 million to law enforcement over and above what would normally have been the circumstances. Not only does that exceed by a margin of more than 2 to 1 the $5 million that we directed be added as assistance for those efforts, but the State Department of the United States of America has flatly refused to reimburse Seattle or any of the other communities in the area by so much as $1.

I may say, the State Department seems quite happy to reimburse the costs of all of the Members of both Houses of Congress who went to Seattle for that conference, but a direction from this Congress, a direction from this Senate, that the Seattle area deserved a $5 million contribution to these law enforcement problems has, to this point, been utterly ignored by the State Department. Seattle and other local officials have been spurned in all of their efforts to get that assistance by what I consider to be weak and inadequate grounds.

Mr. President, I have come to the

Mr. President, I have come to the point. Yesterday I wrote a letter to the Vice President of the United States that I ask unanimous consent be printed in the RECORD in full at the end of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. GORTON. I asked in the letter that the Vice President, in his exalted position in this administration, do his very best to see to it that the State Department ends this arbitrary action and promptly reimburses the region with that entire $5 million figure, to be distributed as is most just among the various agencies that incurred those costs. This is a simple request. It is a request to the Vice President of the United States to see to it that the United States keeps its obligations, obligations which to this point have been disgracefully ignored.

I am certain the Vice President has sufficient authority and importance in the administration that his views on this case, if they are made known forcibly and well, will be acted upon. I hope very much he will do exactly that and help us, at least for a modest degree of compensation for what was an extremely unhappy experience in the community as a whole and among our law enforcement officials.

EXHIBIT 1

U.S. SENATE, Washington, DC, February 1, 2000.

Hon. AL GORE, The White House, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. VICE PRESIDENT: Last spring, the administration selected the City of Seattle from a list of 40 entries to be the honorary host site for the largest trade meeting ever held on U.S. soil, the World trade Organization Ministerial. While the outcome of the event was not what we might have liked, hosting the Ministerial imposed a severe financial burden on the City of Seattle and surrounding communities.

Recognizing that the city and other involved jurisdictions would need assistance and support for security, members of the Washington State Delegation in the House and Senate supported language in the Fiscal Year 2000 Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Appropriations bill to provide $5 million to be used for costs related to the WTO Ministerial in Seattle. Just as the trade event was set to convene and the first foreign dignitaries were arriving in Seattle, this language and allocation became law.

Unfortunately, at the same time that foreign and U.S. Trade representatives were convening in Seattle for the initiation of a new round of trade agreements, so too did tens of thousands of protestors, including many who had every intent of disrupting the Ministerial. While I have expressed reservations about how the City of Seattle chose to deal with the onslaught of protesters, I believe that the enacted financial assistance is not only required, but overdue.

To make matters worse, as Seattle continues the task of mending its wounds, the U.S. State Department has refused to release one nickel of the aforementioned allocation. Seattle, its residents and law enforcement still feel the sting of the black eye endured during the week of the WTO.

Preliminary estimates suggest that local taxpayers spent more than $12 million for security expenses related to the WTO, and the Washington State Patrol suggests that at least $2.3 million was absorbed for overtime security expenses. To expect local communities to absorb such security costs for a major international event is unjustified.

As you visit Seattle this week to curry favor with our voters, I will not chastise you, as I have done in the past, for not speaking out on key issues facing the Northwest. Instead, I ask you to assist our community by placing a call to your colleague, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and demand that the funds prescribed in the FY2000 CJSJ Appropriations bill be released to Seattle.

Thank you in advance for your assistance. Sincerely,

SLADE GORTON, U.S. Senator.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

NOMINATION OF ALAN GREEN-SPAN, OF NEW YORK, TO BE CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now go into executive session and proceed to the nomination of Alan Greenspan, of New York, which the clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read the nomination of Alan Greenspan, of New York, to be Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System for a term of 4 years.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, we have an unusual time agreement where we have 4 hours 50 minutes. I have asked, as chairman of the committee, to have 45 minutes under my control to make the case for Chairman Greenspan, the President's nominee.

I have a very small number of people who wish to speak. Senator SARBANES, as ranking member, has made a similar request for 45 minutes. I think the normal procedure would be to run off time proportionately among those who have asked for time. But since Senator SAR-BANES and I have such a small amount of time, and many other Members who aren't members of the committee have more time reserved than we do. I would like to begin, so that there will be no dispute, no misunderstanding, by asking unanimous consent that the time be charged proportionately to the two sides. The minority side has 4 hours 5 minutes. The majority side has 45 minutes. Lask unanimous consent that the time be charged proportionately.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. Mr. GRAMM. Secondly, let me say that when we do have the minority side represented on the floor, I am going to seek to amend that to protect the time of the distinguished ranking member of the committee, Senator SARBANES, and to protect my time. I urge those who have reserved up to an hour each in some cases to come to the floor and speak.

With that, I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maryland is recognized.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry: What is the pending business before the Senate?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is the nomination of Alan Greenspan.

Mr. SARBANES. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I rise in support of the nomination of Alan Greenspan to be Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. As I mentioned in the Banking Committee when we held the hearing on the nomination of Alan Greenspan to a fourth term as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, one of the distinctive aspects of the Federal Reserve Board as an institution has been its remarkable stability of leadership.

Since 1934, when President Franklin Roosevelt appointed Marriner Eccles to be Federal Reserve Board Chairman until today—a period of over 65 years—there have been only seven Federal Reserve Board Chairmen; only seven. Among them are some of the outstanding economic leaders of our country. Marriner Eccles himself served 14 years as Chairman of the Federal Reserve. William McChesney Martin served 19 years. Arthur Burns and Paul Volcker each served 8 years.

If Chairman Greenspan is confirmed—I am assuming, I think reasonably so, that would be the case—and serves the full length of his fourth term, as I expect he will, he will be the second longest serving Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. I think it is fair to say, in looking at his tenure as Chairman, that he will take his place among those other outstanding public servants who have provided exceptional economic leadership to our country.

Earlier this week, the U.S. economy achieved the longest expansion in its history with 107 months of continuous growth. We have achieved high levels of growth that have brought us the lowest levels of unemployment in 30 years, and all of this has been accomplished with the lowest levels of inflation in 30 years.

We have had a very virtuous economy in terms of low unemployment and low inflation. The expansion has now gone on long enough that its benefits have begun to be felt by the hardest to employ workers in our economy. Many companies now have instituted training programs which, of course, is all to the good. It enables us to improve the skills and the abilities of our workforce. It enables us to draw people into the workforce who heretofore have not been a part of it. A strongly vibrant economy is important to the success of any Welfare-to-Work initiative. One of the reasons that Welfare to Work has shown some of the results which it has shown is because it has taken place in the context of an economy moving towards or at full employment.

The performance of the economy has defied the conventional wisdom once held by some in the economic profession that there was some arbitrary rate of unemployment below which the economy could not go without triggering inflation.

Credit for this achievement should be shared. President Clinton and former Treasury Secretaries Bentsen and Rubin deserve credit for their disciplined leadership on fiscal policy which has eliminated our budget deficit and moved us into budget surpluses. The Congress also should share in that credit for maintaining fiscal discipline which has enabled us to come out of a deficit budget situation into a surplus budget situation, although I would add as a word of caution that I think we need to be extremely careful and prudent now in the steps we take.

These surpluses about which so many people are talking in terms of what are they going to do with them are projected surpluses. They are not surpluses in hand and they depend very much on the continued healthy performance of the economy. I think it is imperative that we not go to excesses, whether on the spending side or the tax-cutting side, which would knock this economic engine off the track.

In addition—obviously highly relevant to the subject before us—Chairman Greenspan deserves credit for complementing the tight fiscal policy of the administration and the Congress with a monetary policy that has allowed our economy to grow. In doing so, he focused on the evidence before him and was not bound by arbitrary assumptions about the limits of our economy's ability to grow without triggering inflation.

I think the Chairman has been very pragmatic as he has made his judgments. I think he has been very much driven by the facts of the situation and has not come at it with these ideological presuppositions into which he then tries to bend the facts but has taken the facts, evaluated them, and made his judgments.

I am reminded of the fact that some years back within the Federal Reserve System there was a regional bank president who asserted that if the economy started growing and drove the unemployment rate down or looked as though it was going to be below 6.7 percent unemployment, then inflation would virtually automatically start to rise and, therefore, the Fed had the responsibility—the Open Market Committee—as the economy was growing in this direction to start curtailing the economy, of slowing it down by raising the interest rates because unless they did that, a strongly growing economy would bring the unemployment rate down below 6.7 percent. And that was the magic point at which the inflation rate would start going up.

Fortunately, the Chairman, Chairman Greenspan, and a majority of his colleagues, never bought into this theory. Now we see the fact we have brought unemployment down to just over 4 percent, and we have no significant inflation problem before us.

There is a lot of credit that can go around. I mean, when you have success, everyone has fostered it. But I am quite happy certainly to allocate a portion of that to the Chairman and the policies of the Federal Reserve Board.

I have disagreed with Chairman Greenspan in the past about monetary policy, and may well disagree with him again in the future. I have been very much oriented to growth and jobs. I have always been deeply concerned about these so-called preemptive strikes against inflation where you slow growth and job production without any visible sign of inflation—simply some sort of anticipation of it. I have always argued that we ought to let the economy run for a while and see what it produces. The recent experience, of course, has been very encouraging because we brought unemployment down very significantly and have not triggered an inflation problem.

All in all, though, I think it is more than fair to say that Alan Greenspan has been a skillful and dedicated Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and merits confirmation for another term.

I urge my colleagues in the Senate to join in supporting this nomination of Alan Greenspan to another 4-year term as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the able Senator from New York, and not only a member but a very strongly contributing member of our committee.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Maryland, not only for the generous yielding of time but for his thoughtful remarks—as always. I think the name "SARBANES" and the word "thoughtful" are almost attached in this body, and with good reason.

I rise today in full support of the nomination of Alan Greenspan. I do it for a whole variety of reasons. Before I get into those reasons, I am holding something in my hand. Senator GRAMM's staff gave us the application of a man of such gravity and success and magnitude, it is kind of funny to hold an application where he lists his schooling. Even on the last page, there is a section that says "qualifications," why he would be a good Chairman of the Federal Reserve. But he begins by saving. "I have been an economist for almost half a century." One does not have to read this application, fortunately, to know of Chairman Greenspan's merit to be renominated as Chairman of the Federal Reserve.

First, I am proud personally, and I know the other representatives of my State are proud, because Alan Greenspan is one of New York's contributions to the national economy. He is a true New Yorker, born in the Bronx, attended George Washington High School, got his B.S., M.A., and Ph.D. from NYU. When you think about it, the two men who have had their hand on the economic tiller for a large part of the past decade. Bob Rubin and Alan Greenspan, are both New Yorkers, We are proud of our contribution. We have always been proud, in New York, that we send men and women around the country in so many different fields who make real contributions to America. Sometimes America does not recognize it as much as we would want, but it is true. I think there can be no one we can be more proud of, at least in the last decade, than Alan Greenspan.

Alan Greenspan is the perfect man for the job. He is thoughtful. I regularly eat breakfast with him at the Fed. I will never forget the first time we had breakfast together. I really didn't know him that well. He had been Chairman of the Fed for maybe 3 or 4 months.

I said, "Mr. Chairman, how do you like the job?"

He said, "I love it."

"What do you like best about it?"

His eyes lit up. He rubbed his hands together, and he said, "The data."

That, I think, is at the root of Alan Greenspan's great success as Chairman of the Fed—his knowledge. He knows the economy. He is a careful man. Those of us who have sat in the Banking Committee, both in the Senate and the House, as I did before I was lucky enough to become a Senator, know he is a careful thinker—almost too careful sometimes, when we ask questions. But that is his job, not to reveal too much. At the root of his merit for the position is the fact that he believes knowledge should guide his decisions, the data should guide his decisions.

He has also been a very careful Chairman of the Fed, and that is a job where care is important. I was always opposed to some of the people in my party who wanted to tie the hands of the Fed or subject the Fed to more popular whim because, frankly, monetary policy is one of those areas of policy that should have some distance from the popular whim. That is because monetary policy takes a while; it takes a while to formulate, and then it takes a while to have its effect once it is implemented. To have it subject to the political vicissitudes and whims to too great an extent would be a tragedy and would make no sense for this country.

In fact, I always marvel at the genius of our Founding Fathers in setting up the structure of merit. But one of the great additions that was made was made in 1912 or 1913 when the Federal Reserve System was finally established. Over the years, we have seen the merit to that system. Yes, there is some popular control, but there is also some distance. I think Chairman Greenspan understands that very well.

There is a third reason I think he makes such a fine Chairman.

I ask unanimous consent I be given 3 additional minutes.

Mr. SARBANES. Yes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is recognized for 3 additional minutes.

Mr. SCHUMER. Not only his thought and care but his solid and sound judgment. The Chairman told me, and he said it repeatedly, he always had a slight lean towards combating inflation. It was not an ideological lean, as opposed to stimulating the economy or combating inflation. But he always said, once you let the genie out of the bottle, it is very hard to get it back. So he erred on the side of caution in terms of letting the economy overheat. My goodness, has that served us well during his 12 years as Chairman.

His steadiness, his intelligence, his judgment, his thoughtful care, his knowledge, all add up to the fact that this is a wonderful day, not only for him—and I hope he will be approved unanimously by this body. This should not be a nomination where ideology—I think he is a Republican, actually. I think he served in the Council of Economic Advisers under, I guess it was President Ford. It is not one where ideology or party should play but, rather, the good of America.

So it is my honor to cast my vote for a great New Yorker, a great American, a great Chairman of the Federal Reserve, and someone who is truly a national treasure. I will be proud to vote for Alan Greenspan.

I thank the Chair and yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, how much time is reserved?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Vermont has 19 and one-half minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, the economy is now entering its 107th month of expansion. That is almost 9 years out of the 25 years I have had the pleasure to serve in this Chamber. Not since the 1960s has the economy experienced such an extended period of growth.

A number of Senators have spoken on the floor today to commend Alan Greenspan for his foresight and his quick hand in raising interest rates to keep inflation in check. The actions of Alan Greenspan and the Fed have certainly contributed to our unprecedented growth—growth that has also been sustained by the sound fiscal policies of President Clinton and Congress. I would remind the Congress, that we can also do our part to help the economy by continuing to pay down our national debt.

Today the Fed is meeting again to consider another possible rate hike. The American economy was certainly on fire during the fourth quarter of 1999. Mr. Greenspan and the Fed have hesitated little in hiking rates to nip inflation in the bud. Last year, the Fed raised interest rates three times by a quarter point each—three times over the short span of 6 months. Such vigilance has been one important part of maintaining the unprecedented growth of our economy.

While it might be blasphemy among macroeconomic economists, I would like to take a moment to urge members of the Federal Open Market Committee to consider the disproportionate effect that these hikes have on low and middle income families. As the Fed mulls rate policy as we speak, I would urge Mr. Greenspan to be doubly sure about raising rates when such hikes, while keeping the economy strong to the benefit of wealthy Americans, may also be tying the hands of low and middle income Americans.

Each time the Fed raises interest rates, average Americans are hit by an immediate increase in mortgage costs, car payments, and credit card rates. These payments are a disproportionate burden on lower and middle income Americans.

For the past week we have been debating a reform of our country's bankruptcy laws. During the course of debate, we have talked at length about the rise in credit card debt. By December of 1999, Americans racked up nearly $589 billion in revolving credit debt. This burden is carried primarily by low and middle income families. An increase in interest rates is likely to pinch these individuals and make it more difficult to pay off their debt and save for the future.

I have been contacted by Vermonters who say they are struggling to pay off their debt and save money to buy homes. These Vermonters face a major setback each time the Fed makes the decision to increase interest rates. In its meeting today and in the future, I urge the Federal Reserve to consider the effect of raising rates on these individuals.

With all the praising being done of Chairman Greenspan today, I wish to note there are a number of Vermonters who contacted me who feel quite a bit differently. Nobody doubts a strong economy, an expansive economy. I think much of the credit, frankly, goes to those who, in 1993, were willing to face down the naysayers and take the first step to have a real balanced budget in the Congress. It sent a signal to the financial markets that for the first time, certainly in my lifetime, the Congress was serious about balancing the budget.

During the 1980s we had seen all the lip service paid and the sloganeering about balancing the budget, while during the 1980s we tripled the national debt and ran the biggest deficits of any nation in the history of the world.

In 1993 I heard many voices, actually on the other side of the aisle, saying if we cast these votes to bring about balancing the budget, it would bring about economic collapse. It would bring about staggering unemployment. It would bring about runaway inflation. And it would bring about huge deficits. It did just the opposite. The unemployment rate has dropped, inflation came to a standstill, the economy boomed, the deficits disappeared, and now we have a budget surplus. Many Members of Congress were courageous enough to cast the real votes that might do that—as compared to simply the sloganeering and doing nothing-and many of them lost their place in the House and Senate for doing it, even though they made a better country for all of us and for our children.

I note that because I believe that vote was as significant a part of bringing about the credibility necessary for a strong economy as anything we have done. The expansion of the information technology industries, high tech, and so forth, also were part of it and a steadying influence by Chairman Greenspan and the Fed.

But this idea that one person controls this economy by himself is something that even some who sit here in the Senate cannot say with a straight face. As many Vermonters have told me, when they see interest rates being raised over and over again at a time when there is no inflation, when the economy has more and more people coming into the workforce—because every time you have a merger, thousands of people are laid off. They go and seek jobs in other parts of the labor market. We see all these things and question why interest rates go up. The interest rates going up apparently have given a great benefit to the wealthiest of Americans but has done very little for the average man and woman, certainly in my State.

In my State, we have seen oil prices and heating oil costs go up substantially this winter, and now the Fed is about to tell everybody: We are going to raise your interest rates again; we are going to raise your mortgages rates again; we are going to raise the interest rates on your credit cards again. If you are a small business, we are going to raise your costs of doing business again.

I am not sure what is gained by these interest rate hikes. It puts a very heavy burden on those families where the husband and wife are both working and trying to pay the kids' tuition, pay the bills, and pay the mortgage. It certainly puts a heavy burden on small businesses in my State.

It will help some bankers, absolutely. It will help credit card companies, absolutely. It will help some of the wealthiest, absolutely. And maybe there is a plan in here that by helping all of them, some day it may help the people who keep the country going and pay the bills. Possibly.

I share the skepticism of those Vermonters, and I hope when this vote is cast, which I assume will be overwhelming for the reconfirmation of Chairman Greenspan, that he will not take this as some kind of an accolade that nobody disagrees with what he has done; that he will understand there are those who actually have to pay their mortgages, those who do not have millions of dollars, those who do not have six-figure incomes and are hurt by these interest rate hikes; that they are the ones who see no inflation and probably have been laid off from jobs because of mergers and are out seeking another job and are now hit with an extra whammy of paying more for their mortgages, their credit cards, for the things they need.

Some of the thoughts of the Fed that the boom will not continue, that inflation was around the corner has not been proven, and I do not think the steps they are taking are right. That is one person's opinion. Obviously, it is very much a minority opinion but certainly an opinion that is felt strongly by the average man and woman who are earning a weekly salary and paying the bills.

I hope the Fed will look at some of the data they have available to them and understand there are other ways of combating inflation than simply raising interest rates and that the country will realize there are a lot of very courageous people who voted for a balanced budget in 1993. Rather than simply talking about it, all those courageous people who lost their places in Congress for doing that are also the ones who deserve an enormous amount of credit today for the huge economy we have underway.

Mr. President, how much time does the Senator from Vermont have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 11½ minutes remaining.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time I have remaining be turned over to the Senator from Maryland for such use as he may wish to make of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, what is the time situation now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time situation is as follows: The Senator from Maryland controls 38½ minutes; the Senator from Texas controls 42 minutes; the Senator from Minnesota, Mr. Wellstone, controls 58 minutes; the Senator from Iowa, Mr. Harkin, controls 58 minutes; the Senator from Nevada, Mr. Reid, controls 29 minutes; and the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. Dorgan, controls 29 minutes.

Mr. SARBANES. I simply make the observation for those Members of the Senate who wish to be heard on this nomination that this is an opportune time, and that includes members of the committee and others who will seek either Senator GRAMM or myself to yield time to them in order to speak. There are other Members who have been actually allocated time specifically. Of course, we presume they will be coming to the floor in order to use that time.

I put an inquiry to the Chair: I understand that if no one speaks, the time will be charged proportionately to all those to whom time has been allocated?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I cease and allow that circumstance to prevail.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Time will be charged proportionately to those who have time reserved.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, we are experiencing the longest economic expansion in the history of this country. As of the end of January, we underwent 107 consecutive months of economic growth. Much of this can be attributed to the economic policies of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan.

In the midst of this unprecedented prosperity, it's easy to say, let's not change anything. Let's not rock the boat. Things are great, why rain on the parade? Why even ask tough questions that might upset the delicate and finetuned mechanism of the economy?

But I think that we have to ask those questions.

Today the Senate is considering the President's nomination of Mr. Greenspan to his fourth consecutive four-year term as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors. In my opinion, if we are to confirm him to serve in that post again, we should not do so simply to reward him for the good that he has accomplished over the last few years—we should only do so because we think that he is the best person for the job for the next four years.

In making that decision, we have to take a hard look at everything that has happened under Chairman Greenspan's watch—the bad as well as the good.

We are considering him not only for his views on the economy, but for his ability as a manager, as the head of the largest, most powerful institutions in the world.

Viewing his record as a whole, Mr. President, I am not convinced that Chairman Greenspan is the best man to guide the Fed for the next four years. I intend to vote against his confirmation.

Let me make this clear: I rise today not to criticize Alan Greenspan as a person, or to criticize his economic policies. Chairman Greenspan is a fine man, who has worked hard for this Nation. The results of Chairman Greenspan's monetary policies over the last 10 years speak for themselves, in rather eloquent terms.

The Federal Reserve is one of the most powerful institutions in the world. It makes decisions that fundamentally change our economy, and the world economy.

It is also, as columnist Jack Anderson wrote, a secret government of unaccountable, unelected bankers and bureaucrats that has long resisted Congressional oversight, and that is completely exempt from the Congressional budgeting process.

For the past six years, Senator DORGAN and I have worked to try to achieve greater accountability over the Federal Reserve. Last year, we added an amendment to the Financial Services Modernization Bill that would have required a consolidated yearly audit covering the operations of each Federal Reserve Bank, the Federal Reserve Board of Governors and the Federal Reserve System.

Our amendment was all about accountability in the day-to-day operations of the Fed. It did not seek to interfere with monetary policy. That is an area that should be kept separate, for good reason. Our amendment sought to open the doors of a taxpayer-financed institution which has been closed to Congressional oversight or review for more than 80 years.

Unfortunately, our amendment was stripped down in conference. That happened in part because the Federal Reserve strongly opposed any kind of audit or oversight.

In 1993, Senator DORGAN and I asked the GAO conduct a review of the Fed's operation and practices. The review found a number of disturbing revelations about the way the Federal Reserve does its business, including evidence of serious mismanagement at the highest levels.

Significantly, many of the incidents of waste and mismanagement have increased since 1988, the year Mr. Greenspan first became Chairman.

- (1) The Report found numerous and significant weaknesses in the Fed's planning, budgeting, oversight, and audit processes that have resulted in unnecessary waste in the Fed's operating costs.
- (A) The Fed's operating policies and practices do not include cost-minimizing that are commonplace in private-sector entities and even other government agencies.
- (B) Overall Federal Reserve operating expenses increased from $1.36 billion in 1988, to $1 billion in 1994:
- A 50 percent increase that was more than twice the rate of inflation during that same time period;

The increase in operating expenses also exceeded the rate of increase in the Fed's revenues; and

It also far exceed the 17-percent increase in overall federal discretionary spending.

(C) The report concluded that, among other things, the Federal Reserve could reduce its personnel benefits and travel-related reimbursements without affecting its operation:

The employee benefits paid by the Fed for even low-level employees were called "generous" compared to other government agencies and comparable financial institutions; and Travel reimbursement policies among the various Reserve banks varied widely

- (D) The report found that the Fed's Interdistrict Transportation Service has been engaging in questionable practices such as the implementation of non-competitive contracts, gifts of payments for missing backup and grounded aircraft to non-performing contractors, and a disturbing pattern of indifference to fraud, waste and abuse.
- (2) The Board's internal oversight mechanisms were called "fragmented, inefficient, and lacking in independence."
- (A) Operating costs vary among Reserve banks because the Federal Reserve has not established consistent policies.
- (B) Several Reserve banks used contracting and procurement policies that violated written government policies, and which resulted in favoring some sources over others—raising questions of conflicts of interest, favoritism, and whether the Federal Reserve is receiving the best services and most favorable prices.

(C) The Los Angeles branch alone documented over $121 million in book-keeping errors in a single month.

(3) The Fed maintains a reserve account of $5.2 billion dollars which could be re-directed into the Federal Treasury. That fund is intended to protect the Fed against unexpected losses.

But the Fed has recorded substantial net profits for 84 straight years, and the fund has never been used since it was created in 1913. Nonetheless, the size of that fund has increased nearly 150 percent in only the last ten years, rising from $2.1 billion in 1988 to $5.2 billion in 1998.

Most important, the report raised serious questions about Mr. Greenspan's ability to manage the Fed in a time of rapid economic change.

The Report concluded that numerous technological, political, and market-place developments could profoundly affect the Fed's mission and operation in the years to come, and which require the Fed's careful attention and leader-ship.

(A) Increased competition from private institutions and a shift to electronic banking could significantly reduce the Fed's revenues, particularly in areas such as check-clearing. The Fed has not taken sufficient steps to compensate for these shrinking revenue sources.

(B) A major consolidation in the banking industry is going on that could significantly affect the Fed's oversight and review activities.

Changes in the number and location of bank-holding companies the Fed oversees could require adjustments in Fed staffing at the various Reserve banks.

To pay for these changes, the Fed's oversight staff could charge local banks a fee for their oversight activities, but choose not to, resulting in taxpayers paying the bill for those activities to the tune of $388 million a year.

The Fed's Reserve banks have not changed their geographic location since 1913, despite major shifts in population demographics and economics, raising question of whether the Fed's oversight functions are being performed effectively and equally around the country.

(C) Overall, increasing competition from private-sector suppliers of financial services, coupled with changes in technology and commerce, and increasing globalization of economic policy," present significant challenges to the Federal Reserve to rethink many aspects of its operations and raise important questions regarding the future role of the Reserve banks, their management structures, their locations"and "call for a careful re-examination of the Federal Reserve's mission, structure, and work processes." But it appears that no such re-examination has taken place in the five years since the report was issued.

The report concluded that if the Federal Reserve Board is to plan strategically for the future, so that it can continue to deliver services efficiently in a world that is changing rapidly and substantially, it will need the Board's "sustained leadership." That sustained leadership appears to have been absent.

If this report had been made about a Cabinet Secretary, the Congress and the public would demand answers. If it were about the CEO of a private corporation his board would probably send him packing.

We live in a world of change.

Only a few years ago, nobody had heard of the Internet, and electronic commerce didn't exist.

Nobody bought stock on-line.

Only a few years ago, the European Economic Union was a pipe dream.

GATT and NAFTA didn't exist.

Japan's economy was the envy of the world, and the United States was thought to be in decline.

Nobody can predict what the world will be like years from now. But one thing we do know, is that if the Fed is to continue its ability to successfully manage our economy, change will be necessary. Not superficial tinkering, but fundamental, structural changes.

I do not believe that Mr. Greenspan is the right kind of manager to drive that change.

Let me read to you from the GAO report:

The Federal Reserve must create the necessary self-discipline for the institution to adequately control its costs and respond effectively to future challenges. However, GAO found weaknesses in the planning and budgeting processes that are key mechanisms for accomplishing those goals . . . the Federal Reserve did not have an integrated, systemwide strategic plan that identified the emerging issues and challenges affecting the entire system and how to effectively address

In a climate of rapid change, that is a recipe for disaster.

For these reasons, I do not believe that Alan Greenspan is the right man for the job, and I intend to vote against his confirmation, and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, does the unanimous consent agreement include a time for me to speak?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It does. The Senator has 24 minutes remaining.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I understand we are here on the floor of the Senate to talk about the renomination of Alan Greenspan as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. I want to start my presentation by saying it is not my intention to come to the floor of the Senate to persuade people Mr. Greenspan is not a good person or has not been a good public servant—I do not believe that. He is someone with great skill and great devotion to public service.

But I do come to say that I have profound differences with Mr. Greenspan over monetary policy issues and I believe his stewardship with the Federal Reserve Board, while widely hailed by many, falls short of what I think should have been done at the Fed during the same period. I would like to spend some time describing that.

As I begin this discussion, let me point out that just this afternoon the Federal Reserve Board has announced yet another interest rate hike. They have announced today that the Federal Open Market Committee is hiking short-term interest rates another one quarter of 1 percent.

What does that mean? A lot of people will not think much about the one quarter of 1 percent in terms of what it means to them. It means the Federal Reserve Board is imposing a tax on every single American with these interest rate hikes because they are worried about some new wave of inflation that does not exist in our country. I had some work done at the North Dakota State University by Dr. Won Koo in the Department of Agricultural Economics. I asked him to tell me what it means, just in terms of North Dakota, when the Federal Reserve Board has now on four occasions in a matter of 8 months raised interest rates by 1 percent. What does it mean when we have a 1-percent interest rate increase?

The additional average interest payments for North Dakota farmers will be nearly $23 million a year as a result of the actions of the Federal Reserve Board, or about $719 per farm annually.

A typical North Dakota household will see their interest charges go up by an additional $356 a year because of the four Fed interest rate hikes. The Federal Reserve Board is imposing a tax on every single American with these four rate hikes.

I will explain more later why I think the rate hikes are unjustifiable. But these rate hikes are unjustifiable because the Federal Reserve Board is searching for inflation that does not exist. Inflation has gone down, down, way down, all the while the Federal Reserve Board has insisted the fires of inflation are just around the corner. The Fed has been consistently wrong on that. And there seems to be almost no debate about it. It is OK if the Fed decides it wants to increase interest rates and effectively tax all the American people with higher interest rates.

Some of those who come to the floor of the Senate who are the most aggressive people in opposition to any kind of a tax increase, sit silently while the Federal Reserve Board says: We want to impose new costs on the American people in the form of mandated higher interest charges. That is rather curious to me. Why so silent when the Federal Reserve Board does this without justification, I might add.

Here is the Federal Reserve Board. And I do this to give the American people a sense of who makes monetary policy. We have a Board of Governors. There are two seats that are currently vacant. We are hoping maybe we can get someone appointed to the Federal Reserve Board who cares something about consumers and family farmers and others who will have to pay the higher interest charges. It is not likely to happen, but we are trying. None of the current Board members is from our part of the country. There have only been three Board members from the Upper Midwest appointed to the Board of Governors since it was created. We are hoping maybe somebody who might take one of these vacant seats will be somebody who knows how to make something, to produce something, who does something every day and will come here not representing the money center bankers' interests but representing the interests of consumers. family farmers, or Main Street businesses.

The Board of Governors and, the presidents of the regional Fed banks on a rotating basis, go in a room, shut the door, and in secret decide what kind of monetary policy they want to employ and whether they want to increase interest rates. The American people were not present in the room and I was not present in the room because we are excluded from these deliberations by the Federal Reserve Board.

These are the folks who went into that room: Roger W. Ferguson, Jr., Alan Greenspan, Edward Gramlich, Edward W. Kelley, Jr., Laurence Meyer; and then these folks from the Fed regional banks, the ones with the gold stars: Robert Perry, Jack Guynn, Mr. Broaddus, Mr. Jordan, and Mr. McDonough. They apparently think the American people's interest charges are not high and decided to raise it one-quarter of 1 percent, a total of 1 percent over the last four rate hikes. The question is why.

It is interesting, the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board says he does this because there is a threat of new inflation in this country. Over the past 12 months, however, inflation has been well under control. The CPI has risen 2.7 percent in the last 12 months. In the last 3 months, the CPI has risen at an annual rate of 2.2 percent, and the core CPI—if you take out volatile food and energy prices, has risen 1.9 percent in the last 12 months, the lowest it's been since 1965.

In addition, Mr. Greenspan has come to the Capitol and said: We think the CPI overstates inflation by 1.5 percent. I do not think he is right about that, but if he is right, we have effectively no inflation in this country. If we have no inflation in this country, what on Earth are these folks doing in a secret meeting downtown, wearing suits and glasses and talking in bankerspeak, deciding to increase taxes in the form of a higher interest rate on every American? What are they doing? How do they justify that? Why do those in this Congress who wail so much about taxes sit silently while the Federal Reserve Board does this without justification? You tell me where the new fires of inflation exist.

Alan Greenspan for years came to counsel us on Capitol Hill. He said: We cannot countenance economic growth in this country more than 2.2 or 2.5 percent without risking substantial new waves of inflation—just can't do it. He was wrong. Again and again he was wrong. Economic growth has been well above 2.5 percent, and inflation has been way down, not up. Mr. Greenspan came to Congress and gave us the sage advice that if we saw unemployment fall below 6 percent, we risked new fires of inflation. He was wrong again and again. He was wrong.

Yet we hear people come to the floor to say he is the greatest American ever. He is a nice enough fellow. I have nothing against him personally. His policies, in my judgment, have imposed an added financial burden on the American people in the form of higher interest charges than is justifiable. I ask all of you who know these numbers, evaluate what have been the interest rates relative to inflation—that is, the real rate of interest—in the Greenspan years versus pre-Greenspan years. What is the real economic rent for money? What kinds of policies imposed by the Greenspan years at the Fed have resulted in what kinds of charges to the American people relative to what had been done before Mr. Greenspan came to the Fed?

I will tell you the answer. The answer is, interest rates on a real basis have been higher in the Greenspan years by about one-half of 1 percent than the pre-Greenspan years. Can you justify that? I do not think so. And Mr. Greenspan, leading this Fed-and make no mistake, he is in charge, it is his policy, no one would contest that—has said over the years: We must grow more slowly; we cannot support higher growth: we must shade on the area of having more people unemployed rather than fewer people unemployed, and because of the risks of having too few people out of work and too much economic growth, we must retain interest rates at a level that is higher than historically justified relative to the rate of inflation.

Some might come to the floor and be able to justify that in their own minds. I certainly cannot. I do not think the American people believe either that Mr. Greenspan's higher interest rates relate to this new economy that can grow faster with lower unemployment numbers than most economists ever thought available or doable.

Let's talk just about the numbers for a few minutes. I mentioned that the core rate of inflation is now 1.9 percent over the last 12 months, the lowest its been since 1965. I mentioned Mr. Greenspan thinks the CPI overstates the rate of inflation by a percent and a half. That means we have virtually no inflation. But today the Fed said we are worried about inflation, therefore we must increase interest rates once again. The Fed is wrong once again.

In 1999, the GDP grew at 4 percent; in 1998, 4.3 percent; in 1997, 4.5 percent. In other words, in the two previous years to 1999, we had higher rates of growth than in the last year, and yet the Fed today, by its interest rate increase, says our economy is growing too fast.

Again, in my judgment, it is implausible. This Fed Chairman steers the Fed on monetary policy on the side of money center banks. I think monetary policy ought to be steered in a direction and on a course that relates to all of the needs and all of the interests of this economy and of the American people.

I talked a little about unemployment. In the past, the Fed has preached that the non-accelerating inflation rate of unemployment was 6 percent. In short, if the unemployment rate goes below 6 percent, consumer prices will go up. The Fed's reliance on this and other buggy-whip approaches to economic analysis have been terribly misdirected given the globalization and the galloping globalization of the workforce.

The unemployment rate has been below 6 percent for 64 consecutive months, over 5 years, without a peek at a new wave of inflation. Today, unemployment rates are at a 30-year low of 4.1 percent, and our economy is growing at a healthy rate without a shred of evidence that there is a new threat of inflation.

Some say Mr. Greenspan is increasing interest rates not so much because he is worried about inflation, although that is what he says, but because he wants to curb speculation in the stock market. He thinks there is something in the stock market; he said once "irrational exuberance"-whatever that means to economists. I used to teach economics ever so briefly. Irrational exuberance, he says—it is interesting irrational exuberance on the part of those who are engaging in transactions on Wall Street that are presumably market transactions, and presumably in a circumstance where the market works. It is interesting that Mr. Greenspan decides, because of this irrational exuberance, he wants to impose a penalty on all the American people through higher interest rates rather than deal with what I think may be the cause of this so-called irrational exuberance.

If Mr. Greenspan really wants to try to bust some of the bubble on Wall Street, maybe he ought not raise interest rates that cause direct and immediate harm to families and to producers, but maybe he ought to consider taking real steps to put limits on the use of "margins" by investors to buy stocks

It is interesting, the amount borrowed by investors to buy equity securities is growing to levels of significant concern.

Last November, the margin amount increased by 13.2 percent in 1 month alone—the largest monthly increase since 1971. Perhaps Mr. Greenspan might want to put some limits on the use of margins; but, no, not Mr. Greenspan. He would sooner impose an added interest charge on all Americans.

Let me talk for a moment about what I think is the low watermark of the Fed in recent times. That is the issue of Long-Term Capital Management, the ill-fated hedge fund, because it relates not only to the management of the Fed, but it relates to what the Fed is interested in and relates to the Fed's, in my judgment, insensitivity of or, perhaps in a stronger sense, blindness to solve the risks that exist that they ought to be concerned about but are not.

Long-Term Capital Management.

Mr. President, how much of my time remains?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Eleven minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, some while ago the Federal Reserve Board orchestrated a $3.6 billion bailout of something called Long-Term Capital Management, the highflying hedge fund, which I think calls into question the leadership at the Federal Reserve Board and calls into question what they think is important and what they are willing to ignore.

The federally insured banks were lenders and investors in this Long-Term Capital Management fund. The GAO, in its 1999 report, requested by myself and Congressman MARKEY, Senators HARKIN and REID, found that federal regulators failed to detect lapses in risk management by lenders, and others, that allowed Long-Term Capital Management to become large and excessively leveraged until after the crisis.

Mr. Greenspan testified that the intervention in the Long-Term Capital Management debacle was needed to prevent a crisis in the global financial markets. But then he appears just as quickly to dismiss the Fed role in the bailout as little more than a spectator providing office space.

What makes this more troublesome, to me, is that just days before the Federal officials visited Long-Term Capital Management in Connecticut to discuss its financial problems, Chairman Greenspan was testifying before the House Banking Committee that: "Hedge funds were strongly regulated by those who lend the money." Of course, nothing could have been further from the truth, as was uncovered by the GAO's 1999 investigation of the Long-Term Capital Management's near collapse.

The independent report reveals that our Federal regulators, including the Fed, allowed this speculative hedge fund to load up with $1.4 trillion notional value in derivatives, which threatened to bring chaos in financial markets here and around the world.

While I am on this subject of unregulated hedge funds, which the Fed on a Sunday had to bail out by arranging bank loans, shortly after they said: Gee, there is no problem here with hedge funds.

Let me add that the subject of derivatives ought to have some attention by not only our committees but by the Fed and other banking regulators, as well. There is something around $33 trillion notional value derivatives by banks in this country, and we have banks whose deposits are insured by the Federal Government, doing proprietary trading on derivatives on their own accounts

They could just as well put a craps table in the lobby of a bank. They could just as well put a roulette wheel in the lobby of a bank. A bank, with federally insured deposits, trading on its proprietary accounts in derivatives, and nobody seems to care. But someday, some way, someone will care because this is going to go the way of Long-Term Capital Management, unless there is adequate supervision. When those cards collapse, that collapse is going to be significant.

We need, in my judgment, strong management. We need assertive oversight by our committees. We need strong, aggressive oversight in the regulatory approaches by the Federal Reserve Board. Regrettably, that is not the case these days with respect to the Federal Reserve Board.

Since the chairman of the Banking Committee is here, I will say that I urge the committee to pay some attention. You probably already have. I am not suggesting you have not. I don't know what your agenda is. I hope very much the issue of derivatives and the issue of the regulation of hedge funds, or at least the concern about what hedge funds are doing in light of Long-Term Capital Management scandal, is something that is part of the agenda of the Banking Committee in this Congress.

I have described, at the start of my presentation, it is not my intention, nor would I expect it to be the intention of the Senator from Iowa, Mr. HARKIN, or others, to come to the floor to say that the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board is a bad person. I do not believe that. I met him. I like him. I think he is a good public servant. I think he has given a great deal to this country.

He and I simply have fundamental differences on monetary policy. He has run monetary policy with a tight fist, believing a certain way, and those beliefs include that we could not allow more growth. We had to have slower growth in order to avoid inflation. We had to have more people unemployed in order to avoid inflation. He was wrong on both counts, wrong consistently.

My point is, I think it is time—and I have told this to the President—I think it is time for new blood at the Federal Reserve Board.

I say to the Senator from Iowa, who has come to the floor, look at this Board. I, from time to time, as a public service—because the Fed is so closed and so secretive; it is the last dinosaur on the American landscape in public policy—I bring pictures to the floor to show people what the Fed looks like. Here is who they are. Here is where they graduated from. Here is what their degrees are. Put a gray suit on all these folks, and they all look the same, talk the same, and think the same.

That is why this policy is a homogenized policy that does not provoke any debate in this country about monetary policy.

A century ago they used to debate monetary policy in bars and barbershops. I thought that was healthy. Fifty years ago and 40 years ago, when McChesney Martin was running the Federal Reserve Board up here, he was going to raise interest rates by one quarter of 1 percent, and Lyndon Johnson got him down to the ranch in the Perdinales in Texas and darn near broke his shoulders he was squeezing him so tight.

The point is, it was front page headlines around the country because McChesney Martin was going to have the Fed raise interest rates by a quarter of 1 percent. The President got so upset he even called McChesney Martin down to the ranch. The Fed did not have to respond to Lyndon Johnson, but my point is, back then interest rate policy was a matter of public concern, of public debate. These days, these folks go in that well-paneled room and shut the door, and it is all done in secret. Then they open the door and say: Guess what we have done for you. There are too many people working. We are growing too fast, so therefore we have increased a tax on all the American people by increasing interest rates once again.

Four successive interest rate increases—1 full percent. Again, let me say that the average North Dakota household, which pays $356 a year more in interest rate charges—that is a new tax on the American consumer in my State and around the country.

Mr. HARKIN. That is true.

Mr. DORGAN. It was not a tax debated on the floor of the Senate. If we had that debate, my friend from Texas, Senator Gramm, the distinguished chairman of the Banking Committee, would be on the floor, I guarantee you, because when we debate taxes he is on the floor. He is a passionate combatant in those debates. But we cannot have that debate on the floor of the Senate because the Federal Reserve Board does not have a debate in public. It does it in secret.

What I am saying is, I think the Federal Reserve Board process needs to be more open. I know the response and the rejoinder to that will be: Well, the Senator wants to make the Federal Reserve Board process politics on the floor of the Senate. That is not my point. My point is, I think there ought to be, leading into this process somehow, some interests of the American people. It does not exist at the moment.

It is my intention to not support this renomination. I expect this renomination will carry with a very large vote in the Senate, but it will not carry with my vote because I believe monetary policy ought to change in this country. I do not believe our country is growing too fast. I do not believe too few people are unemployed. I do not share that view, that is too often shared in the bowels of the Federal Reserve Board. I would like someday for us to have a monetary policy that represents the entire interests of our country, not just the interests of money center banks.

Mr. HARKIN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. DORGAN. I am happy to yield.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Senator for his statement on the floor, pointing out that what this interest rate increase is is a tax on hard-working Americans, a very insidious kind of tax, too. It is going to have other repercussions.

The question I have to ask of the Senator is this: The Senator talked about the Federal Reserve Board meeting in secret and not knowing what is going on. I don't want to make it political either. No one wants to make it political. But I think we do have a right to know why they make the decisions they make.

It is my understanding that the transcripts of the meetings of the Fed are kept secret for 5 years, if I am not mistaken. It may be a shorter period. I stand to be corrected. We don't know for years why they made the decisions they made. What is so secretive about this?

Even if they do meet in secret, it seems to me that within 1 month or 3 months or 6 months we ought to at least have the transcript so we would know what was the discussion that went into why the Board raised interest rates a quarter of a point today; what the discussions were last year that caused them to raise interest rates three times. Keep in mind, the Fed has raised interest rates four times in a 1 year period. A little nick here, a little nick there, pretty soon you are bleeding pretty badly. Four times in a 1 year period. What were the reasons for it? We don't know because they meet in secret. Again, it is my understanding—I stand to be corrected—that the transcripts are kept secret for 5 years.

Again, the Senator from North Dakota has pointed this out many times, the Federal Reserve was not created by the Constitution of the United States. The Federal Reserve was created by legislation. It is a creature of Congress created by legislation. It seems to me we have a right and a responsibility to have a better understanding not only of how the Fed operates but why they make the decisions they do. I ask the Senator that question, about opening up the transcripts so we know why they make those decisions.

Mr. DORGAN. I don't know what length of time they keep the transcript private. However, the Federal Reserve Board is enormously private. I have said it is the last dinosaur. A little sunlight would be a great disinfectant for monetary policy.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the Senator from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 1 additional minute

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. There is so little known about the Federal Reserve Board that when Senator REID and I had a GAO report done recently, they said that the Federal Reserve Board has stashed away now close to $6.4 billion—then I believe it was $3.7 billion—in a kind of a rainy day fund. The rainy day fund was described by the Fed as a surplus fund that was to be used in the event they needed it if they suffered a loss.

This is an institution that makes money. This is an institution that has never had a loss, will never have a loss, and stashes away a cash reserve in the event that it has a rainy day. The GAO report, of course, was very critical of the management of the Fed on a wide range of things. But I will not put it in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's additional minute has expired.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I thank Senator Harkin. It is my understanding that since the distinguished Senator from Missouri wanted to speak only 3 or so minutes, that he had agreed that after I speak—and I should speak only 5 or 10 minutes—the Senator from Missouri could speak 3 or 4 minutes before Senator Harkin takes the floor. I think he has an hour. I thank him for that.

I hope people are watching this debate. Our dear colleague from North Dakota does an excellent job of presenting his point of view. It is not a point of view I agree with, but it is a point of view that obviously he believes and he presents very effectively, as does Senator Harkin.

For people who believe that there are no differences among Members, that parties don't make any difference, that Democrats and Republicans are identical, I hope they are listening to this debate because we are getting to the very heart of the fundamental differences that separate us and, in separating us, serve the country. In the process, we have an opportunity to present competing visions. Then every 2 years, on the first Tuesday after the first Monday of November, people decide whose vision they want to follow.

I think this debate is very informative and very important. I have asked for a fairly short amount of time. I think the minority side has 4 hours 5 minutes. I have asked that our side have 45 minutes because I think our case is a very strong one, and we don't think we have to be repetitive to make it.

As I look down the list of Americans who have served as Chairmen of the Board of the Federal Reserve Board, it reads like a Who's Who in economics and banking: Paul Volcker, Arthur Burns, William McChesney Martin. These are Americans who have provided distinguished service to our country. But as I look at the record of Alan Greenspan, I can stand on the floor of the Senate and say, without any fear of contradiction, that Alan Greenspan's record is the finest record that has ever been established by a Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board since we created the Federal Reserve and it began operating in 1913.

I go further in saying that whether we are talking about Nicholas Biddle at the Second Bank of the United States or about monetary policy conducted by the Treasury or about any central banker in any monetary center anywhere on the planet, I believe a strong case can be made that Alan Greenspan is the greatest central banker in the history of the world.

Why do I say these things? Let the record speak for itself in terms of what has happened under Alan Greenspan's leadership. First, how many people have been appointed to the highest appointed position in the land by Ronald Reagan, George Bush, and Bill Clinton? Is there any other person who has been appointed to a high position of public trust by those three men? The answer is no. And why have three successive Administrations appointed Alan Greenspan to be Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board? Because he is the best central banker we have ever had.

As we all debate this issue and have our opportunity to second-guess Alan Greenspan, let me talk about the record. The day Alan Greenspan became Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board in 1987, long-term interest rates were 8.98 percent. Today they are 6.42 percent. As a result, millions of Americans who did not have the opportunity to build and buy their own homes the day Alan Greenspan became Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, now have that opportunity, and they are seizing it in record numbers.

The day Alan Greenspan became Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board, the Dow Jones Industrial Average stood at 1,938.83. Today the Dow stands at over 11,000. In other words, the equity value of the broad cross-section measure of the fundamental industry in America has risen during the period that Alan Greenspan has been Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board by nearly 500 percent.

Today, schoolteachers, firemen, insurance salesmen, and coaches find that the value of their 401(k)s and their IRAs have skyrocketed, and as a result, their financial security has grown. They approach retirement in a better position than anyone could have ever expected. And that wealth is widely distributed. More Americans own part of the equity value of America than ever before in history. Indeed, we have come the closest of any society in history of fulfilling the Marxist dream of workers owning the means of production—only we have done it the real way, not with the government stealing it and claiming that workers own it; workers really do own it.

The unemployment rate the day Alan Greenspan became Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board stood at 5.7 percent. Today, it is 4.1 percent—the lowest level in 30 years. In fact, when you look at the array of social programs in the economy and their impact on the incentive of people to take jobs, when you look at the environment in which that 4.1 percent exists, I doubt if there has ever been a day in American history where the unemployment rate was effectively lower than it is today. The wonderful thing about this growth in employment is that it is not just the same people who are always getting jobs. A Congressman's daughter and the son of the bank president get jobsgood times and bad times.

What is wonderful about the golden economic age in which we are living is that employment among minorities is growing faster than employment in the economy as a whole. We have had an explosion in the number of women who have gone into business and succeeded, and the benefits of this economic growth are being more widely shared today than any economic growth that we have ever achieved.

The rate of inflation on the day Alan Greenspan became Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board was 4.5 percent, and we were grateful. Today, the inflation rate is just 2.7 percent. As one of our colleagues already noted, if we could account for quality differences, if we could take into account the quality differences in a new Suburban versus a Suburban 10 years ago, or the quality difference in a Sony television as compared to 10 years ago, that inflation rate would be virtually zero.

Just as Alan Greenspan was beginning his service as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board in 1987, we had a stock market drop of 500 points. That was a time when 500 points were real and represented a dramatic drop in equity values. Some argued that the Government had to intervene; too many people are investing in the equity market; we have to have dramatic reforms. But under the stable leadership of Alan Greenspan, and several other members of the Working Group that was put together at that time, we basically set about to strengthen the system in terms of liquidity and transparency, and Government kept its cold, dead hand off the equity market, and we have seen in the 1990s what the result has been.

At the end of the 1980s, we experienced the S&L collapse, the greatest financial crisis during my period of service in Congress. It cost $100 billion to fix. It could have been avoided had we put up money earlier and acted earlier, as President Reagan urged. But under the leadership of Alan Greenspan, while nobody knew it at the time, we instituted a procedure of closing troubled thrifts and selling off assets, which the whole world looks at as the standard of how you deal with a financial crisis.

Have we forgotten the Mexican peso crisis? Have we forgotten the Asian economic crisis? Can you remember when it was conventional wisdom that the collapse in Asia was going to mean an economic downturn in America? I missed that downturn, and so did America, Under Alan Greenspan's leadership, we have set a course that helped Asia regain its footing. Korea, through reforms, has done it. Other countries will achieve greater stability when they reform. Have we forgotten the Russian economic collapse? Have we forgotten the Brazilian currency collapse?

In other words, Alan Greenspan's stewardship as chairman has not been uneventful. But the net result is that the American economy has stayed on track. It is easy for us to second-guess the policies of the Federal Reserve Board, but who thought Alan Greenspan would raise interest rates on the very day that we are considering his confirmation? If that is not a statement of confidence in him, I don't know what is, and I don't see any reason to be second-guessing Alan Greenspan's record.

If I have a concern today as we move toward this vote, it is what are we going to do when Alan Greenspan is gone. I hope there is someone out there who will be capable of matching this record. But I am not sure there is such a person, and it worries me. My grandmother used to say, "The graveyard is full of indispensable men." Alan Greenspan is not going to have this job forever. But as long as he wants it, and I have a vote about whether he is going to get it, based on this record, I am going to vote to give him the opportunity to continue to serve.

Let me conclude with a final remark, and then I will turn it over to my colleague. Our founders were afraid of men on white horses. They tried to write a system so that it didn't make any difference how elections turned out. They tried to make it so that it didn't matter who was appointed to various positions because they knew that people were fallible. They tried to write a system that was relatively infallible. And so when someone achieves a record like this, while you can't give Alan Greenspan all the credit—I think a lot of the credit goes back to Ronald Reagan and the reforms that we undertook then, and I am willing to give some credit to Bill Clinton and some to Congress. But if you were going to pick anybody who is currently holding a position of public trust and ask who has had more to do with the success we have had in this last decade—the last 12 years, really—of unparalleled economic achievement, I think you would have to give the prize to Alan Green-

So there are two sides to the story. I hope people will listen to these arguments. This is serious business when you are talking about the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve Board. I hope they will listen to these arguments and that they will see that there are differences among Members, differences between the two parties. As long as there are people like Alan Greenspan who are willing to serve, I think America is in good shape. I am eager to see him have the opportunity to serve for another 4 years. I hope he is blessed with health that will allow him to continue in this job for a very long period of time.

With that, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Banking Committee for giving me the opportunity to make these remarks. I hope our colleagues are listening to his remarks. As a former economics professor, he has been able to bring to common terms, in understandable language, the message that is so important in economics.

I have stayed awake longer listening to his treatises on economics than I have on most of the ones I had in school. While the record is not perfect, at least it is better. We appreciate his kind words.

I also thank my colleague from Iowa for permitting me to make these remarks.

Mr. President, I rise to express my strong support for the nomination of Alan Greenspan for his fourth term as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

As has just been said, since Chairman Greenspan was originally appointed in 1987, his wise stewardship of the monetary policy of this country has in no small part contributed to the best economic times in our country's history.

Yesterday we reached a milestone of economic expansion. Our country has a record 107 consecutive months of economic growth. At no other time in our history have we experienced uninterrupted economic growth that has lasted this long. Moreover, it does not appear that this growth is slowing. Unemployment is at record lows. Consumer confidence is at record highs. Inflation, the unfortunate byproduct of expansion in the past, has been kept under control.

Some of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle have raised questions about the way Chairman Greenspan and the Federal Reserve have conducted their business. Make no mistake—it is an arcane science. Maybe it is an art. I am never sure whether it is an art or a science. Make no mistake about the fact that the Chairman of the Federal Reserve and the Board itself have tremendous power in this economy. It can cause inflation or it can foster low inflation. It can promote sound economic growth or it can cause a depression. As tough as that job isand probably none of us here in this body would fully understand it—fortunately, we have a means of judging the success of the work that is done by the Chairman and by the Federal Reserve. In no place can I think of a better application for the admonition that you shall be judged by your works or, as we say at home in Missouri and in the country: Show me. Don't tell me what you are going to do; show me what you have done. Under that test. Alan Greenspan has received the highest marks.

When you look at what has happened. more people are working. More people can buy homes. More people can keep their jobs. And they can see that their savings are not eroded by inflation.

It was only about 20 years ago we saw inflation destroying savings and driving the price of homes out of reach of almost every American—a tremendous crisis—because monetary policy had gotten out of control. Today we see monetary policy under control; we see growth; we see opportunity. All American citizens stand to benefit from this growth, and I think they owe a debt of gratitude to the dedicated public service of Chairman Greenspan.

Many economists did not believe low unemployment and low inflation could exist for a significant period of time. Indeed, our colleagues on the other side of the aisle have cited the fact that even Chairman Greenspan has learned as he has gone along. As he stated in his remarks, he has seen that there is a new paradigm. There is a new operation in effect. Times have changed, and we are learning more about economics.

But as we learn more about them and how monetary policy affects our country, the Chairman's firm hand on the rudder of economic policy has been responsible for keeping us on the straight and steady course. He wisely steered America clear of the potential harm that may have resulted from the Asian financial crisis and, as the chairman of the Banking Committee said, the other crises back through the savings and loan debacle.

In addition, he has provided unwavering support for fiscally conservative budgetary policy and has been of enormous assistance to this body. He explained to us even recently, as he probably well needed to, the necessity of continuing to link sound monetary and sound fiscal policy. I believe if you translate what he said in his speech, it was: Don't blow the surplus on big spending programs. That is an important message for us.

As we look to the future, we see that the near-term economic future of this country looks promising. There are clearly—and we all recognize it—dangers to our prosperity that will likely arise, including inflation fears, increasing labor costs, dampening market problems, and structural problems in the economy. But Chairman Greenspan's thoughtful leadership over the last 12 years will serve us well in the coming years

I am very proud to add my name in support of Alan Greenspan for another term as Chairman of the Federal Reserve. I congratulate and I thank President Clinton for nominating him because I think not only we as a country are grateful that he has agreed to accept a fourth term but we will all benefit from his service in that term.

I urge all of my colleagues to support his nomination.

I thank the Chair. I thank my colleague from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, how much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER VOINOVICH). Forty nine and one half minutes

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to let my fellow Senators know I don't intend to take that much time.

Mr. President, I noted with some interest that the chairman of the committee, Senator GRAMM from Texas, when he started speaking a few moments ago said this debate we were having—and he mentioned the Senator from North Dakota, he mentioned this Senator—indicated the fundamental difference between the parties. I waited to see just exactly what he meant by that. I never heard an explanation.

But maybe this debate does show some fundamental differences. For example, we are for openness. We believe the Federal Reserve ought to meet in the open, that it shouldn't meet in private. We believe transcripts ought to be made available to the public sooner than they are. Of course, we believe in lower interest rates. We want open meetings and lower interest rates, and the other side wants private meetings and higher interest rates. Perhaps that is really the fundamental difference we are talking about. I say it only tongue in cheek. But it does, I think, really say what this is all about.

That is whether or not we are going to have some more accountability and openness in the Federal Reserve rather than what we have had in the past. Its decisions affect every American's life. It affects all of us. This recent interest rate increase today, as the Senator from North Dakota said, is a tax on all Americans. We are all going to pay for it. Some of us can afford to pay it a lot more easily than others. If you are a creditor, if you are part of the creditor class in America where your income exceeds your outgo, where you are able to save, where you have a lot of assets, and you are into investing and lending, higher interest rates may not be such a bad idea.

However, if you are in the lower income sector of our economy, you need to buy a new car to get to work and the old one has run out, you do not have enough money, you have to put some money down, pay for it on time, or roll your interest on your credit cards month to month, maybe you need to make your house payment, maybe your kids are in college, you need to make some college payments, and you are an individual making less than $30,000 a year as a family, this is a real tax. It is going to cost you more money. Yet we don't know what the debate was. We don't know the details of why they did this. We will not know for years.

I believe there is an important difference. The Open Market Committee just announced another quarter-point interest rate from 5.5 to 5.75 and an increase in the discount rate as well.

This makes four times in 1 year that we have had interest rate increases four times, three times last year, and then once this month.

These increases hurt prospective homeowners. It is going to hurt the housing market. I want to say at the outset, we all want Americans to save more money. For modest-income Americans, the best savings program they have is owning their own homes. For modest-income Americans, when they are through with their working lives and they retire and they are on Social Security, the biggest asset they have, and in many cases the only asset they have, is the equity they have in their homes. So we want Americans to become homeowners.

This interest rate increase will hurt Americans hoping to own their own homes. It will decrease the number of Americans who can own their own homes and have that as their savings vehicle. It will hurt small businesses and manufacturing. My farmers, who are already hurting enough and who have to borrow every year to get their crops in, they are going to get hit again. Everyone will be hurt one way or another. Some will feel it more profoundly than others. The prime rate is moving up today from 8.5 percent to 8.75 percent. That means the real interest rate, not the nominal but the real interest rate, adjusted to inflation, is close to 6.55 percent.

Again, it is the real interest rate that you feel, not the nominal. For example, if interest rates were at, say, 10 percent, and inflation were at 8 percent, the real rate of interest would be 2 percent. If, however, interest rates are 8.75 percent, and inflation is only 2.2 percent, your real rate of interest is 6.55 percent. That hurts you more.

When our economy was flourishing in the 1960s with the highest growth rates we ever had, our real prime rates ran around 2 percent to 3 percent. In other words, the real interest rates were 2 to 3 percent. Today it is about 6.55 percent. Think about that.

Hopefully, the Fed will not be continuing this process because this hurts people, and there is no reason for it. That is really the essence of my remarks today. Mr. Greenspan and the Federal Reserve Board seemed to think they needed to make a preemptive strike on inflation before we see clear signs of inflation out there. This view, if aggressively acted upon, would place an absolute cap on our economy's ability to grow. It would destroy much of our potential for growth. That is a tragedy.

Back in 1996, I opposed the renomination of Mr. Greenspan along with a number of my colleagues—a small number. I said at the time, and I say again today, I have no personal animus toward Mr. Greenspan. I agree with those who said he has had a distinguished career in public service. I think he is a bright individual. Like I say, I have only met him, as I can remember, once in my entire lifetime, so I have no personal animosity toward him. I think he is an honorable individual, exceptionally smart—bright.

I did have one thing someone brought to my attention at one time. They said back in his youth he was a follower of Ayn Rand, and was with some little group with Ayn Rand in New York City. I said: Don't hold that against him. I said: If you can't test way-out theories, far-out kinds of philosophies when you are young, when are you ever going to test them? I assume Mr. Greenspan has moved on from his youthful days of following that wayout philosophy of Ayn Rand's and is now more mainstream and more centrist than that. But like I say, that is fine. I don't mind what people do in their youth. That is the time to test theories and philosophies, when you are young.

As the Senator from North Dakota said, I have no personal animosity toward Mr. Greenspan. I just have a problem with what I believe the philosophy is at the Fed. I don't think it just applies to Mr. Greenspan, It applies to a lot of people at the Federal Reserve Board.

In 1996, I opposed the renomination because I feared that he, along with others, had a history of jumping to raise interest rates and to choke off economic growth too soon, blocking the economy from growing at its potential and keeping millions of modestincome, middle-income Americans from benefiting from their hard work.

A former Chairman of the Fed, William McChesney Martin, once said it was the Fed's job to remove the punch bowl at the party. At some point that should be done. But doing it too early kills our chance for growth, for jobs. It effectively kills any chance for the maximum number of Americans to climb the ladder of opportunity.

Prior to 1996, Mr. Greenspan showed very little concern in that regard. He was focused on the possibility of accelerating inflation. He had, in the past, I believe—and again I say he and the others on the Fed—had damaged the economy by moving too quickly to raise rates and choking off our growth potential.

For some time, a lot of economists, not all but a lot of economists took the view that NAIRU, the nonaccelerating inflation rate of unemployment, was 5½ or 6 percent; in other words, that if unemployment went below 5½ or 6 percent for a period of time, then inflation would take off. Once it started to accelerate, it would be very hard to stop. So that view was once unemployment got down to that level for a period of time, one had to raise interest rates and stop unemployment from being too

At the same time, the orthodox view among a lot of economists about how fast could the economy grow over the long term was about 2.3 percent; somewhere between 2 and 2.5 percent.

I must again be very frank. That was the administration's estimate of the economy's potential for sustainable growth. That was in President Clinton's budget's economic assumptions for FY 97 and I opposed that. I said to the President and his economic advisers at the time: That is nonsense. You are following some of these economists who do not understand the new economy that is out there. They do not understand the new rate of productivity growth and what is causing it. They are still looking back. They are back in the eighties and not in the 1990s.

So it was not just the Fed at that time, it was also the administration of President Clinton and the CBO.

They saw it as a simple calculation. You take the increased expected productivity of the economy, estimated at 1.2 percent—again, very low—add the increase to the labor pool—about 1.1 percent—and you get a 2.3-percent rate of growth.

Again, they said if economic growth exceeded 2.3 percent over time, or if unemployment fell below 6 percent, the alarm bells would have to go off. It was prudent to raise interest rates or we would be on the perilous path of accelerating inflation.

So in 1996, viewing that, I feared we would never get a chance to see what our economy was really capable of doing. That is why I opposed the renomination of Mr. Greenspan in 1996. I suggested in 1996, that the supporters of NAIRU were wrong, that it was an outdated concept. I said at the time we could have unemployment at 4.5 percent or less, and I said it was possible because of increased productivity due to the new technologies, because of the greater integration of the world economy, the new marketing techniques that are taking place in America and that NAIRU was wrong and ought to be thrown out the window.

I suggested in 1996 that we ought to give our economy a chance to do better or we would limit our economic growth and limit the ability of average Americans to see their incomes rise.

Mr. Greenspan indicated that he would not raise rates simply because of the NAIRU. That was a good statement, but again we had a history of these preemptive strikes, and I feared we would not let the economy reach its potential.

I believed Mr. Greenspan would be quick to see the specter of inflation behind some little statistic. I am here to say fortunately I was wrong about that. Mr. Greenspan and the Fed have allowed the economy to grow. Part of the reason was particular situations, such as the crash of the Asian economies, but I believe there was a willingness to let the economy grow and a new attitude that there were some new things happening in the economy.

I read a speech Mr. Greenspan gave in which he mused about the increase in productivity and how it did not seem to have any end, the use of computers and how they helped to control inventories. Quite frankly, there seemed to be a shift then at the Fed at that time.

The results have been very impressive. Gross domestic product has been increasing at an average rate of about 4.3 percent since Greenspan was last confirmed. Unemployment has gone down by over a percentage point. The portion of our population over 16 in the workforce is at or near a record high. Unemployment for minorities, teenagers, traditionally hard-to-employ groups are at record lows. Incomes for those at the middle are rising—not as I would like—and, to some extent, those at the bottom are rising.

What has happened is unemployment fell below 6 percent and inflation did not take off; economic growth was near 3 percent and inflation did not take off. And then unemployment came down to 5.5 percent and nothing happened. Then unemployment went below 4.5 percent. It has been under 4.5 percent for almost 2 years now. No inflation. We are seeing our GDP increase at over 4 percent on average per year, almost twice what people were saying a feasible sustainable rate of growth of 2.3 percent and there is no inflation and productivity continues to increase.

That was in the initial years. Then starting last year Mr. Greenspan seems to have shifted his view. The concern was not NAIRU. It was irrational exuberance in the stock market. Therefore, we had to put interest rates back up. Last year, there were three ticks up. Today there was another tick up; bringing us to a 1-percent increase in 1 year. It almost seems as Fed are looking for something out there. If it is not NAIRU, which has been discarded, then it is something else out there as to why we have to raise interest rates. There is something else out there lurking that is going to cause inflation to happen.

Is it irrational exuberance in the stock market. What this is going to mean is that, quite frankly, we are going to have more ticks up in the interest rate, enough till we see the rate of unemployment start to rise again.

I believe that would be a tragic mistake. People need to be employed. We still have people out there who need job training and skill upgrading. Can unemployment stay this low without causing accelerating inflation? Absolutely. The common wisdom is that we have a pool of low-skill workers still to be tapped. All they need is job training and skill upgrading, but they are there.

Robert Lerman, in an October 26, 1998, Washington Post article said:

Differences between the groups entering and leaving the workforce explains the surprisingly high qualifications of newly employed adults. Older workers without a high school degree are retiring, replaced by younger, better educated workers. In the past 6 years, the population of college graduates aged 25 and over increased by about 20 percent, well above the 7 percent growth in total adult population. Meanwhile, the population of high school dropouts declined by nearly 3 million.

We are getting that higher skilled workforce, and they are more productive. The economy is also attracting people who were not considering work to come back into the work force.

The job market has been tight in most places. In Iowa, we have a low rate of unemployment, about 2.2 percent, and that is good. Are wages skyrocketing in Iowa because we have low unemployment? No. Are they rising modestly? Yes, and they should. With this booming economy and 4-percent growth in our GDP, wages ought to be going up.

As an aside, I find it more than passing strange that here we are in the second week back this year and we could move through the Banking Committee at almost light speed the renomination of a central banker, Mr. Greenspan, to be head of the Fed, but we cannot do it to raise the minimum wage. We cannot do anything to help low-income people get a better share of the economic growth of this country. Gosh, we could sure move fast to help the banking system out, but not to help modest-income Americans.

Many economists now come to conclude that NAIRU should not be used to predict a new wave of inflation. Quite frankly, I am happy it is dead. We had this irrational exuberance in the stock market. Now we have a new concept. As I said, if it is not NAIRU, then it is this irrational exuberance. The new concern is the wealth effect. Mr. President, have you heard about the wealth effect? Mr. Greenspan is talking about the wealth effect as a reason we should fear inflation and that we should have some preemptive strike. You have to have something, there has to be something out there. Chairman Volcker had the money supply. Now we have the wealth effect.

In a speech at the Economic Club in New York earlier this month, Chairman Greenspan noted the possible negative impacts of the wealth effect. He said that estimates of the wealth effect on the GDP has hovered around 1 percent of the GDP since late 1996. He then said, in part:

. . . the impetus to spending by the wealth effect by its very nature clearly cannot persist indefinitely. In part, it adds to the demand for goods and services before the corresponding increase in output fully materializes. It is, in effect, increased purchasing from future income, financed currently by greater borrowing or reduced accumulation of assets

There are always limits, aren't there? Economists were right not to clamp down on the economy until we see real signs of inflation. The Fed should stick with that view. Today's increase makes me believe the Fed will endanger the economy by not waiting for real signs of inflation, and now the wealth effect has become the latest reason, despite the fact inflation is nowhere in sight, except for the runup in oil prices caused, in large part, by OPEC's setting of limits on oil production. The Fed raising interest rates will have no effect on that. I think everyone agrees with that.

This wealth effect is estimated by some to add about 4 cents in extra spending per dollar of increased wealth. A prominent study by senior vice president Charles Steindel and economist Sydney Ludvigson, both with the New York Fed, concluded the wealth effect was likely to be between 3 and 4 cents per dollar in annual consumption. They also said it is impossible to predict how quickly the wealth effect will kick in. It can take years for consumer spending to reach a permanently higher level. They said:

Forecasts of future consumption growth are not typically improved by taking changes in existing wealth into account.

So I guess what I am saying is the wealth effect—just like NAIRU, should not be the reason for raising interest rates, simply because of the fear that it will cause an inevitable cascade of economic effects leading to accelerating inflation.

As the Senator from North Dakota said earlier, I believe if the Fed wants a more targeted instrument to more carefully check some of the excesses in the stock market, they should look at margin requirements for buying stock on credit. But raising the interest rates is not going to do it without great harm to the economy as a whole.

So quite frankly, again, we see no signs of higher inflation. We have had inflation down from 3.3 percent in 1996 to 1.7 percent in 1997, and 1.6 percent in 1998, and in 1999 it jumped to 2.7 percent.

Is that a problem? It sounds like a problem until we take out food and energy. Without food and energy, the core inflation rate continues to improve on a December-to-December basis. In 1996 it was 2.6 percent, in 1997 it was 2.2 percent, in 1998 it was 2.4 percent, and in 1999 it dropped to 1.9 percent—when you take out food and energy.

So inflation is going down. Inflation is dropping. And the Fed is raising interest rates. Please, will some economist tell us what is going on here?

Again, inflation took a jump in December two-tenths of a percent. But, again, without food and energy. And energy—that was the culprit, not food—energy prices shot up 1.4 percent that month. Raising the interest rate is not going to cure that. I do not know of anyone who says it will.

Petroleum prices move with the OPEC cartel's production, not by the effects of interest rate increases. I will repeat that. We all understand petroleum prices move with the OPEC cartel's production and not by the effects of interest rate increases.

So again, I repeat, last year inflation actually went down on a December-to-December basis. Yet we had three increases in interest rates last year and another increase just today.

Why? What is happening out there? This is hitting our farmers. It is hitting our working families. It may not be hitting Senators and Congressmen making 130-some thousand dollars a year. It is not hitting people making money in the stock market. We have our share of megamillionaires in this body. It is not hurting us, not hurting them.

But you go out and talk to that husband and wife who are both working jobs, and they have a couple of kids at home, and they are making $40,000 a year, and they are trying to pay a mortgage on a house, trying to keep a car—maybe two cars; they need two for both of them with their jobs—and keeping their kids in clothes. This is a tax on them.

We have no signs of accelerating inflation. I believe we are going down the wrong path in raising interest rates.

I basically believe we ought to have the lowest possible reasonable interest rates at all times, and only when we see clear signs of inflation should we then begin the process of ratcheting up interest rates. We have had a period of quality growth and we should be doing all that we can to sustain it.

Again, I have a lot more I could say about this and what we ought to be doing. What we should be doing is keeping interest rates low. We ought to be taking the surpluses we have, not using them for a tax cut, which, again, would be the wrong thing to do at this time. That would do more to stimulate inflation than anything, having some tax cut that is going to stimulate and fuel even more demand out there.

What we ought to be doing is using the surplus we have now to buy down the national debt. This is where I do agree with Mr. Greenspan: Buy down the national debt. He is right in that regard. I do agree with him on that.

But we also need to use some of the surplus to invest in our children's education so they can partake of the new economies as they grow older. Every child in grade school today ought to have access to computers and to the Internet. Every teacher who teaches in grade school today ought to be fully trained in teaching the new kinds of skills using the new technologies.

We need to reeducate those already in our workforce with job training. We need to upgrade our infrastructure. There are $100 billion in needed repairs in our schools in America. I understand the President's budget was going to have $1.3 billion for that.

We need to improve our infrastructure. We need to improve our transportation infrastructure in this country. These are the things we ought to be doing. This would help to keep our GDP high, keep our workforce employed, keep unemployment low, and keep inflation down. It would not be a tax on working Americans like raising the interest rates that the Fed is doing right now.

Productivity is good. Productivity is increasing. We hope it will get back to where it was in the 1960s. Long term high productivity. A lot of people think we are more productive today than in the 1960s. From 1960 to 1970, our productivity increased by 31.8 percent. From 1990 to the year 2000, it increased 21 percent, although we are doing a lot better in the last half of the 90s. So we have a ways to go before we are as productive as in the 1960s. But I believe that will happen in the next decade if we have reasonable policies. In the next decade, I believe our productivity will continue at a high level and further increase and will closely approximate what we had in the 1960s.

I was chastised back in 1996 when I opposed the Greenspan nomination. I was on a couple talk shows, and people asked: What do you think the growth rate could be, the sustained growth rate? I said: At least 3.5 percent, 3 to 3.5 percent without any problem. I got hit by a few economists who said: Oh, HARKIN is way out on that one.

Since 1996 we have had—what?—4 percent and no inflation. So even I—as optimistic as I am about the American economy and the ability of our workforce—was a little underestimating the real rate of growth we could have.

I am just saying, in the next 10 years we can still maintain a 3- to 4-percent growth rate. I believe we can maintain an honest average of over a 3-percent growth in the next decade. It is not going to happen if this Federal Reserve continues to raise these interest rates. They are going to choke it off. And they are going to choke it off for no good reason whatsoever.

We can improve the quality of the lives of Americans, and we can invest in our future, and we can buy down the national debt. We can do all those wonderful things. But if the Fed persists in raising interest rates, it is going to choke off our rate of growth. All of the good we do here—in terms of keeping a surplus, in getting rid of the national debt, of investing in young people and in education—all that will be for naught because our rate of growth will be choked off. When that rate of growth is choked off, unemployment is going to go up.

The Fed talks about a soft landing. If you are flying well and the airplane is working and you have a lot of fuel and the sky is clear, why are you worried about a landing? Why are they talking about a landing? This economy, I believe, can grow at a 3-percent plus rate for the next decade. We will have a landing all right. If they keep raising interest rates, we will have a landing.

Let me close by saying I think there is a reverse side to the wealth effect. I coin the term the "poor effect." Some economists believe that shrinking wealth has an even bigger effect on spending than growing wealth. If we push the economy into a dive, we will experience the poor effect again. Economist Mark Zandi suggests that declining wealth reduces spending by about 7 cents per dollar of wealth lost. So if the wealth effect is 3 to 4 cents a dollar, declining wealth reduces spending by 7 cents per dollar, almost twice as much. So any danger that is out there of accelerating inflation must be weighed against the possible result of slowing the economy and what I call the poor effect, not the wealth effect but the poor effect.

Rural Iowa, my State, experienced the poor effect in a deep agricultural recession in the mid-1980s. The value of land fell by more than 50 percent as our rural economy crumbled. I saw grown friends of mine cry in public, farmers lose their lands, and some of them took their own lives. Families fell apart; couples divorced. The economy of rural lowa shrunk. Let's not jump too quickly to use the club of higher interest rates.

The Federal Reserve has two mandates in law. The Federal Reserve is not a creature of the Constitution of the United States. You won't find it in the Constitution anywhere. It is a creature of Congress. We legislatively created it. We gave it two mandates: to balance concerns about inflation on the one hand and to stimulate full employment on the other. Those goals were placed in the law in 1978.

Prior to 1978, there was no specific mention of inflation at all in the law. It was not in any of the laws about the Fed going all the way back to its founding in 1913. By the Full Employment and Balanced Growth Act of 1978, the Congress, in the exercise of its constitutional power, said to the Fed: You have two functions now: check inflation and stimulate full employment. That law we passed in 1978 set a goal of 4-percent unemployment for those 16 and older, 3 percent for those over 19. We are near 4 percent now. Throughout the 1980s and 1990s, conservative economists laughed at those goals. They said they were ridiculous targets set by politicians. That is the law of the land, and it sure doesn't look so silly now.

I worry that the Fed has a hard time maintaining a balance between inflation and full employment concerns. They are only focused on the specter of inflation, and there is no inflation out there. As I said, new advances in our technology, in our computers, designing products at high speed, the rapid replacement of parts, tight controls on inventories at lower cost, reduces the inventory buildup, one of the classic causes of past recessions. Communications costs are dropping like a rock. Every day I get something in the mail that I can make long-distance calls cheaper than I did the day before. Now you can get computers individually tailored for retail customers under $1,000 from Gateway Computer. Amazing, a world economy, capital flowing around the world

I know others want to speak. I see my good friend from Minnesota, who has been a great leader on this in the past, on the floor. I know he wants to speak. I took this time because, as I said, I don't want anyone to mistake that I have some personal animosity toward Mr. Greenspan. That is not so. I do have very deep-seated questions about the direction of the Fed, the fact they are raising interest rates without any inflation, and they are going to choke off this great growth we are having in this country with a series of interest rate increases. They are going to push up unemployment.

I will yield the floor with the final statement that we need to open up the Federal Reserve System's meetings. I don't want to make them political. It should not be political. We need to know why they are making the decisions they make. The decision they make on raising interest rates taxes every working American. How would they feel if we debated tax policy behind closed doors? I don't want to make it political, but I think it ought to be open. Secondly, I believe the Fed should pay more attention to unemployment and to growth and not just get so fixated on some specter of inflation that is not even out there.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.
Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, my

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, my colleague from Virginia is here. I have a fairly lengthy statement. I know our colleague from Virginia wants to speak. I wish to take a few minutes. I ask the Chair, are we going to vote tomorrow? Do we have a time limit today or not?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We do have a time limit. The Senator has 49 minutes remaining.

Mr. WELLSTONE. If I take a few minutes now and then come back after the Senator from Virginia speaks, are we going to be in session for a while tonight speaking on this? Will I be able to do that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair is not aware of any time limit.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Chair. Mr. WARNER. I wonder, if I took but 3 minutes, would that convenience my colleague?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I have to leave anyway in a few minutes for a meeting with some farmers. Let me take a few minutes, and I will be done. Then I will be pleased to yield the floor and then come back later.

Mr. President, first of all, let me thank the Senator from Iowa for his comments. I think I can be brief because much of what he says I am in such strong agreement with.

Mr. President, tomorrow morning, do we have any time for debate before the vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There are no orders that have been entered for tomorrow as of yet.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Is there a scheduled vote tomorrow at a particular time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Nothing has been ordered yet for tomorrow, so the Senator can assume there might be some time.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I ask unanimous consent that I may have 20 minutes to speak tomorrow morning.

Mr. WARNER. Reserving the right to object, I suggest that the manager of this nomination be consulted first. Can the Senator withhold that and as a matter of courtesy discuss it with the manager and leadership of the Senate? I think that would be an important consideration. At this time, with no discourtesy to my colleague, I register an objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, how much time do I have left?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Forty-two minutes.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I yield the floor.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I say with a great sense of humility that I have been privileged to be in public office for over 30 years. In the course of that time, I have had the privilege and wonderful opportunity to meet dozens and dozens of people who have held public office. I have listened to the very interesting comments of my colleagues with regard to the economy and interest rates and the like concerning the distinguished nominee, Mr. Greenspan. I simply go to a very simple but direct point with regard to this nomination; that is, dollars have a different meaning to people—savings, investments, and the like. But almost without exception they represent the efforts of hard work.

Therefore, when it comes time to preserve, invest, save, whatever you may do with those dollars—the man and woman primarily who have earned it—you want to know that the system, the value of that dollar, the protection of that dollar is there for your anticipated use and in many instances for the next generation. As to those people who are directly concerned with the regulatory process and decision process which vitally affects the value of the dollar and the protection of the investments, you want to know they are of unquestionable character.

I have known the nominee for many years and have had the privilege of working with him, playing golf and tennis with him. You get to know the totality of the man. This man is extraordinary. There will not be raised in the course of this debate, in my judgment, one single comment by any of my colleagues questioning this man's character. He is known by many in this community, he is known in this country, and he is known worldwide. The solidarity of his character and ethical standards is second to none. You may differ with him on some of his decisions, and that is understandable, but in terms of integrity, character, and ethics, he is beyond question. How fortunate we are that the President has selected this man to continue to serve this country and, indeed, the world because we are the world's leader in economics, national security, and in every other respect.

I am happy to add my few words and indicate my support that we are fortunate to have a person of his great character to step up once again and assume the arduous role and time-consuming lifestyle of this important post. But before we confer on him the advice and consent of the Senate and every other aspect, he is not infallible. As I said, I remember someone many years ago talking about Great Britain who said: You get to know a man—on the playing fields I think it was. He is not infallible. This man cannot keep a golf score. His partners constantly have to remind him. He cannot keep score in a tennis game. This is perplexing. I can bring witnesses to attest to this. But we have to overlook that minor matter as he deals with major figures, and we wish him luck with the anticipated action of this distinguished body.

I yield the floor.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be able to use as much time under Senator GRAMM's time allotment as I may consume.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I rise in support of Alan Greenspan's nomination as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Many years from now, historians may look at the Clinton Presidency and say that the best decision he made in office was to keep Alan Greenspan at the helm of the Federal Reserve.

Alan Greenspan, the individual, is a man of unquestioned integrity and intellect. I have known him for over two decades. He is truly one of our finest public servants. He has served at the Federal Reserve since 1987, and a steady hand at the wheel he has been. When the economy could have been volatile with a less experienced person, having him there caused the seas to be more tranquil. As my colleague Senator Gramm has said, he may be the finest central banker we have ever had in the United States or, for that matter, the world has ever known.

In fact, it is the example he has shown that has caused many other countries to realize the importance of having a central bank of transparency, of having someone who is not political at the helm of Federal Reserve policy. This example is going to strengthen many new democracies we are seeing in the world today, and his example will be the one they follow.

I find it curious that there are some in opposition to this nomination, and it is really ironic in light of yesterday's headlines that the economic expansion that began in 1991 is now the longest in American history. That did not happen by accident. It did not happen by luck. It happened because there was a steady hand at the wheel. That may not be the only reason we have had economic expansion. Our creativity, the spirit of entrepreneurship in our country, also has a part in that. But if we had someone who was trigger happy at the Fed, someone who would jump too quickly and too far, it could have caused a very different result. I am very pleased that the President has renominated Alan Greenspan.

There is an old saying: If it "ain't" broke, don't fix it. It seems to me some of the Senators I have heard on the floor today speaking in opposition to Alan Greenspan's renomination are fixing a Maytag. In fact, this "ain't" broke, and the last thing we need to do is tinker with something that is working very well.

America is enjoying an unprecedented economic expansion. Of course, Alan Greenspan's steady hand at the Federal Reserve Board has allowed our economy to flourish and not be crippled by high inflation or interest rates. It has not been an easy task. Every time the Federal Open Market Committee meets, the airwaves are full of people saying the Fed either made the right decision or the wrong decision, they should have done more, they should have done less. It is a careful balancing act, but I can think of no one I would be happier to have in charge than Dr. Greenspan.

He knows the power of his words. Many times I have been in the audience when he has spoken, and he is very careful not to overstep. He knows that what he says is going to affect the stock market, and he does not want to have such an impact. He himself jokes sometimes to audiences: If you think you understand what I am about to say, you have misunderstood.

He does not want to do something that is going to have a drastic impact, that will have a 1-day impact or a 2-day impact or a 1-week impact. What he wants is to have a steady, noninflationary atmosphere so we will not have interest rates that are too high, interest rates that are too low, an economy that is not hot enough. He understands these issues because of his experience.

We do not know what our economic future holds, but this much we do know: Whatever economic ups or downs may confront us in the future, and particularly economic ups and downs of other countries which we cannot control, the person most capable of dealing with them is Alan Greenspan. With him in charge, we are much more likely to avoid economic pitfalls for our country.

I urge the Senate to approve his nomination. I am certain it will. From the speeches I have heard on the floor today, the overwhelming sentiment is going to be to confirm Alan Greenspan.

He has been at the Federal Reserve for 13 years. He has presided over the greatest economic expansion in the world, and most surely we will be in our strongest position to withstand whatever might hit us in the future if we have someone with his experience, his integrity, and his intellect at the head of the Federal Reserve Board.

I hope my colleagues will confirm him tomorrow and that it will be an overwhelming vote. The time has come for us to move on this important nomination.

I thank the Chair. I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. HUTCHISON). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent to speak as in morning business for up to 20 minutes. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Mr. Voinovich pertaining to the introduction of S.J. Res. 38 are located in today's Record under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, as I did 4 years ago, I wish to record my emphatic and enthusiastic support for the nomination of the honorable Alan Greenspan to a fourth term as Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. He is a national treasure. He has served our Nation with principle and wisdom, and I shall attempt to show in these brief remarks, unprecedented success.

Let me cite four principal reasons—updated from four years ago—why he should again be confirmed by the Senate.

The economy is now in its 107th month of an expansion—the longest in American history—which shows no sign of ending.

The unemployment rate for December was 4.1 percent and has been below 5 percent for almost three years. Not too long ago, economists estimated that the NAIRU, as the acronym was for the nonaccelerating inflation rate of unemployment—what we might call full employment—was about 6 percent.

Next, inflation is in check. Measured by the CPI—which economists believe overstates inflation—consumer prices have increased by less than 3 percent per year for the past three years.

Finally, the misery index—the sum of the unemployment rate and the inflation rate—is about 7 percent, the lowest level in 30 years.

These outcomes are a tribute to Alan Greenspan's stewardship of our Nation's monetary policy for the past 13 years. But his wisdom and influence extend far beyond mere stewardship of monetary policy.

Last Wednesday, at his confirmation hearing before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs he had this to say in response to a question about the use of budget surpluses from Senator PHIL GRAMM, the Committee's Chairman, Dr. Greenspan said:

... my first priority would be to allow as much of the surplus to flow through into a reduction in debt to the public... From an economic point of view, that would be, by far, the best means of employing it.

And last month, in remarks before the Economic Club of New York, Chairman Greenspan demonstrated why he has been so successful. He understands—as perhaps few others in high level economic policy positions—how the economy works. One can only marvel at the clarity and insights he brought to bear as he explained to his audience the impact on productivity of just-in-time inventories, and reasons why the wealth effect from the increase in the stock market has sustained the current expansion, while at the same time containing "the potential seeds of rising inflationary and financial pressures that could undermine the current expansion." Ever vigilant to these potential dangers explains why the FED, under Chairman Greenspan, today increased interest rates by one-quarter of a percentage point.

Based on his performance, Chairman Greenspan deserves to be reconfirmed. I have no doubt that the Senate will, in a near unanimous vote, concur.

I ask unanimous consent that remarks of Chairman Greenspan, at the Economic Club of New York be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

REMARKS BY ALAN GREENSPAN, CHAIRMAN, BOARD OF GOVERNORS OF THE FEDERAL RE-SERVE SYSTEM, BEFORE THE ECONOMIC CLUB OF NEW YORK, JANUARY 13, 2000

We are within weeks of establishing a record for the longest economic expansion in this nation's history. The 106-month expansion of the 1960s, which was elongated by the Vietnam War, will be surpassed in February. Nonetheless, there remain few evident signs of geriatric strain that typically presage an imminent economic downturn.

Four or five years into this expansion, in the middle of the 1990s, it was unclear whether going forward, this cycle would differ significantly from the many others that have characterized post-World War II America. More recently, however, it has become increasingly difficult to deny that something profoundly different from the typical postwar business cycle has emerged. Not only is the expansion reaching record length, but it is doing so with far stronger-than-expected economic growth. Most remarkably, inflation has remained subdued in the face of labor markets tighter than any we have experienced in a generation. Analysts are struggling to create a credible conceptual framework to fit a pattern of interrelationships that has defied conventional wisdom based on our economy's history of the past half century.

When we look back at the 1990s, from the perspective of say 2010, the nature of the forces currently in train will have presumably become clearer. We may conceivably conclude from that vantage point that, at the turn of the millennium, the American economy was experiencing a once-in-a-century acceleration of innovation, which propelled forward productivity, output, corporate profits, and stock prices at a pace not seen in generations if ever seen in generations, if ever.

Alternatively, that 2010 retrospective might well conclude that a good deal of what we are currently experiencing was just one of the many euphoric speculative bubbles that have dotted human history. And, of course, we cannot rule out that we may look back and conclude that elements from both scenarios have been in play in recent years.

On the one hand, the evidence of dramatic innovations—veritable shifts in the tectonic plates of technology—has moved far beyond mere conjecture. On the other, these extraordinary achievements continue to be bedeviled by concerns that the so-called New Economy is spurring imbalances that at some point will abruptly adjust, bringing the economic expansion, its euphoria, and wealth creation to a debilitating halt. This evening I should like to address some of the evidence and issues that pertain to these seemingly alternative scenarios.

What should be indisputable is that a number of new technologies that evolved largely from the cumulative innovations of the past half century have not begun to bring about awesome changes in the way goods and services are produced and, especially, in the way they are distributed to final users. Those innovations, particularly the Internet's rapid emergence from infancy, have spawned a ubiquity of startup firms, many of which claim to offer the chance to revolutionize and dominate large shares of the nation's production and distribution system. Capital markets, not comfortable dealing with discontinuous shifts in economic structure, are groping for sensible evaluations of these firms. The exceptional stock price volatility of most of the newer firms and, in the view of some, their outsized valuations, are indicative of the difficulties of divining from the many, the particular few of the newer technologies and operational models that will prevail in the decades ahead.

How did we arrive at such a fascinating and, to some, unsettling point in history? The process of innovations, of course, is never-ending. Yet the development of the transistor after World War II appears in retrospect to have initiated an especial wave of innovative synergies. It brought us the microprocessor, the computer, satellites, and the joining of laser and fiber-optic technologies. These, in turn, fostered by the 1990s an enormous new capacity to disseminate information. To be sure, innovation is not confined to information technologies. Impressive technical advances can be found in many corners of the economy.

But it is information technology that defines this special period. The reason is that information innovation lies at the root of productivity and economic growth. Its major contribution is to reduce the number of worker hours required to produce the nation's output. Yet, in the vibrant economic conditions that have accompanied this period of technical innovation, many more job opportunities have been created than have been lost. Indeed, our unemployment rate has fallen notably as technology has blossomed.

One result of the more-rapid pace of IT innovation has been a visible acceleration of the process of "creative destruction," a shifting of capital from failing technologies into those technologies at the cutting edge. The process of capital reallocation across the economy has been assisted by a significant unbundling of risks in capital markets made possible by the development of innovative financial products, many of which themselves owe their viability to advances in IT.

Before this revolution in information availability, most twentieth-century business decisionmaking had been hampered by wide uncertainty. Owing to the paucity of timely knowledge of customers' needs and of the location of inventories and materials flowing throughout complex production systems, businesses, as many of you well remember, required substantial programmed redundancies to function effectively.

Doubling up on materials and people was essential as backup to the inevitable misjudgments of the real-time state of play in a company. Decisions were made from information that was hours, days, or even weeks old. Accordingly, production planning required costly inventory safety stocks and backup teams of people to respond to the unanticipated and the misjudged.

Large remnants of information void, of course, still persist, and forecasts of future events on which all business decisions ultimately depend are still unavoidably uncertain. But the remarkable surge in the availability of more timely information in recent years has enabled business management to remove large swaths of inventory safety stocks and worker redundancies.

Information access in real time—resulting, for example, from such processes as electronic data interface between the retail checkout counter and the factory floor or the satellite location of trucks—has fostered marked reductions in delivery lead times and the related workhours required for the production and delivery of all sorts of goods, from books to capital equipment.

The dramatic decline in the lead times for the delivery of capital equipment has made a particularly significant contribution to the favorable economic environment of the past decade. When lead times for equipment are long, the equipment must have multiple capabilities to deal with the plausible range of business needs likely to occur after these capital goods are delivered and installed.

With lead times foreshortened, many of the redundancies built into capital equipment to ensure that it could meet all plausible alternatives of a defined distant future could be sharply reduced. That means fewer goods and worker hours are caught up in activities that, while perceived as necessary insurance to sustain valued output, in the end produce nothing of value.

Those intermediate production and distribution activities, so essential when information and quality control were poor, are being reduced in scale and, in some cases, eliminated. These trends may well gather speed and force as the Internet alters relationships of businesses to their suppliers and their customers.

The process of innovation goes beyond the factory floor or distribution channels. Design times and costs have fallen dramatically as computer modeling has eliminated the need, for example, of the large staff of architectural specification-drafters previously required for building projects. Medical diagnoses are more thorough, accurate, and far faster, with access to heretofore unavailable information. Treatment is accordingly hastened, and hours of procedures eliminated.

Indeed, these developments emphasize the essence of information technology—the expansion of knowledge and its obverse, the reduction in uncertainty. As a consequence, risk premiums that were associated with all forms of business activities have declined.

Because the future is never entirely predictable, risk in any business action committed to the future—that is, virtually all business actions—can be reduced but never eliminated. Information technologies, by improving our real-time understanding of production processes and of the vagaries of consumer demand, are reducing the degree of uncertainty and, hence, risk.

In short, information technology raises output per hour in the total economy principally by reducing hours worked on activities needed to guard productive processes against the unknown and the unanticipated. Narrowing the uncertainties reduces the number of hours required to maintain any given level of production readiness.

In economic terms, we are reducing risk premiums and variances throughout the economic decision tree that drives the production of our goods and services. This has meant that employment of scarce resources to deal with heightened risk premiums has been reduced.

The relationship between businesses and consumers already is being changed by the expanding opportunities for e-commerce. The forces unleashed by the Internet are almost surely to be even more potent within and among businesses, where uncertainties are being reduced by improving the quantity, the reliability, and the timeliness of information. This is the case in many recent initiatives, especially among our more seasoned companies, to consolidate and rationalize their supply chains using the Internet.

Not all technologies, information or otherwise, however, increase productivity—that is, output per hour—by reducing the inputs necessary to produce existing products. Some new technologies bring about new goods and services with above average value added per workhour. The dramatic advances in biotechnology, for example, are significantly increasing a broad range of productivity-expanding efforts in areas from agriculture to medicine.

Indeed, in our dynamic labor markets, the resources made redundant by better information, as I indicated earlier, are being drawn to the newer activities and newer products, many never before contemplated or available. The personal computer, with ever-widening applications in homes and businesses, is one. So are the fax and the cell phone. The newer biotech innovations are most especially of this type, particularly the remarkable breadth of medical and pharmacological product development.

At the end of the day, however, the newer technologies obviously can increase outputs or reduce inputs and, hence, increase productivity only if they are embodied in capital investment. Capital investment here is defined in the broadest sense as any outlay that enhances future productive capabilities and, consequently, capital asset values.

But for capital investments to be made, the prospective rate of return on their implementation must exceed the cost of capital. Gains in productivity and capacity per real dollar invested clearly rose materially in the 1990s, while the increase in equity values, reflecting that higher earnings potential, reduced the cost of capital.

In particular, technological synergies appear to be engendering an ever-widening array of prospective new capital investments that offer profitable cost displacement. In a consolidated sense, reduced cost generally means reduced labor cost or, in productivity terms, fewer hours worked per unit of output. These increased real rates of return on investment and consequent improved productivity are clearly most evident among the relatively small segment of our economy that produces high-tech equipment. But the newer technologies are spreading to firms not conventionally thought of as high tech.

It would be an exaggeration to imply that whenever a cost increase emerges on the horizon, there is a capital investment that is available to quell it. Yet the veritable explosion of high-tech equipment and software spending that has raised the growth of the capital stock dramatically over the past five years could hardly have occurred without a large increase in the pool of profitable projects becoming available to business planners. As rising productivity growth in the high-tech sector since 1995 has resulted in an acceleration of price declines for equipment embodying the newer technologies, investment in this equipment by firms in a wide variety of industries has expanded sharply.

Had high prospective returns on these capital projects not materialized, the current capital equipment investment boom—there is no better word—would have petered out long ago. In the event, overall equipment and capitalized software outlays as a percentage of GDP in nominal dollars have reached their highest level in post-World War II history.

To be sure, there is also a virtuous capital investment cycle at play here. A whole new set of profitable investments raises productivity, which for a time raises profits—spuring further investment and consumption. At the same time, faster productivity growth keeps a lid on unit costs and prices. Firms hesitate to raise prices for fear that their competitors will be able, with lower costs from new investments, to wrest market share from them.

Indeed, the increasing availability of labor-displacing equipment and software, at declining prices and improving delivery lead times, is arguably at the root of the loss of business pricing power in recent years. To be sure, other inflation-suppressing forces have been at work as well. Marked increases in available global capacity were engendered as a number of countries that were previously members of the autarchic Soviet bloc opened to the West, and as many emerging-market economies blossomed. Reductions in Cold War spending in the United States and around the world also released resources to more productive private purposes. In addition, deregulation that removed bottlenecks and hence increased supply response in many economies, especially ours, has been a formidable force suppressing price increases as well. Finally, the global economic crisis of 1997 and 1998 reduced the prices of energy and other key inputs into production and consumption, helping to hold down inflation for several years.
Of course, Europe and Japan have participated in this recent wave of invention and innovation and have full access to the newer technologies. However, they arguably have been slower to apply them. The relatively inflexible and, hence, more costly labor markets of these economies appear to be an important factor. The high rates of return offered by the newer technologies are largely the result of labor cost displacement, and because it is more costly to dismiss workers in Europe and Japan, the rate of return on the same equipment is correspondingly less there than the United States. Here, labor displacement is more readily countenanced both by law and by culture, facilitating the adoption of technology that raises standards of living over time.

There, of course, has been a substantial amount of labor-displacing investment in Europe to obviate expensive increased employment as their economies grow. But it is not clear to what extent such investment has been directed at reducing existing levels of employment. It should always be remembered that in economies where dismissing a worker is expensive, hiring one will also be perceived to be expensive.

An ability to reorganize production and distribution processes is essential to take advantage of newer technologies. Indeed, the combination of a marked surge in mergers and acquisitions, and especially the vast increase in strategic alliances, including across borders, is dramatically altering business structures to conform to the imperatives of the newer technologies.²

We are seeing the gradual breaking down of competition-inhibiting institutions from the keiretsu and chaebol of East Asia, to the dirigisme of some of continental Europe. The increasingly evident advantages of applying the newer technologies is undermining much of the old political wisdom of protected stability. The clash between unfettered competitive technological advance and protectionism, both domestic and international, will doubtless engage our attention for many years into this new century. The turmoil in Seattle last month may be a harbinger of an intensified debate.

However one views the causes of our low inflation and strong growth, there can be little argument that the American economy as it stands at the beginning of a new century has never exhibited so remarkable a prosperity for at least the majority of Americans

Nonetheless, this seemingly beneficial state of affairs is not without its own set of potential challenges. Productivity-driven supply growth has, by raising long-term profit expectations, engendered a huge gain in equity prices. Through the so-called "wealth effect," these gains have tended to foster increases in aggregate demand beyond the increases in supply. It is this imbalance between growth of supply and growth of demand that contains the potential seeds of rising inflationary and financial pressures that could undermine the current expansion.

Higher productivity growth must show up as increases in real incomes of employees, as profit, or more generally as both. Unless the propensity to spend out of real income falls, private consumption and investment growth will rise, as indeed it must, since over time demand and supply must balance. (I leave the effect of fiscal policy for later.) If this was all that happened, accelerating productivity would be wholly benign and beneficial.

But in recent years, largely as a result of the appreciating values of ownership claims on the capital stock, themselves a consequence, at least in part, of accelerating productivity, the net worth of households has expanded dramatically, relative to income. This has spurred private consumption to rise even faster than the incomes engendered by the productivity-driven rise in output growth. Moreover, the fall in the cost of equity capital corresponding to higher share prices, coupled with enhanced potential rates of return, has spurred private capital investment. There is a wide range of estimates of how much added growth the rise in equity prices has engendered, but they center around 1 percentage point of the somewhat more than 4 percentage point annual growth rate of GDP since late 1996.

Such overall extra domestic demand can be met only with increased imports (net of exports) or with new domestic output produced by employing additional workers. The latter can come only from drawing down the pool of those seeking work or from increasing net immigration.

Thus, the impetus to spending from the wealth effect by its very nature clearly cannot persist indefinitely. In part, it adds to the demand for goods and services before the corresponding increase in output fully materializes. It is, in effect, increased purchasing from future income, financed currently by greater borrowing or reduced accumulation of assets.

If capital gains had no evident effect on consumption or investment, their existence would have no influence on output or employment either. Increased equity claims would merely match the increased market value of productive assets, affecting only balance sheets, not flows of goods and services, not supply or demand, and not labor markets.

But this is patently not the case. Increasing perceptions of wealth have clearly added to consumption and driven down the amount of saving out of current income and spurred capital investment.

To meet this extra demand, our economy has drawn on all sources of added supply. Our net imports and current account deficits have risen appreciably in recent years. This has been financed by foreign acquisition of dollar assets fostered by the same sharp increases in real rates of return on American capital that set off the wealth effect and domestic capital goods boom in the first place. Were it otherwise, the dollar's foreign exchange value would have been under marked downward pressure in recent years. We have also relied on net immigration to augment domestic output. And finally, we have drawn down the pool of available workers.

The bottom line, however, is that, while immigration and imports can significantly cushion the consequences of the wealth effect and its draining of the pool of unemployed workers for awhile, there are limits. Immigration is constrained by law and its enforcement; imports, by the willingness of global investors to accumulate dollar assets; and the draw down of the pool of workers by the potential emergency of inflationary imbalances in labor markets. Admittedly, we are groping to infer where those limits may be. But that there are limits cannot be open to question.

However one views the operational relevance of a Phillips curve or the associated NAIRU (the nonaccelerating inflation rate of unemployment)—and I am personally decidedly doubtful about it—there has to be a limit to how far the pool of available labor can be drawn down without pressing wage levels beyond productivity. The existence or nonexistence of an empirically identifiable NAIRU has no bearing on the existence of the venerable law of supply and demand.

To be sure, increases in wages in excess of productivity growth may not be inflationary, and destructive of economic growth, if offset by decreases in other costs or declining profit margins. A protracted decline in margins, however, is a recipe for recession. Thus, if our objective of maximum sustainable economic growth is to be achieved, the pool of available workers cannot shrink indefinitely.

As my late friend and eminent economist Herb Stein often suggested: If a trend cannot continue, it will stop. What will stop the wealth-induced excess of demand over productivity-expanded supply is largely developments in financial markets.

That process is already well advanced. For the equity wealth effect to be contained either expected future earnings must decline, or the discount factor applied to those earnings must rise. There is little evidence of the former. Indeed, security analysts, reflecting detailed information on and from the companies they cover, have continued to revise upward long-term earnings projections. However, real rates of interest on long-term BBB corporate debt, a good proxy for the average of all corporate debt, have already risen well over a full percentage point since late 1997, suggesting increased pressure on discount factors.3 This should not be a surprise because an excess of demand over supply ultimately comes down to planned investment exceeding saving that would be available at the economy's full potential. In the end, balance is achieved through higher borrowing rates. Thus, the rise in real rates should be viewed as a quite natural consequence of the pressures of heavier demands for investment capital, driven by higher perceived returns associated with technological breakthroughs and supported by a central bank intent on defusing the imbalances that would undermine the expansion.

We cannot predict with any assurance how long a growing wealth effect—more formally, a rise in the ratio of household net worth to income—will persist, nor do we suspect can anyone else. A diminution of the wealth effect, I should add, does not mean that prices of assets cannot keep rising, only that they rise no more than income.

A critical factor in how the rising wealth effect and its ultimate limitation will play out in the market place and the economy is the state of government, especially federal, finances.

The sharp rise in revenues (at a nearly 8 percent annual rate since 1995) has been significantly driven by increased receipts owing to realized capital gains and increases in compensation directly and indirectly related to the huge rise in stock prices. Both the Administration and the Congress have chosen wisely to allow unified budget surpluses to build and have usefully focused on eliminating the historically chronic borrowing from social security trust funds to finance current outlays.

The growing unified budget surpluses have absorbed a good part of the excess of potential private demand over potential supply. A continued expansion of the surplus would surely aid in sustaining the productive investment that has been key to leveraging the opportunities provided by new technology, while holding down a further reliance on imports and absorption of the pool of available workers.

I trust that the recent flurry of increased federal government outlays, seemingly made easier by the emerging surpluses, is an aberration. In today's environment of rapid innovation, growing unified budget surpluses can obviate at least part of the rebalancing pressures evident in marked increases in real long-term interest rates.

As I noted at the beginning of my remarks, it may be many years before we fully understand the nature of the rapid changes currently confronting our economy. We are unlikely to fully comprehend the process and its interactions with asset prices until we have been through a complete business cycle.

Regrettably, we at the Federal Reserve do not have the luxury of awaiting a better set of insights into this process. Indeed, our goal, in responding to the complexity of current economic forces, is to extend the expansion by containing its imbalances and avoiding the very recession that would complete a business cycle.

If we knew for sure that economic growth would soon be driven wholly by gains in productivity and growth of the working age population, including immigration, we would not need to be as concerned about the potential for inflationary distortions. Clearly, we cannot know for sure, because we are dealing with world economic forces which are new and untested.

While we endeavor to find the proper configuration of monetary and fiscal policies to sustain the remarkable performance of our economy, there should be no ambiguity on the policies required to support enterprise and competition.

I believe that we as a people are very fortunate: When confronted with the choice between rapid growth with its inevitable inscurities and a stable, but stagnant economy, given time, Americans have chosen growth. But as we seek to manage what is now this increasingly palpable historic change in the way businesses and workers create value, our nation needs to address the associated dislocations that emerge, especially among workers who see the security of their jobs and their lives threatened. Societies cannot thrive when significant segments perceive its functioning as unjust.

It is the degree of unbridled fierce competition within and among our economies today—not free trade or globalization as such—that is the source of the unease that has manifested itself, and was on display in Seattle a month ago. Trade and globalization are merely the vehicles that foster competition, whose application and benefits currently are nowhere more evident than here, today, in the United States.

Confronted face-on, no one likes competition; certainly, I did not when I was a private consultant vying with other consulting firms. But the competitive challenge galvanized me and my colleagues to improve our performance so that at the end of the day we and, indeed, our competitors, and especially our clients, were more productive.

There are many ways to address the all too real human problems that are the inevitable consequences of accelerating change. Restraining competition, domestic or international, to suppress competitive turmoil is not one of them. That would be profoundly counterproductive to rising standards of living

We are in a period of dramatic gains in innovation and technical change that challenge all of us, as owners of capital, as suppliers of labor, as voters and policymakers. How well policy can be fashioned to allow the private sector to maximize the benefits of innovations that we currently enjoy, and to contain the imbalances they create, will shape the economic configuration of the first part of the new century.

FOOTNOTES

¹Since the early 1990s, the annual growth rate in output per hour of nonfinancial corporate businesses outside high tech has risen by a full percentage point.

²For example, the emergence of many alternate technologies in areas where only one or two will set the standard and survive has created high risk, high reward outcomes for their creators. The desire to spread risk (and the willingness to forgo the winner-take-all return) has fostered a substantial number of technology-sharing alliances.

³The inflation expectations employed in this calculation are those implicit in the gap between the interest rates on ten-year Treasury inflation-indexed notes and those on a nominal security derived from Treasury STRIPS constructed to have comparable duration. The latter are used because, they have the same relatively limited liquidity as inflation-indexed notes.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. I thank the Chair. I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, about the only chance we ever have to discuss interest rates and monetary policy in this body is when Alan Greenspan gets renominated to the Federal Reserve Board, which admittedly seems to happen on a fairly regular basis

That is a shame, because there aren't many issues we debate in the Senate that have a bigger impact on the average American family. Why are interest rates so important? Well, for one thing, the decision to raise or lower interest rates directly affects pretty much every single American, in one way or another. Small businesses and farmers who need to take out loans. Families who want to buy a home or a car. Parents who need a loan to send their children to college. The economic future of all these people may hinge on the decisions of the Federal Reserve Board.

More importantly, the decision to raise or lower interest rates has a direct effect on anybody who has or wants a job. Interest rates have got to be the single most important factor determining the rate of unemployment. They're also tremendously important in determining how fast our economy grows. If the Fed slams the brakes on the economy, consumer demand falters, inventories pile up, employers lay workers off, and millions of lives are disrupted. The health and vitality of every community in every corner of every state depends to some extent on monetary policy decisions made by the Federal Reserve Board in Washington.

The importance of monetary policy has only grown over time. As former Labor Secretary Bob Reich likes to point out, we used to have two accelerator pedals for the economy. One was cutting interest rates. The other was government stimulus. But now that we're locked into running surpluses for as far as the eye can see, fiscal policy is pretty much dead. Interest rates are the main policy tool we have left for influencing the economy. Indeed, interest rates have a greater impact on most American families than the budgets we pass and most of the legislation we consider.

Yet for some reason monetary policy has fallen off the political radar screen. At one time, of course, it was a frontburner political issue. Certainly in the late 19th century, there were few issues that inspired more heated debate among farmers in the Midwest than the gold standard and monetary policy. And for decades after the Great Depression, one of our most pressing national political issues was full employment, which was—and is—integrally connected to interest rates.

While interest rates and monetary policy have become the most important instruments of U.S. economic policy, they have also been virtually walled off from democratic decision-making and debate. In this as in so many other areas, there seems to be an inverse relationship between an issue's importance to the American people and the amount of time we spend debating it here on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

I don't think that's the way it ought to be. That's not the way a democratic government should operate. These are vitally important issues, and they deserve a full and open debate involving broad public participation.

We did have something of a debate on monetary policy the last time Mr. Greenspan was renominated to the Board. Looking back on that discussion, I'm proud to say it was a substantive one. It focused not on personal criticisms, but on the important issues of monetary policy that affect all of our constituents.

I also think the arguments raised in the 1996 debate can serve as a useful starting point for today's deliberations. We have a record from that debate, and we have four years of economic experience to compare it against. And based on that record and that experience, we can draw certain conclusions.

The conclusions I draw are as follows. I think monetary policy over the past 4 years has been a pleasant surprise for some of us, in ways that I'll discuss in a moment. Nevertheless, it seems to me that the premise of the current movement toward higher interest rates is not only unfounded—but also contradicted by our experience of the last four years. In other words, I'm less troubled by where we've been than by where I see us heading in the near future.

The past four years have been a tremendously successful experiment in monetary policy. I would hope we could all draw the right lessons from that success. During this entire period, we have had relatively low levels of unemployment and strong economic growth. Yet throughout that time, we have also heard repeated demands from various quarters for the Fed to raise its rates.

We all know what these appeals sound like, but let me just give a couple examples. In January 1997, soon after the conclusion of our last debate, the Bond Buyer quoted an analyst from Merrill Lynch as saying,

If we see further employment gains that are above the equilibrium level, it looks like wage acceleration will get worse and that will be about as bad a news as we could have for the markets.

In the January 1997 American Banker, an analyst from Chase Manhattan issued a very similar warning:

The labor market is growing progressively tighter because of job growth, unemployment is near 20-year lows and there is an unambiguous acceleration in wage rates when you get beyond the volatility. At some point the Fed is going to have to raise interest rates.

Another banker quoted in the January 1997 American Banker said,

The Fed is going to have to do something to slow the economy down. If you want to have an impact and want to slow the economy down, you hit it with the big stick first.

And so on and so forth. There is nothing unusual about these appeals from inflation hawks. We hear them all the time, no matter what economic conditions may be. The Fed hears them all the time from the Reserve Banks. In fact, Chairman Greenspan makes the same argument himself from time to time. This is more or less the same argument he made last month in his speech before the Economic Club of New York.

The difference is that back is 1997 and 1998, Mr. Greenspan and the Federal Reserve ignored those repeated and urgent appeals for higher rates to put a lid on wage growth. For its wise and dovish stance on interest rates in 1997 and 1998, I think the Fed deserves a great deal of credit.

The important thing for us to realize is that this unexpected experiment in monetary policy worked. The Fed's unusual deviation from tight money orthodoxy was clearly successful. Yesterday the President was handling out kudos for the longest economic expansion in our history. He did praise Chairman Greenspan, but I think we need to be more specific in our praise. The key policy choice we should be focusing on is the Fed's reluctance to raise rates during a critical period in the mid to late 1990's.

The results of that policy choice have been much-discussed elsewhere, so I don't need to go into all the details here. But there is one thing I want to emphasize: the importance of sustained low unemployment for people on the lower end of the income scale. Finally, in the last couple years we are beginning to see wage gains for lower-income workers—for the first time since the 1970's. Unemployment for workers who haven't completed high school was only 6 percent in December, an historical low. And low unemployment is especially important for minorities, who traditionally experience higher rates of joblessness. Black male joblessness has fallen to its lowest level in 30 years. through it's still about twice the rate for whites.

The benefits of low unemployment and strong economic growth extend beyond the people who found jobs or are starting to see higher wages for the first time in a long time. We all benefit. The principal reason why the federal budget went into surplus four years ahead of schedule—in 1998 rather than 2002—was because of higher-than expected economic growth. That wouldn't have been possible had the Fed slammed on the brakes.

Higher economic growth also extended the life of the Social Security Trust Funds, demonstrating how probably the best thing we can do to protect Social Security is to ensure strong economic growth in the future. Because of lower unemployment and higher growth, crime rates declined, as many people who would otherwise have no hope were able to obtain stable employment. And finally, it goes without saving that the consequences of welfare reform would have been much more devastating had the Fed followed the advice of those inflation hawks and raised interest rates.

There is one other milestone decision by the Fed that deserves to be singled out for praise. In September 1998, I and several other senators spoke on the floor about the need for interest rate reductions to address the instability in the global economy in the wake of the Asian Crisis and the collapse of the Russian economy. The Fed acted quickly and decisively. It not only resisted calls to raise rates in 1998; it actually lowered them by ¾ of a percentage point between September and November. I'm convinced that those rate reductions made a decisive contribution towards stabilizing global financial markets.

So much for my sweet talk about the Federal Reserve. Today I also want to express my deep concern about where the Fed appears to be headed in the next few months. I'm troubled that the Board may be unlearning the lessons of its successful recent experiment in monetary policy and reverting to its old ways. Already in June, August, and November of last year, the Fed raised rates by ¼ of a percentage point. These hikes effectively restored rates to where they were before the Russian crisis of 1998.

In his speech last month, Chairman Greenspan announced that he is once again worried about wage-induced inflation. Virtually everyone understood those remarks as another signal that the Fed will raise rates soon. The Federal Open Markets Committee (FOMC) has been meeting yesterday and today, and today announced another increase of ½ percent. Some economists believe there could be a total of four rate increases by the end of June.

To panic over inflation in the present economic circumstances strikes me as something close to irrational paranoia. Inflation is the true "Phantom Menace." First of all, the core inflation rate last year fell to 1.9 percent in 1999, the lowest it's been since 1965. Let me repeat that: core inflation is the lowest it's been since 1965. It's true that consumer prices rose faster than that last year, but this was due to sharply higher energy prices, which should not lead to higher rates. Most commodity prices are still at record lows.

In his speech last month, Chairman Greenspan spelled out his concerns. He underscored the danger that rising wages could cause inflation to spiral out of control. I find this argument very troubling. It seems to disregard our experience since 1996, for which the Fed deserves, as I said, a great deal of credit. Just a moment ago I was praising the Federal Reserve for rejecting this very same argument in 1997 and 1998

Simply put, I do not believe there is any credible indication that labor costs are about to send inflation spinning out of control. Wage growth actually slowed in the last year, despite persistently low unemployment. In the fourth quarter of 1999, average hourly wages increased at an annual rate of 3.3 percent. That's less than the 4 percent they increased from 1997 to mid-1999. Measured a different way, wage growth fell from 4.1 percent in 1999 to 3.6 percent in 1998. Wage growth could not have been slowing down over the past couple years if labor markets were operating as Chairman Greenspan describes.

As Chairman Greenspan and the President have both pointed out, a remarkable feature of the current recovery is that workers' wage demands have been lower than their historical levels. Yesterday the President claimed the reason why American workers have not made "enormous wage demands" is that they have become "very sophisticated about the way the world economy works." That's an interesting comment. He seems to be suggesting that the way the world economy works is to depress wages.

In his now-famous testimony before the Senate Budget Committee in January 1997, Mr. Greenspan had a slightly less upbeat explanation for slackening wage demands. He pointed to job insecurity. "Heightened job insecurity explains a significant part of the restraint on compensation," he testified. Of course, Chairman Greenspan raised this issue because he was concerned the situation could not continue forever: "At some point in the future," he said, "the trade-off of subdued wage growth for job security has to come to an end."

There are several reasons why workers would be more insecure in today's economy, but it's hard for me to consider any of them good news. An unprecedented wave of mergers and corporate restructurings has led to layoffs for many senior employees. Labor unions have lost a great deal of its bargaining power, for various reasons. These include deregulation, a trade deficit that destroys unionized manufacturing jobs, and competition from low-wage imports.

But even if wage growth really were picking up steam, it would not necessarily lead to inflation. I think pretty much every economist would agree that wages can increase at least as fast as productivity growth—without causing a rise in prices. That's because when there's more wealth to go around due to greater efficiencies, more of that wealth can be shared with workers without asking consumers to pay more.

And that's exactly what's been happening. Ever since 1996, productivity has been rising at about 1 percent above the expected trend line. For the past couple of years productivity has been rising at about 2 percent, though real wages rose only 1.5 percent last year. Unit labor costs have fallen since 1996, meaning that wages have not been keeping up with productivity. Moreover, productivity growth is expected to remain strong in the future. There is plenty of room for more wage growth.

One of the lessons of this recovery is that low unemployment can actually lead to higher productivity. It makes sense. For one thing, when labor markets are tight, businesses have to make more efficient use of their workers. That leads to higher efficiency and more wealth that can then be shared with workers. It's a virtuous cycle.

In fact, this recovery has taught us several lessons which don't seem to be reflected in the Fed's recent shift toward higher rates. First and foremost, the theory that there is a natural rate of unemployment—around 5.5 or 6 percent—below which inflation will spiral out of control appears to be thoroughly discredited.

In June 1996, when we were debating Mr. Greenspan's previous renomination, I came to the floor to take issue with this theory, which is called the NAIRU (Non-Accelerating Inflation Rate of Unemployment). At that time, unemployment was 5.6 percent. I was arguing that unemployment could go lower without sending wages—and therefore prices—into an upward spiral.

Let's look at the record since 1996. Unemployment has been below 6 percent the entire time, with no inflationary spiral in sight. Unemployment has been 4.1 percent for four months now. It's been below 5 percent for 30 months. It's been below 4.5 percent for 14 months. Not only is inflation not spiraling out of control, it's pretty hard to detect any sign of inflation at all. Core inflation is the lowest it's been since 1965.

In the most recent issue of the American Prospect, the economist James K. Galbraith writes.

Faced with such embarrassing facts, only a handful of economists continue to defend the natural rate idea. And yet, the natural rate movement still influences policy. Some of its survivors vote on the Federal Reserve's Open Market Committee. They are presently driving interest rates upward on precisely the pretext that low unemployment must otherwise soon bring rising inflation. It is a notion for which no evidence exists. And except for the damage that higher interest rates will do, it would be hard not to laugh.

The case for raising interest rates is also exceedingly weak. In fact, the very arguments made recently by Chairman Greenspan and various Wall Street analysts should actually persuade us to keep rates where they are. Yes, sustained low unemployment is having some effect on wages, especially at the lower end. It's not sending inflation spiraling out of control, but it is having an effect. But this is a positive phenomenon that we should be attempting to prolong, for all the reasons I listed before in praising the Fed's performance in 1997 and 1998. The price of raising rates now is all the benefits we've seen flowing from lower unemployment and faster growth.

After all, many working people are only now beginning to feel the effects of this recovery. Only in the last two years have wage increases given workers back some of what they had lost over the past two decades. During most of the recovery of the 1990s, the median wage actually fell. Wages for low and middle-income workers dropped sharply in the early 1990's, due in part to an unnecessarily tight monetary policy by the Federal Reserve.

This trend didn't start to reverse itself until 1996—thanks to a looser monetary policy from the Federal Reserve, as well as an increase in the minimum wage. It wasn't until 1999 that median wages regained their peak level from 1989, before the last recession. That's where most workers are today: about where they were before the last recession. This is no time to actively dampen wage growth—precisely at the moment when workers are starting to benefit from this recovery. The policies that brought about these much-delayed benefits for working people are precisely the ones that the Federal Reserve is now poised to reverse.

I think we have an obligation to make sure all Americans, not just corporate CEOs and those at the top of the income ladder, can benefit from this recovery. Just recently, the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities and the Economic Policy Institute released a report on income inequality in America. This is what they found. Despite strong economic growth, income disparities were significantly greater in the late 1990's than they were in the 1980's. In two-thirds of all states, income inequality between the top 20 percent and the bottom 20 percent increased. The earnings of the poorest fifth of American families rose less than 1 percent between 1988 and 1998, but the earning of the richest fifth jumped 15 percent. The income gap significantly narrowed in only three states-Alaska, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

Even my friend John McCain has noted the widening gap between the haves and the have-nots in America, and that message seemed to go over pretty well in New Hampshire.

Raising interest rates now could also have an indirect effect on inequality—by raising the value of the dollar and therefore contributing to the problems of our trade deficit. In the last 4 years, our trade deficit has grown from less than 1.0 percent of GDP to almost 3.5 percent of GDP in the fourth quarter of 1999. This is unprecedented.

The burgeoning trade deficit has contributed to inequality by resulting in the loss of manufacturing jobs. We lost 248,000 manufacturing jobs in 1999, and 520,000 since March 1998. Because of low unemployment, those job losses are generally made up by job creation elsewhere. But the new jobs tend to be nonunionized, with lower pay and fewer benefits. In the last two years, job growth has occurred exclusively in the service industries, where wages and benefits are often much lower.

A second problem with the trade deficit is that it casts a pall over this recovery. We are now the world's largest debtor nation. We have accumulated over $2 trillion in trade deficits over the last couple decades. Yesterday, even President Clinton said he worried that if foreign investors lost confidence in our economy and pulled out their money, they could do major damage to the economy.

We have to consider the danger that unmanageable trade deficits or unnecessary monetary tightening could not only erase wage gains for lower-income workers, but could actually send the economy into a tailspin. This recovery has been kept alive by Americans who have been spending more than they earn, partly due to the "wealth effect" of soaring stock prices. Lowering growth with higher interest rates could cause investors to reassess their rosy assumption about future growth and puncture the speculative bubble on Wall Street.

In fact, in his speech last month in New York, Chairman Greenspan also mentioned the danger of a stock market correction. If the goal is to curb "irrational exuberance" on Wall Street, there are much better ways of doing that. In the 1950's and 1960's, Fed Chairman William McChesney Martin, Jr., repeatedly raised margin requirements, but Mr. Greenspan has refused to take that step.

Given the sizable dangers involved—both in terms of the damage it would do to lower-wage workers and to the overall economy—I think raising interest rates at this time would be extremely unwise. If an inflationary situation actually materializes and turns out not to be a figment of bankers' collective imaginations, the Fed can always deal with that problem if and when it arises. Recent evidence suggests that interest rate moves no longer operate with a lag due to the increased openness of the Fed.

We have made a tremendous advance in the four years since we last debated this issue. We have discovered that the three-decade-old mystery over falling wages and rising inequality turns out to be not so mysterious after all. The fact is, we know how to raise wages and reduce inequality. We do not have to reinvent the wheel. Among other things, we need to maintain low unemployment over a sustained period. We've done this before and we can do it again. It would be a tragedy if an unjustified fear of rising wages or an economic downturn kept us from continuing that progress.

I think Chairman Greenspan's performance at the Fed has been very helpful in drawing out these lessons over the past 4 years. It would be a tragedy—both for our country and especially for workers at the lower end of the income scale—if he were to ignore those lessons to once again focus on putting a stop to rising wages.

Mr. President, it is kind of ironic that about the only time relevant to really discuss monetary policy or have a debate about monetary policy is when Alan Greenspan gets renominated to the Federal Reserve Board. It is a shame because there is probably not an issue that has greater impact on people's lives. People just do not know that much about monetary policy. But the fact is, when you look at the real interest rates, you are talking about a policy that dramatically affects small business people, dramatically affects family farmers, dramatically affects the industrial base of our country, dramatically affects low- and moderate-income people, and it is critically important to policy.

There was a time in the history of our country, in the late 1800s, when there was a tremendous emphasis on monetary policy and the need to keep real interest rates down. There was a time post-Depression when there was a real focus on employment policy and the need to move toward full employment, and the whole question of what the tradeoff was between having high interest rates that would choke off economic growth, and then people would not be able to find jobs at decent wages.

I think in 1996 we had a very good debate. I don't think the debate was so much about Alan Greenspan—I voted against Alan Greenspan's nomination then—but it had more to do with the debate about monetary policy.

What was going on during that debate is that many of us were saying we were very concerned about the Federal Reserve policy. We were concerned about the focus on raising interest rates, and what we argued was all this discussion about NAIRU, all this discussion that you could not have low levels of officially defined unemployment without at the same time setting off an inflationary cycle, was simply wrong. What we were saying is it is extremely important to have a public policy which puts as our first priority that people should be able to obtain jobs at decent wages and that this was critically important when you looked at monetary policy. That is because when interest rates go up, then in fact it is very difficult to sustain this kind of growth.

I am pleased to say tonight—I think this is the irony—I was right about the policy and wrong about Alan Greenspan. I think I was right to say that the Fed is not accountable to citizens in this country. There is no democratic accountability, with a small "d." These are critically important decisions that are sort of walled off from any kind of public accountability. I think that is a profound mistake. This is a decisionmaking body with enormous power that crucially defines the quality or lack of quality of people's lives. But what we were saving, some of us, was that we took exception to the Fed's policy of always seeing inflation right around the corner when it did not exist, a kind of phantom inflation, and raising interest rates and having as its conscious policy: We are going to raise interest rates because unemployment is falling too low and we have to do something because surely there will be inflation.

Therefore, many people still do not get jobs or the jobs they get are jobs at fairly low wages. And, when real interest rates go up, it has a draconian effect, again, on small businesspeople, a horrible effect on farmers and producers in my State, and a very harsh effect on low- and moderate-income people, a harsh effect on home buyers, a harsh effect on people who do not have a lot of money who are trying to buy a car.

I give Alan Greenspan credit. What has happened in 1997 and 1998 is that Alan Greenspan did a superb job of being a dove. He was a dove. He did not raise the interest rates. There were many people in the Banking Committee, many people in the financial community, who kept saying he needed to raise those interest rates. He did not do so. I think his stewardship has been very important. As a result of that, this is what has happened. As a result of not raising these interest rates up until this past year, as a result of not accepting this orthodoxy, what have we been able to accomplish? Record low levels of unemployment—that is very important to communities of color; very important to people who are traditionally the ones who are most affected by high levels of unemployment. It is very important to the basic idea of economic opportunity in America because the key to economic opportunity is to be able to find a job, even more a job at a decent wage, even more a job at a decent wage under civilized working conditions.

What else has been accomplished? Because we have had low levels of unemployment, finally we have seen the lowest wage workers be able to bid up their wages because this is a good market for them. We are beginning to see some closing of the gap. It is closing very little, but up until the past couple of years, or this past year, we had not seen much improvement at all in terms of real wages. We have seen some improvement.

What have we been able to accomplish? Record surpluses. What have we been able to accomplish? The Social Security trust fund appears much stronger than it did because of economic performance. What have we been able to accomplish? High levels of productivity. By the way, if your productivity is ahead of your wage increases, I do not believe you are ever going to have to be concerned about an inflationary cycle.

So I come to the floor of the Senate to say it was important we had this debate about monetary policy in 1996. I think those of us who took exception to the Fed's policy of continuing to raise interest rates were correct. Those of us who did not accept NAIRU and this whole argument that below a certain level of unemployment you could not go any further, I think we were correct. Those of us who argued it was important to keep interest rates down for economic growth and economic recovery and jobs at decent wages, that it was important to keep interest rates down for the sake of our producers, for the sake of the manufacturing sector, for the sake of small businesses, for the sake of moderate- and middle-income households were right. I was wrong about Alan Greenspan because, as it turns out, under his guidance, the Fed has what I think is a pretty darned good record.

Therefore, I now come to part three. I am perplexed that now, again today, we saw an increase. The Fed is now raising interest rates, this past year I think three or four times. Yet inflation is at a record low level, and the only sector of the economy where we see inflation is energy costs, which has a whole lot to do with the OPEC cartel and does not have anything to do with ordinary families in the United States of America.

So it seems to me, for reasons I cannot explain, Mr. Greenspan and the Fed are ignoring the very success that they have had. I do worry because I think if we continue to raise the interest rates, not only is it going to undercut our economic growth, not only will it have a disproportionate negative effect on those Americans who struggle the most, much less middle-income families, not only is it going to add to our already serious trade imbalance which plays havoc—which is both a result of and plays havoc with our industrial sector—but I think if it is going to continue to raise these interest rates, it threatens this unbelievable economic performance we have seen.

One final point I make tonight is that during this period of economic growth we have not all grown together. To a certain extent we have grown apart. Actually, the gap between the richest 20 percent and poorest 20 percent grows wider and wider. Why, given the success of the Federal Reserve. why, given the success of this economic performance while keeping interest rates down, why, given some improvement for the lowest wage workers, why, given the surpluses, why, given the Social Security trust fund looking better because people are working, because people are making better wages, why at this point in time does Mr. Greenspan and the Federal Reserve seem to be going down the path of raising interest rates in direct contradiction to a policy that has been successful? That is the question.

I wanted to come to the floor to speak because I find it, as a teacher, much less a Senator, to be just an interesting and, to a certain extent, perplexing irony. In 1996, we had a debate about monetary policy. It only comes up when the Greenspan nomination comes up. I think we should be debating monetary policy more. Once upon a time it was a front burner issue. But then Alan Greenspan has surprised me and kept real interest rates down. I want to give him all the credit in the world for that, and I think it has been very important and tied to our economic performance. It is very important to the people with the least amount of economic clout in our country who do not do as well financially. But now it looks as if Alan Greenspan and the Federal Reserve have been going in the exact opposite direction of what has been a successful economic policy. That I fear, that I worry about, that I dissent from, and that I wanted to speak about as a Senator.

SECURITY CONCERNS

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I just finished speaking with our Sergeant at Arms on the Senate side, Jim Ziglar. He is in full accord with what I am about to say.

Many of us, perhaps all of us, attended the services for Officer Chestnut and Agent Gibson. I think one of the things we all agreed on is there were many ways we were going to honor these officers. One of them was to make sure we provided the utmost support and security for them, much less security for the Congress and the citizens who visit the House and the Senate.

What I have noticed is that we have still been having single posts, where you have one officer at a very busy post with many people streaming in. I have raised this question for quite a few months now. I have never spoken about it on the floor of the Senate, but I am intending to try to put some pressure on as a Senator because we have to do something about this.

I know the Senate Sergeant at Arms feels strongly about this. I have talked to many police officers whom I think all of us respect, and we owe them a real debt of gratitude for their service. Frankly, this is no way to say thank you to the Capitol Police—to have one officer at a station where you have all sorts of people coming in, it is an impossible security situation. It is impossible. I have seen this with my own eyes. I have had police officers come up to me and say, "This is just intolera change."

I want to say on the floor of the Senate—and I have waited month after month to do this, but again I see it with my own eyes, and police officers come to me about this—I believe there has to be change. I don't think there can be any possible excuse for not living up to our commitment that at least two police officers be at every one of these posts.

able. We thought there was going to be

One example: One officer was at a post where during his shift 700 people came in—one officer. This is unacceptable, absolutely unacceptable. I think we have to do much better.

I am not going to be a know-it-all, I am not going to tell you that I know how much additional money needs to be spent, or whether this is a systems or management issue, or whether there is some slowness on the House side. I don't know what is going on. I just know there is no excuse for it.

We did a supplemental appropriation after these two officers were slain, murdered, of a little over a million dollars, about $50 million each year. That was for weapons, vests, for security enhancement, and for overtime staffing up in ways that we need to staff up. I don't know what has happened with this appropriation, whether we need more money, more authorization, or something. The only thing I know is we have a situation right now—after two officers were murdered—where we have at some of these posts just one officer. There should be two officers at every post. I believe that is a commitment we have made. I speak on the floor of the Senate to say that we have to do better for these police officers, and the sooner we do, the better.

I say to my colleague from Virginia, I think I will come back every day and speak to this situation that exists. I will defer to my colleague from Virginia and I say to the Chair that I hope to come back this evening.

SENATE PASSAGE OF IMPORTANT HISTORIC PRESERVATION MEASURES

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, unfortunately this statement was inadvertantly left out of the Congressional Record at the end of last session. Therefore, today, I would like to recognize that on November 19th the United States Senate unanimously passed much needed legislation to protect some of America's most threatened historic sites, the Vicksburg Campaign Trail and the Corinth battlefield.

S. 710, the Vicksburg Campaign Trail Battlefields Preservation Act of 1999, is a bipartisan measure that authorizes a feasibility study on the preservation of Civil War battlefields and related sites in the four states along the Vicksburg Campaign Trail.

As my colleagues know, Vicksburg served as a gateway to the Mississippi River during the Civil War. The eighteen month campaign for the "Gibraltar of the Confederacy" included over 100,000 soldiers and involved a number of skirmishes and major battles in Mississippi, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Tennessee.

The Mississippi Heritage Trust and the National Trust for Historic Preservation named the Vicksburg Campaign Trail as being among the most threatened sites in the state and the nation. S. 710 would begin the process of preserving the important landmarks in the four state region that warrant further protection. I appreciate the cosponsorship of Chairman Murkowski, Chairman Thomas, and Senators Landrieu, Breaux, Cochran, Hutchinson, and Craig on this measure.

Mr. President, the Senate also approved S. 1117, the Corinth Battlefield Preservation Act of 1999, a measure that establishes the Corinth Unit of the Shiloh National Military Park.

The battle of Shiloh was actually part of the Union Army's overall effort to seize Corinth. This small town was important to both the Confederacy and the Union. Corinth's railway was vitally important to both sides as it served as a gateway for moving troops and supplies north and south, east and west. The overall campaign led to some of the bloodiest battles in the Western Theater. In an effort to protect the city, Southern forces built a series of earthworks and fortifications, many of which remain, at least for now, in pristine condition. Unfortunately, the National Park Service in its Profiles of America's Most Threatened Civil War Battlefields, concluded that many of the sites associated with the siege of Corinth are threatened.

S. 1117 would give Corinth its proper place in American history by formally linking the city's battlefield sites with the Shiloh National Military Park.

Mr. President, I want to thank Senators ROBB, COCHRAN, and JEFFORDS for cosponsoring this measure.

I would also like to express my appreciation to Chairman THOMAS for his ever vigilant efforts on parks legislation, and in particular, for moving both the Vicksburg Campaign Trail and Corinth battlefield bills forward.

I would also like to take this opportunity to recognize Chairman MURKOWSKI for his continued stewardship over the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee.

Mr. President, I also want to recognize Ken P'Pool, Deputy State Historic Preservation Officer for Mississippi; Rosemary Williams, Chairman of the Siege and Battle of Corinth Commission; John Sullivan, President of the Friends of the Vicksburg Campaign and Historic Trail; and Terry Winschel and Woody Harrell of the United States Park Service for their support and guidance on these important preservation measures.

Lastly, I would like to recognize several staff members including Randy Turner, Jim O'Toole, and Andrew Lundquist from the Senate Energy Committee, Darcie Tomasallo from Senate Legislative Counsel, and Stan Harris, Angel Campbell, Steven Wall, Jim Sartucci, and Steven Apicella from my office, for their efforts to preserve Mississippi's and America's historic resources.

Mr. President, as a result of the Senate's action today, our children will be better able to understand and appreciate the full historic, social, cultural, and economic impact of the Vicksburg Campaign Trail and the Siege and Battle of Corinth.

GREENSPAN CONFIRMATION VOTE

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I was informed that the vote on the Greenspan nomination would be at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, so I had rearranged my schedule to return to my State. As I am unable to be present for the 10:30 a.m. Thursday vote, I ask that the RECORD show that if I were present to vote, I would vote in favor of confirming Alan Greenspan for another term as Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF ABSENCE

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I want the Record to show that I ask unanimous consent to be excused from voting on Thursday and Friday of this week. I am leaving for the West Coast for a matter of urgent personal concern in connection with the airline crash, and I will not be here to vote. I want the Record to show why I am not here.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the RECORD will so reflect.

PEACEKEEPING THE DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to speak about the crisis in the Democratic Republic of the Congo. In that devastated country, we see one of the worst international crises of the last decade. It is a bloody and brutal conflict, one that has drawn country after country into an un-winnable struggle, one that has cost the lives of thousands of civilians and has displaced hundreds of thousands more, and one about which this body has been strangely quiet.

Congo's conflict is as complex as it is destructive. It is born of the long absence of any semblance of political legitimacy in the government of that battered state, it is fed by the horrifying legacy of the Rwandan genocide, and it is intensified by the constant struggle for resources and wealth in the region. The litany of the causes of the war in Congo is a catalogue of the problems that plague the heart of Africa. Its outcome will likely determine the course of the region's future.

Mr. President, we need to wake up and realize that the U.S. has a stake in that future Our interests in global peace and stability, the rule of law, and respect for basic human rights are bound up in Congo's future. Africans and their potential American trading partners can have no hope of realizing Africa's vast economic potential until the region's cycles of violence come to an end. And America urgently needs to stop the spread of infectious disease, to address environmental degradation, and to build a global coalition to fight international crime—but these needs cannot be met without stability in central Africa.

And Mr. President, global forces of instability will thrive, and their insidious influence will grow, when parties to the conflict in Congo turn to them, in desperation, for support.

Mr. President, central Africa's leaders know that the region cannot prosper while the war in the D.R.C. continues. For that reason, last summer the parties to the conflict signed a blueprint for ending the conflict—the Lusaka Agreement. That Agreement calls for an end to the fighting, for a free political dialogue within Congo, and lays out the path to the withdrawal of foreign forces.

Mr. President, I traveled to many of the countries involved in the crisis at the end of last year. In Angola, Zimbabwe, and Namibia, in Uganda and Rwanda, and in the D.R.C. itself, I personally heard heads of state acknowledge the importance of making the Lusaka Agreement work. They understand the challenge before them, the precious opportunity embodied by Lusaka.

Last week the parties to the Congo conflict renewed their commitment to the Lusaka Agreement in a series of extraordinary meetings at the United Nations in New York. They have all agreed to a facilitator, former President Masire of Botswana, to move the inter-Congolese dialogue forward. And all parties have called for a strengthening of the Joint Military Commission that is at the heart of the framework for peace.

Mr. President, just as the U.S. has a stake in the outcome, the United States also has a role to play in supporting these efforts. The U.N. has already deployed a small team of liaison officers to the scene. Now, the United Nations Secretary General has issued a report laying out the next phase of U.N. involvement. It calls for the deployment of 500 monitors, with a 5,000-strong force providing security and logistical support to their mission. They will have a robust mandate that ensures their ability to protect themselves.

Mr. President, none of the troops would be American, and that is as it should be. In fact, in my meetings with heads of state in the region, I explicitly asked about their expectations with regard to American troops, and I can report that no one has visions of a large American presence on the ground in Congo. But by creating the breathing room necessary to allow the belligerents to move toward peace, these troops will serve American interests.

The U.N. Secretary-General has endorsed a good plan. Its value comes, in part, from what it does not do. The U.N. does not plan to send tens of thousands of troops into Congo to impose peace on hostile parties. Nor does the U.N. intend to stand by while the most brutal elements in Congo seize power through violence and impose their will on civilians.

Instead, the plan that has emerged in New York harnesses international support to the commitment of the parties to the conflict. It recognizes that the only viable peace to be found in Congo is a peace created by the belligerent parties themselves. It acknowledges African responsibility for this African war, and strengthens the Joint Military Commission created by combatants when they signed the Lusaka accords. At the same time, this plan ensures that the international community does not turn its back on Africa.

There can be no double-standard, whereby African conflicts are measured by a different scale than that used for conflicts in Europe or Asia. The plan for the deployment of the monitors and their supporting team has been vetted as thoroughly as any U.N. project. The stakes—in terms of human life and regional stability—are unquestionably high enough to meet the threshold for international action. Now, the U.N. has an opportunity to get it right in Congo.

Supporting this U.N. mission is the least we should do to secure our interests and fulfill our responsibilities as responsible members of the international community. Should we fail to support it, should we ignore this terrible conflict any longer, we will weaken the international community's mechanisms for burden-sharing at the dawn of this new century. And we will lose an opportunity to reinforce a model for ending conflict and embracing a better future.

I want to say, because obviously this has to be true and I am concerned about it, that the plan is not guaranteed to succeed.

Little worth attempting ever is. Zambian President Frederick Chiluba was right when he said, last week, that no peacekeeping operation anywhere in the world is risk-free. But Mr. President, this is the best chance for shoring up the Lusaka Agreement and helping African states to end the conflict that we are likely to see.

I strongly urge my colleagues to look at this program that is being suggested and to give it their support.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Tuesday, February 1, 2000, the Federal debt stood at $5,702,651,446,667.03 (Five trillion, seven hundred two billion, six hundred fifty-one million, four hundred forty-six thousand, six hundred sixty-seven dollars and three cents).

One year ago, February 1, 1999, the Federal debt stood at $5,588,099,000,000 (Five trillion, five hundred eighty-eight billion, ninety-nine million).

Five years ago, February 1, 1995, the Federal debt stood at $4,810,860,000,000 (Four trillion, eight hundred ten billion, eight hundred sixty million).

Ten years ago, February 1, 1990, the Federal debt stood at $2,994,932,000,000 (Two trillion, nine hundred ninety-four billion, nine hundred thirty-two million).

Fifteen years ago, February 1, 1985, the Federal debt stood at $1,672,555,000,000 (One trillion, six hundred seventy-two billion, five hundred fifty-five million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $4 trillion—$4,030,096,446,667.03 (Four trillion, thirty billion, ninety-six million, four hundred forty-six thousand, six hundred sixty-seven dollars and three cents) during the past 15 years.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting a treaty and sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 11:09 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

 $H.R.\ 1023.$ An act for the relief of Richard W. Schaffert.

H.R. 1838. An act to assist in the enhancement of the security of Taiwan, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has agreed to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 764) to reduce the incidence of child abuse and neglect, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that, pursuant to section 702(b) of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–120), the Minority Leader has appointed the following Member to the National Commission for the Review of the National Reconnaissance Office: Mr. DICKS of Washington.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

The message also announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bill:

S. 1733 An act to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to provide for a national standard of interoperability and portability applicable to electronic food stamp benefit transactions.

The enrolled bill was signed subsequently by the Vice President (Mr. GORE).

MEASURE REFERRED

The following bill was read the first and second times by unanimous consent and referred as indicated:

H.R. 1023. An act for the relief of Richard W. Schaffert; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ENROLLED BILL PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported on today, February 2, 2000, he had presented to the President of the United States, the following enrolled bill:

S. 1733. An act to amend the Food Stamp Act of 1977 to provide for a national standard of interoperability and portability applicable to electronic food stamp benefit transactions.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, together with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-7182. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Revocation of Class E and Class D Airspace; El Toro MCAS, CA; Docket No. 99–AWP-19 [11–30/12-2]" (RIN2120–AA66) (1999–0378), received December 3, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7183. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Modification of Class D Airspace and Establishment of Class E Airspace; Dayton, Wright-Patterson AFB, OH"; Docket No. 99–AGL-50 [12-3/12-9]" (RIN2120-AA66) (1999-0389), received December 9, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7184. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Revision of Class E Airspace; Del Rio, TX; Direct Final Rule: Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-ASW-31 [12-17/12-20]" (RIN2120-AA66) (1999-0407), received December 21, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7185. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Revision of Class D Airspace; NAS JRB, Fort Worth, TX; Docket No. 99-ASW-19 [12-17/12-20]" (RIN2120-AA66) (1999-0401), received December 21, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7186. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Revision of Class D Airspace; Hobbs, NM; Direct Final Rule; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-ASW-32 [1-18/1-20]" (RIN2120-AA66) (2000-0009), received January 24, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7187. A communication from the Deputy Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Emergency Interim Rule to Implement Major Provisions of the American Fisheries Act" (RIN0648-AM83), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7188. A communication from the Deputy Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Fisheries off West Coast States and in the Western Pacific; Coastal Pelagic Species Fisheries; Annual Specifications" (RIN0648–AN36), received January 18,2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7189. A communication from the Assistant Secretary, Fish and Wildlife and Parks, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Marine Mammals; Incidental Take During Specified Activities" (RIN1018-AF87), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation

EC-7190. A communication from the Chairman, Merit Systems Protection Board transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to appeals submitted to the Board for fiscal year 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7191. A communication from the Comptroller General transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the General Accounting Office reports for November 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs

EC-7192. A communication from the Comptroller General transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to bid protests for fiscal year 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7193. A communication from the Assistant Secretary, Policy, Management and Budget, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to its commercial activities inventory; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7194. A communication from the Director, Office of Surface Mining, Department of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Pennsylvania Regulatory Program", received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

EC-7195. A communication from the Congressional Review Coordinator, Regulatory Analysis and Development, Policy and Program Development, Animal and Health Inspection Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Asian Longhorned Beetle; Addition to Quarantined Areas" (Docket # 00-004-1), received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

EC-7196. A communication from the Congressional Review Coordinator, Regulatory Analysis and Development, Policy and Program Development, Animal and Health Inspection Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Imported Fire Ant; Quarantined Areas and Treatment" (Docket #98-125-2), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry

EC-7197. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Additional Guidance on Cash or Deferred Arrangements" (Rev. Rul. 2000-8), received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Finance nance. EC-7198. A communication from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, Department of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Substantiation of Business Expenses" (RIN1545-AV87) (RIN1545-AT97), received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-7199. A communication from the Deputy Executive Secretary, Health Care Financing Administration, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Title IV-E Foster Care Eligibility Reviews and Child Care and Services State Plan Reviews" (RIN2970-AA97), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Finance.

EC-7200. A communication from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs and the Secretary of Defense transmitting jointly, pursuant to law, a report relative to the implementation of that portion of "The Department of Veterans Affairs and the Department of Defense Health Resources Sharing and Emergency Operations Act" dealing with sharing of healthcare resources between the two departments; to the Committee on Veterans' Affairs.

EC-7201. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report relative to the allotment of emergency funds to eleven states under the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Act of 1981; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-7202. A communication from the Director, Regulations Policy and Management Staff, Food and Drug Administration, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Indirect Food Additives: Polymers" (Docket No. 98F-0569), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-7203. A communication from the Director, Regulations Policy and Management Staff, Food and Drug Administration, Department of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Medical Device Reporting; Manufacturer Reporting, Importer Reporting, User Facility Reporting, Distributor Reporting" (RIN0910-ZA18), received January 31, 2000; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

EC-7204. A communication from the Acting Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Endangered Status for 'Erigeron decumbens var. decumbens (Willamette daisy)' and Fender's blue butterfly (Icaricia icariodes fenderi) and Threatened Status for 'Lupinus sulphureus sep. kincaidii' (kincaid's lupine)" (RIN1018-AE53), received January 18, 2000; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-7205. A communication from the Acting Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants: Final Rule to List the Yreka Phlox (Phlox hirsuta) as Endangered" (RIN1018-AE82), received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-7206. A communication from the Acting Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants: Designation of Critical Habitat for the Woundfin and Virgin River Chub" (RIN1018-AD23), received January 20, 2000; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-7207. A communication from the Acting Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Endangered and Threatened Wildlife and Plants: Determination of Endangered Status for Blackburn's Sphinx Moth from the Hawaiian Islands" (RIN1018-AE20), received January 28, 2000; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-7208. A communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, a report entitled "1996 CERCLA/SARA Activities" dated December 1999; to the Committee on Environment and Public Works.

EC-7209. A communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7210. A communication from the Attorney General, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7211. A communication from the Administrator, Small Business Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7212. A communication from the Inspector General, General Services Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7213. A communication from the Chairman, Postal Rate Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7214. A communication from the Public Printer, Government Printing Office, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7215. A communication from the Chairman, Securities and Exchange Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7216. A communication from the Chairman, Federal Maritime Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7217. A communication from the Office of Independent Counsel, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7218. A communication from the Secretary of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7219. A communication from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7220. A communication from the Administrator, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs

EC-7221. A communication from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7222. A communication from the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7223. A communication from the Secretary of Commerce, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7224. A communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7225. A communication from the Inspector General, Railroad Retirement Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7226. A communication from the Federal Co-Chairman, Appalachian Regional Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7227. A communication from the Chairman, Consumer Product Safety Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7228. A communication from the Chief Executive Officer, Corporation for National Service, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs

EC-7229. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7230. A communication from the Secretary of Labor, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; and the report of the Executive Director of the Pension Benefit Corporation; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7231. A communication from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting, pursuant to law, the management report for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs

EC-7232. A communication from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7233. A communication from the Secretary of Energy, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7234. A communication from the Administrator, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7235. A communication from the Secretary of Veterans Affairs, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7236. A communication from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7237. A communication from the Chairman, National Endowment of the Arts, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7238. A communication from the Administrator, Agency for International Development, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs

EC-7239. A communication from the Secretary of Education, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7240. A communication from the Chairman, National Credit Union Administration, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7241. A communication from the Chairman, Federal Housing Finance Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7242. A communication from the Chairwoman, Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7243. A communication from the Chairman, and the General Counsel, National Labor Relations Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7244. A communication from the Chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7245. A communication from the Acting Director, the Peace Corps, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7246. A communication from the Board of Directors, Panama Canal Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7247. A communication from the Chairman, National Science Board, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7248. A communication from the Chairman, Corporation for Public Broadcasting, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7249. A communication from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report on management decisions and final actions on the report of the Office of Inspector General for the period April 1, 1999, through September 30, 1999; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

EC-7250. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Revision of Class E Airspace; Hebbronville, TX; Direct Final Rule; Confirmation of Effective Date; Docket No. 99-ASW-24 [1-6/1-10]" (RIN2120-AA66) (2000-0003), received January 10, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7251. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-100, -200, -300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-260" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0485), received November 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7252. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-100, -200, -300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-260" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0485), received November 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7253. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 767 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-186" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0530), received December 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7254. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-100, -200, -200C Series Airplanes; Docket

No. 98-NM-189" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0528), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7255. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 747-400, and 767 Series Airplanes powered by P & W 4000 Series Engines; Docket No. 99-NM-114" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0527), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7256. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737–100, -200, -300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99–NM–260" (RIN2120–AA64) (1999–0485), recived November 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7256. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-600, -700, -800 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-134 [12-20/12-23]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0526), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7257. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 777–200, and -300 Series Airplanes; Correction; Docket No. 99–NM-323 [12–22/12–23]" (RIN2120–AA64) (1999–0523), received December 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7258. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737 Series Airplanes; Correction; Docket No. 98-NM-383 [12-13/12-16]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0516), received December 16, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7259. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 747 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-361 [1-7/1-10]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0012), received January 10, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7260. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 757–200, -200PF, and -200CB Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-323 [1-3/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0011), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7261. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 767-200, -300, and -300F Series Airplanes; Docket No. 97-NM-241 [1-4/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000–0005), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7262. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 777-200, and -300 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-323 [12-8/12-13]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0509), received December 13, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7263. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-100, -200, -300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-47 [11-19/11-29]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0480), received November 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7264. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 767-200, and -300 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-303 [11-19/11-22]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0461), received November 22, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7265. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 747 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-46 [11-30/12-2]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0498), received December 3, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7266. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 757–200, and -300 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99–NM-89 [11–30/12–2]" (RIN2120–AA64) (1999–0497), received December 3, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7267. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-100, -200, -300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-332 [11-30/12-2]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0490), received December 3, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7268. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 777-200 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-374" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0041), received January 27, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7269. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737-300, -400, and -500 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-351 [1-25/1-27]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0049), received January 27, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7270. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 737–300, -400, -500, -600, -700, and -800 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99–NM–342 [1–14/1–20]" (RIN2120–AA64) (2000–0033), received January 24, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7271. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Boeing Model 777 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-58 [1-14/1-20]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0034), received January 24, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7272. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A300, A300-600, and A310 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 2000-NM-09 [1-25/1-27]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0047), received January 27, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7273. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A340-211, 212, 213, 311, 312, 313 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-336 [1-6/1-10]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0016), received January 10, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7274. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A300, B4-203 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-327 [1-4/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0010), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7275. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A319, A320, and A321 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98–NM–284 [12–8/12–13]" (RIN2120–AA64) (1999–0510), received December 13, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7276. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A300 B4-600R and A300 F4-600R Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-130 [1-4/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0009), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7277. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A310 and A300-600 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-222 [1-4/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64)

(2000-0002), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7278. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A319 and A320 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 96-NM-92 [12-28/12-30]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0538), received January 4, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7279. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A300, A310, 600 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-303 [12-13/12-16]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0519), received December 16, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7280. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A330-301, 321, 322 and A340-211, 212, 213, 311, and 313 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-195 [12-20/12-20]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0521), received December 21, 1999, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7281. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A300 B2 and B4 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-248 [12-21/12-23]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0532), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7282. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Airbus Model A310- and A300-600 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 96-NM-194 [12-21/12-23]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0534), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7283. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model MD-11 Series Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-262 [12-20/12-23]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0529), received December 23, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7284. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; Bombardier Model DHC-7 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-165 [12-20/12-20]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0520), received December 21, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7285. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model MD-11 and MD-11F Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-71 [12-13/12-16]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0518), received December 16, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7286. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model DC-9-80 Series Airplanes and Model MD-88 Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-05 [12-27/12-30]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0537), received January 4, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7287. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model MD-11 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-167 [11-19/11-22]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0476), received November 22, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7288. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model DC-8 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-309 [1-25/1-27]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0039), received January 27, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7289. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model MD-90 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-209 [1-19/1-20]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0032), received January 24, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7290. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; McDonnell Douglas Model DC-8 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-217 [1-19/1-20]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0035), received January 24, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7291. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model 4101 Airplanes; Docket No. 99–NM-306 [1–27/1–27]" (RIN2120–AA64) (2000–0043), received January 27, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7292. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model HS 748 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-147 [11-22/11-22]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0464), received November 22, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7293. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; BFGoodrich Main Brake Assemblies as Installed an Airbus A319 and A320 Airplanes; Request for Comments; Docket No. 99-NM-341 [12-8/12-9]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0507), received December 9, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7294. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model 4101 Airplanes; Docket No. 99–NM-296 [12-8/12-9]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0508), received December 9, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7295. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model 4101 Airplanes; Docket No. 99–NM-302 [12–28/12–30]" (RIN2120–AA64) (1999–0539), received January 4, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7296. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model BAC 1-11 200 and 400 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-31 [1-4/1-6]" (RIN2120-AA64) (2000-0003), received January 6, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7297. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model BAe 146 and Avro 146RJ Series Airplanes; Docket No. 98-NM-331 [12-28/12-30]" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0536), received January 4, 2000; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

EC-7298. A communication from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Federal Aviation Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting, pursuant to law, the report of a rule entitled "Airworthiness Directives; British Aerospace Model HS 748 Series Airplanes; Docket No. 99-NM-147" (RIN2120-AA64) (1999-0483), received November 29, 1999; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, from the Committee on Environment and Public Works, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute:

S. 1053. A bill to amend the Clean Air Act to incorporate certain provisions of the transportation conformity regulations, as in effect on March 1, 1999 (Rept. No. 106-228).

INTRODUCTION OF BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

The following bills and joint resolutions were introduced, read the first time and second time by unanimous consent, and referred as indicated:

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 2022. A bill to provide for the development of remedies to resolve unmet community land grant claims in New Mexico; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

By Mr. LIEBERMAN (for himself, Mr. SANTORUM, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. ABRA-HAM, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. ROBB, and Mr. BAYH):

S. 2023. A bill to provide for the establishment of Individual Development Accounts (IDAs) that will allow individuals and families with limited means an opportunity to accumulate assets, to access education, to own their own homes and businesses, and ultimately to achieve economic self-sufficiency, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

By Mr. SMITH of Oregon (for himself and Mr. Wyden):

S. 2024. A bill to amend title 28, United States Code, to provide for an additional place of holding court in the District of Oregon; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. GRAMS:

S. 2025. A bill to facilitate the naturalization of aliens who served with special guerrilla units or irregular forces in Laos; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mrs. BOXER (for herself, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 2026. A bill to amend the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to authorize appropriations for HIV/AIDS efforts; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

By Mr. VOINOVICH (for himself and Mr. GRAMM):

S.J. Res. 38. A joint resolution to provide for a Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment that prohibits the use of Social Security surpluses to achieve compliance; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

SUBMISSION OF CONCURRENT AND SENATE RESOLUTIONS

The following concurrent resolutions and Senate resolutions were read, and referred (or acted upon), as indicated:

By Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. DODD, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KOHL, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. ROBB, Mr. ROTH, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. WARNER, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. EDWARDS, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. SMITH Of Oregon, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. REED, Mr LEVIN and Mr. ENZI).

S. Res. 251. A resolution designating March 25, 2000, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

By Mr. WELLSTONE:

S. Res. 252. A resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that Rebiya Kadeer, her family member and business associate, should be released by the People's Republic of China; to the Committee on Foreign Relations

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. BINGAMAN (for himself and Mr. DOMENICI):

S. 2022. A bill to provide for the development of remedies to resolve unmet community land grant claims in New Mexico; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

NEW MEXICO COMMUNITY LAND GRANT REVIEW

ACT

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill, along with Senator DOMENICI, which will move us toward resolving a long standing issue of great controversy in my State of New Mexico.

Today marks the anniversary of one of the most significant dates in the creation of modern America. On this date one hundred and fifty-two years ago, our government and the government of Mexico entered into an agreement which ended a bloody war, and which brought a huge swath of territory into the United States.

The addition of this new territory, which became the American Southwest, forever changed the makeup of our nation, its place on the world stage, and its culture. The infusion of a large Hispanic population and a myriad of Native American communities into fabric of American society enriched the diversity of country and strengthened the dynamism of our culture.

It is day which should be one for celebration. A day in which New Mexicans should reflect on the confluence of cultures which make up our state. It is a day to remember the sweat and grit of the people who traveled north up El Camino Real (the Royal Road) passing through one area that was so arduous that it was known as La Jornada del Muerte (the Journey of Death), and those who came west over the Santa Fe trail to reach New Mexico and who, together with the Pueblo, Apache, and Navajo peoples who had already carved a life out of this arid land, built our modern culture.

It is a day for celebration, but unfortunately it is also a day which recalls great pain for many. For that agreement between nations which established the American Southwest, the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, also carried with it a promise to the new citizens of America. That promise was that their ownership of lands established under Spanish and Mexican law would be respected and validated by their new government. Many who would be celebrating today do not believe that that promise was kept. The serious questions that have been raised concerning the validation of Spanish and Mexican community land grant claims in New Mexico cast a cloud over this day, and a cloud over our national honor.

Given the long history of dispute over community land grant claims in New Mexico, and the large amount of disputed land, a credible neutral analysis of the United States' implementation of the Treaty has been needed. To that end, Senator DOMENICI and I have requested that the General Accounting Office review the United States' legal obligations under the Treaty and whether the Federal government met those obligations with regard to community land grant claims.

This will be the first national study of the issue, and it is overdue. Given how long it has taken for the heirs of these land grants to get a credible review of their claims, it is that important that this study not end up gathering dust on some shelf. If the GAO finds that the United States denied these communities their rights under the treaty, then it is imperative that the Federal government develop a remedy to resolve this issue.

Therefore I, along with Senator DOMENICI, am introducing a bill today which will move us in that direction. This bill would require that, should the GAO find that the United States has failed to meet its Treaty obligations, the Justice Department prepare for the President a list of methods to remedy the problem, and that the President must propose to Congress his preferred remedy.

Unlike the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, which was an agreement between nations, this bill represents a promise directly to land grant heirs that their claim will be fully considered by the United States Government. I hope we can pass this measure, and make that promise to them.

Mr. President I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

S. 2022

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "New Mexico Community Land Grant Reivew Act."

SEC. 2. PURPOSE, DEFINITIONS, AND FINDINGS.

- (a) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to provide for the development of potential remedies to resolve unmet obligations by the United States with regard to community land grant claims in New Mexico under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.
- (b) DEFINITIONS.—As used in this Act:
- (1) TREATY OF GUADALUPE—HIDALGO.—The term "Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo" means the Treaty of Peace, Friendship, Limits, and Settlement (Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo), between the United States and the Republic of Mexico, signed February 2, 1848, with the amending Protocol of Queretaro signed May 26, 1848; entered into force on May 30, 1948 (TS 207; 9 Bevans 791).
- (2) COMMUNITY LAND GRANT.—The term "community land grant" means a village, town, settlement, or pueblo consisting of land held in common (accompanied by lesser private allotments) by three or more families under a grant from the King of Spain (or his representative) before the effective date of the Treaty of Cordova, August 24, 1821, or from the authorities of the Republic of Mexico before May 30, 1848, in what became the State of New Mexico, regardless of the original character of the grant.
- (3) LAND GRANT CLAIM.—The term "land grant claim" means a claim to land owned by a community land grant.
- (4) GAO.—The term "GAO" means the United States General Accounting Office.
 - (c) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds:
- (1) New Mexico has a unique and complex history regarding land ownership due to the substantial number of land grants awarded by the King of Spain and the Republic of Mexico as an integral part of the colonization of New Mexico prior to the takeover of the area by the United States under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo.
- (2) Under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo, the United States agreed to respect valid land grants claims.
- (3) Several studies, including the New Mexico Land Grant Series published by the University of New Mexico, have called into question whether the United States has fulfilled

- its obligations under the Treaty. There continue to be claims that citizens of the United States were illegally deprived of the property rights protected by the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo through the actions of the Office of the Surveyor General established in 1854, the Court of Private Land Claims established in 1891, and the Territory of New Mexico
- (4) There was a remarkable difference in outcomes between the land claims adjudications in the State of California, where approximately 73 percent of the claimed acreage was confirmed, and the former Territory of New Mexico, where only 24 percent of the claimed acreage was confirmed. This difference in outcomes raises serious questions as to whether adjudications in New Mexico were equitably and fairly administered.
- (5) Following the United States' war with Mexico and for much of this century, the economy of New Mexico was dependent on land resources. When the land grant claimants lost title to their land, the predominantly Hispanic communities in New Mexico lost a keystone to their economy, and the effects of this loss had long lasting economic consequences for these communities.
- (6) Whether the United States failed to meet its obligations under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo has been a source of continuing controversy and has left a lingering sense of injustice in some communities in New Mexico over the last one-hundred and fifty years.

(7) This issue, which regards the integrity of the United States with regards to its international commitments and its commitments to its citizenry, must be resolved.

(8) The GAO has been requested to review how the United States implemented the provisions of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo which pertain to the protection of community land grant claims New Mexico, and to provide a report to the Congress and the President by December 31, 2002, which includes an assessment of whether the procedures established by the United States to implement the treaty appear to have been adequate, and whether the community land grants claims appear to have been equitably adjudicated.

SEC. 3. DEVELOPMENT OF REMEDY RECOMMENDATIONS AND PRESIDENTIAL PROPOSAL.

If the GAO concludes, in the report to Congress and the President described in Section (2)(c)(8) of this Act, that the obligations of the United States under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo regarding the protection of the community land grant rights do not appear to have been met, the Department of Justice shall prepare for the President a list of alternative methods to remedy the problem. The President shall then submit to Congress recommendations to resolve these claims within six months of the submission of the GAO report. In no event shall these recommendations include the divestiture of private property rights.

• Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joining Senator BINGA-MAN in introducing legislation to help resolve whether the federal government inadequately implemented the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hildalgo in New Mexico. Today is the 152d anniversary of the signing by the United States of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo with Mexico. Under this 1848 treaty, the United States acquired the territory that is now California, Nevada, Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Wyoming. Unfortunately, the potential failure of this country to meet its obligations under the Treaty of GuadalupeHildalgo has been a source of continuing controversy, and many New Mexicans claim they were illegally deprived of property rights by the federal government. For example, in California, about seventy-three percent of land grant claims have been confirmed compared to only twenty-four percent in New Mexico, which raises questions as to whether adjudications in New Mexico were equitably and fairly administered

We must take the opportunity to reverse the heritage of ill-will between the Hispanic people of New Mexico and the Federal government. Hispanic descendants in our state have been waiting over 150 years to get the federal government to fairly look into the community land grants issue. In 1848, land grant claimants were led to believe that their property rights would be honored and protected, but they have repeatedly been frustrated by government officials. One Surveyor General for New Mexico has been described by historians as "steeped in prejudice against New Mexico, its people and their property rights." Other opportunists used long legal battles to acquire empires that extended over millions of acres—all at the expense of local Hispanics.

In 1891, the Surveyor General was replaced by the Court of Private Land Claims, but the court's procedures heavily favored the government. The Court of Claims required that claimants prove that the Spanish or Mexican granting official had the legal authority to issue the land grant. The claimants did not have access to necessary documentation, and often did not speak English. Consequently, the court rejected two-thirds of the New Mexico claims presented before it. Ultimately, by one account written by Richard Griswold del Castillo, only eighty-two grants received Congressional confirmation. This represented only six percent of the total area sought by land claimants, leaving a bitter legacy.

In the 105th Congress, Congressman Redmond was able to pass a bill out of the House of Representatives creating a Presidential Commission to evaluate the community land grants located in New Mexico. I was proud to introduce a companion bill, including a few changes based on the lessons I learned from talking to the heirs of some of the land grants; from reviewing the history; and from talking to scholars, historians and land grant lawyers.

After hearings and continuing dialog with land grant heirs, we realized that the natural first step in the process was determining whether the grantees' rights had been violated under the Treaty. It became clear that adequate time for a thorough study of the issue was needed. Documents had to be gathered. Resolution of the dispute must take into account intervening legal rights.

Last year, Senator BINGAMAN and I originally proposed that the Attorney General, acting through the Assistant Attorney General for Civil Rights. should investigate whether the United States properly implemented the provisions of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo which pertain to the protection of valid land grant claims in New Mexico. If that investigation found that the federal government needed to rectify past abuses, the President would submit a proposal to Congress to resolve those claims. The Senate supported our desire last fall to include in the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill the requirement that the Justice Department conduct such a study. However, the Justice Department objected on the grounds that it could not be a neutral examiner of the legal obligations of the United States in this situation.

The General Accounting Office (GAO) was recommended by House appropriators as an alternative, and language directing GAO conduct a study was included in the original conference report for Department of Justice appropriations. However, that provision was written in the waning hours of the conference, without time for consultation with the GAO, and while the focus of the conference was turned to other matters. Consequently, we believed that language was inadequate to serve New Mexico's needs. At our request. the appropriations conferees removed the inadequate study language from the final version of the CJS conference report.

I must say that I respectfully disagree with the Justice Department's contention that they could not properly conduct such a study. What better arm of the government should investigate whether the United States properly implemented the provisions of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo which pertain to the protection of valid land grant claims in New Mexico?

Nonetheless, after meeting with toplevel representatives at the Department of Justice, Senator BINGAMAN and I met with GAO's General Counsel Robert Murphy and Principal Assistant Comptroller General Gene Dodaro to craft language that more closely reflected the needs of New Mexico, and the capabilities of the GAO. We have formally asked GAO to review how the United States implemented the provisions of the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo which pertain to the protection of community land grant claims in New Mexico.

The GAO will submit an interim report to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate, and to the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives and to the President of the United States, by the end of this year. A final report will be submitted by the end of 2002. This will allow the GAO adequate time to investigate this complicated issue.

The report will include a description of the legal obligations of the United States to protect the rights of community land grants and its actions in carrying out the provisions of the treaty, an assessment of the issues raised concerning the implementation of the treaty provisions, and identification of potential methods of resolving any failure by the United States with regard to community land grant claims. The GAO shall also discuss the potential effects of resolution options on intervening legal rights and on Tribal land claims. In no event should any identification of remedies include divestiture of private property rights.

The bill we introduce today directs that if the GAO concludes that the obligations of the United States under the Treaty of Guadalupe-Hidalgo regarding the protection of the community land grant rights do not appear to have been met, the Department of Justice shall prepare for the President a list of alternative methods to remedy the problem. The President will then submit to Congress recommendations to resolve these claims within six months of the submission of the GAO report. Again, we also wish to ensure that no recommendations include the potential divestiture of private property rights. We do not wish to transplant one potential injustice with another.

Trying to do justice 150 years after the fact is complicated. I am hopeful that this bill can address what has been, for too long, a tale of land loss and bitterness between the United States and some of its New Mexico citizens.

By Mr. LIEBERMAN (for himself, Mr. Santorum, Ms. Landrieu, Mr. Abraham, Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Robb, and Mr. Bayh):

S. 2023. A bill to provide for the establishment of Individual Development Accounts (IDAs) that will allow individuals and families with limited means an opportunity to accumulate assets, to access education, to own their own homes and businesses, and ultimately to achieve economic self-sufficiency, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

SAVINGS FOR WORKING FAMILIES ACT OF 2000 • Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to proudly introduce with esteemed colleagues, Senators SANTORUM, ABRAHAM, FEINSTEIN, LAN-DRIEU, BAYH, and ROBB, the Savings for Working Families Act of 2000. This legislation directly addresses a problem that is now starting to receive the attention that it deserves: the growing wealth gap in our country. This legislation builds on a bipartisan effort begun last session to help more low-income working families join our country's economic mainstream by addressing that wealth gap. Passing this legislation will help expand our economic winner's circle to include more working families. Because what goes up for the richest families, particularly in these boom times, need not come down for other families.

Today with my colleagues, I put forward a modest yet promising proposal that we believe will help more low income families share in our country's economic prosperity. Today we will introduce new legislation to support the expansion of Individual Development Accounts, or IDAs, an innovative and powerful tool to help the working poor save and develop the assets they need to get ahead and thrive in the new economy—to enter the winner's circle.

The Savings for Working Families Act of 2000 will benefit working, low-income families across this country to share in the unprecedented prosperity of our booming economy. Our bill brings together Republicans and Democrats, policy wonks and working mothers, and even financial institutions and consumers, all in support of a new approach to sustaining some American ideals-hard work, thrift, individual responsibility, and entrepreneurship. The Savings for Working Families Act of 2000 provides the real incentives and real opportunities for the working poor to build assets, both human and financial capital, which they in turn will be able to invest in our national economy.

Today's economy is defying gravity. The stock market is jumping to record highs while inflation and unemployment are hovering at record lows. Millions of Americans are reaping the benefits of the longest economic expansion in our history, including millions of working middle class families. Unfortunately, millions more are not.

Several recent studies have documented a growing income gap in the U.S.—an increasing income disparity between the rich and poor with declining incomes for both poor and low-income families. In addition to that income gap, a report released recently by the Federal Reserve Bank, has identified a significant asset gap in this country. A gap where the net worth-or assets—of the typical American family has risen substantially since 1989, while the net worth—or assets—of lower income families has actually declined during the economic boom of recent vears.

According to the Fed report, families earning under $10,000 a year had a median net worth of $1,900 in 1989. That climbed to $4,800 in 1995, but had slipped back to $3,600 by 1998. Those families earning $10,000 to $25,000 saw their net worth drop from $31,000 in 1995 to $24,800 in 1998. More specifically, while the percent of all U.S. families that own a home or business has risen during the boom years of 1995-98, the percent among lower income families has decreased. For example, in 1995, 36.1% of families earning under $10,000 annually owned their home. By 1998 the rate had dropped to 34.5%. The drop for families earning $10,000 to $25,000 was from 54.9% to 51.7%. The same story is true for the percent of lower income families owning a business.

The Savings for Working Families Act of 2000 will directly address exactly this asset gap. Our bill seeks to address this imbalance by dramatically expanding the use of IDAs. IDA programs do work and are reporting real success in spurring savings and asset building on a small scale in hundreds of communities across the country. Already 27 states have passed some form of IDA program legislation.

In my home state of Connecticut, there is today only one pilot IDA program in existence. A handful of low income individuals are now starting to take part in a strong IDA program run by the Committee for Training and Employment, or CTE, a cutting edge community-based organization providing a range of services and activities to address poverty issues in the greater Stamford area. In Connecticut we are hopeful that we will soon be seeing an expansion of IDA accounts and programs. A statewide IDA Task force. convened by Connecticut State Treasurer, Denise L. Nappier, recently released a report to jump-start more IDA activity in the state. Its thoughtful analysis and authoritative ommendations will certainly help to increase IDAs in our state. The Savings for Working Families Act of 2000 was drafted in consideration of the excellent IDA work under way in states and communities all across the country.

The idea is simple, but powerful. Low income workers who put their hard earned dollars into IDAs would get matching funds from financial and other private entities. A federal tax credit will provide the incentives for those private sector investments in IDAs. The IDA savings could then be used by low income working families to develop assets, specifically for the purchase of a home, the pursuit of a postsecondary education, or to start a business. In essence, this legislation extends to lower income working families the type of incentives for building assets, such as the home mortgage interest deduction, preferential capital gains rates and pension funds exclusions and incentives, that are now available on a large scale to the nonpoor and wealthy.

Just last week, President Clinton underscored the promise of this approach in his State of the Union Address, when he put forward his Retirement Savings Account (RSA) proposal. Those RSAs are similar to the IDAs in this bill. In his proposal, the President rightly identified the potential of the private sector in strengthening the economic security of many of our most vulnerable citizens. Just as important, he made clear, as we do in the Savings for Working Families Act, that these IDA accounts are not simply an empty promise for a handout. They are a means to integrate more Americans into the broader economic mainstream.

In drafting this new IDA legislation, our objective was to keep it simple and based closely on S. 895, a bill that Senator SANTORUM and I introduced last year and that enjoyed strong bipartisan support. Modifications in the Savings for Working Families Act of 2000 are primarily technical in nature, recognizing that the IDA field has grown and evolved in the last year. We have also made a concerted effort in the new bill to realize the potential of critical private sector and nonprofit organizations to be effective IDA providers, including credit unions and community service organizations.

Moving forward, we are confident that we can get this bill passed because it addresses a threat to our fundamental faith in the American dream and to the vitality and long-term stability of our national economy. Our bill cannot singlehandedly eliminate the wealth gap, but we are confident that it will help carve out a little more space in that winner's circle and move us a step closer to making the American dream real for more working families

Finally, I would like to thank each of the cosponsors of this bill, especially Senators Santorum and Abraham. Through their hard work, and in conjunction with the financial services industry and the IDA field, we have legislation that achieves a very public interest. In particular, I would like to note the leadership of the Corporation for Enterprise Development (CFED) for helping to bring the voice of the IDA community to this creation of this bill. With the Savings for Working Families Act of 2000, we are able to harness the creative forces of the marketplace to help secure our core democratic values, holding out the hope of free enterprise without the false promise of a free lunch, and giving some tangible meaning to those core values of community, opportunity and responsibility. In expanding the use of IDAs across the country as an empowerment tool for working families, this legislation speaks to our shared aspirations as Americans.

●

Mrs. BOXER (for herself, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 2026. A bill to amend the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 to authorize appropriations for HIV/AIDS efforts; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

THE GLOBAL AIDS PREVENTION (GAP) ACT OF 2000

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, last month, the United States held the rotating presidency of the U.N. Security Council. And something historic happened. Under the leadership of Ambassador Holbrooke and Vice President Gore, the Security Council for the first time ever discussed an international health issue.

The issue was the spread of AIDS, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa. In raising the profile of this issue—in putting it before the U.N. Security Council—there was a recognition that the AIDS crisis is a security threat—a threat to the peace, stability, and prosperity of nations around the world.

Nowhere is that more true than in sub-Saharan Africa, where the United Nations has said that AIDS is "the worst infectious disease catastrophe since the bubonic plague."

Since the beginning of the HIV/AIDS epidemic, 13.7 million people in sub-Saharan Africa have died of AIDS. That is 84 percent of all the people in the world who have died of AIDS since the beginning of the epidemic. Last year, two-thirds of all new cases of HIV/AIDS were in sub-Saharan Africa. And of all the people in the world living with HIV/AIDS, 69 percent of them live in sub-Saharan Africa.

Mr. President, this is not just a matter of more deaths and more cases because there are more people. Of adults in sub-Saharan Africa who are aged 15-49, eight percent of them have HIV/AIDS. Percentages from specific countries are even more dramatic. In Zimbabwe, it is estimated that 26 percent of all adults aged 15-49 are living with the disease. In Botswana, it is 25 percent, and in Namibia, it is 20 percent.

Unlike any other area of the world, the HIV/AIDS epidemic in sub-Saharan Africa is predominately a woman's disease. A majority of infected adults—55 percent to be exact—are women.

This creates ripple effects. When women get the disease, they often pass it along to their unborn babies. As a result, about 10 percent of the HIV/AIDS cases in sub-Saharan Africa are children. More dramatically, when women die, their children often become orphans. By the end of this year, the HIV/AIDS epidemic will be the reason that over 10 million children in sub-Saharan Africa are orphans.

How many children is that? There are about 10 million people 18 years old and younger in California. Imagine if every single one of them was an orphan. That is what we are talking about in sub-Saharan Africa. Ten million children. Even worse, according to those who are working on this issue in Africa, the number of children orphaned there because of HIV/AIDS could double, triple, or even quadruple in the next decade.

I have mentioned, Mr. President, a lot of statistics, a lot of numbers. but behind each number there is a face. A face of a man living with HIV; a face of a woman dying of AIDS; a face of an orphan with no family and no place to go. In Sub-Saharan Africa, there are faces upon faces upon faces.

This is a global tragedy, a global catastrophe, a global emergency. It requires a global response. And the United States must lead the way.

So today, I am introducing, along with my colleague on the Foreign Relations Committee, Senator GORDON SMITH, the Global AIDS Prevention Act-the GAP Act. It calls on the United States Agency for International Development—USAID—to make HIV/ AIDS a priority in the foreign assistance program and to undertake a comprehensive, coordinated effort to combat HIV/AIDS. That effort must include primary prevention and education; voluntary testing and counseling; providing medications to prevent the transmission of HIV/AIDS from mother to child; and care for those living with HIV/AIDS.

To accomplish this, the GAP Act would increase funding for USAID's international HIV/AIDS effort. Over five years, the bill would authorize $2 billion for the fight against AIDS, and at least $1 billion of that is dedicated to the problem in sub-Saharan Africa.

I want to commend the work done so far by USAID. This year, the Agency will spend $200 million to fight HIV/AIDS abroad. Unfortunately, this is the first time in six years that there has been an increase in the funding for this important effort. And it is still far short of what is needed. It is time to close the gap. Passing the GAP Act would be a great step forward.

Now, Mr. President, I have talked about the problem in sub-Saharan Africa. That is where the problem is the worst and where the need is most urgent. It has also been the focus of most of the public attention in the last few months.

But, be warned. We must not fool ourselves into thinking that sub-Saharan Africa is the only place with a problem. In terms of raw numbers, India has more people living with HIV/AIDS than any other nation in the world. And experts tell us that in the near future, the problem may actually grow faster in Southeast Asia than in Africa.

The GAP Act recognizes the need to be flexible. As I mentioned, it dedicates at least 50 percent of the funding to sub-Saharan Africa. USAID is actually spending about 65 percent of its AIDS dollars in that region now. This bill will continue to allow USAID to spend that higher percentage, but it will also provide the Agency with the flexibility to address the problem elsewhere in the world.

As I mentioned, Mr. President, I am joined in this effort by Senator GORDON SMITH. He and I worked together last summer in introducing a bill to fight the international tuberculosis problem. I am pleased and honored to join with him again in introducing bipartisan legislation to address an urgent international health problem.

Mr. President, in the United States, When the epidemic first hit two decides ago, too many people in positions to make a difference ran inside, locked the doors, closed the curtains, and just hoped it would go away. The victims were blamed instead of helped. Those at risk were ridiculed instead of educated. Those who were dying were shunned instead of cared for.

We did not begin to make progress against HIV/AIDS in this country until we discussed the problem in the light of day and until we made a serious investment in education, prevention, treatment, care, and research. Progress will not be made in Africa or anywhere else in the world unless we do the same. Now is not the time to pretend the problem does not exist or that it does not matter to us. Now is the time to act.

The GAP Act would help to close the gap between what we need to fight this disease and what we are now spending. The GAP Act would help to close the GAP between the developed and the developing world in dealing with this epidemic. The GAP Act would help to close the gap between our words and our actions. I ask my colleagues to close these gaps by cosponsoring the GAP Act.

Finally, I ask that a copy of the bill and a letter of endorsement from Family Health International be inserted in the RECORD.

The material follows:

S. 2026

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Global AIDS Prevention Act of 2000".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

- (1) Since the beginning of the HIV/AIDS epidemic 2 decades ago, more than 16,300,000 people worldwide have died of the disease.
- (2) More than 33,600,000 people in the world are living with HIV/AIDS; more than 3,000,000 of them are children.
- (3) Sub-Saharan Africa has been particularly hard hit by the disease, as the region has accounted for—
- (A) 84 percent of the worldwide deaths from HIV/AIDS;
- (B) two-thirds of the new infections in 1999; and
- (C) 69 percent of those living with the disease
- (4) In sub-Saharan Africa, 55 percent of the infected adults are women and, as a result, more than 10,000,000 children have been orphaned in sub-Saharan Africa because of HIV/AIDS—a figure that could double or triple in the next decade.
- (5) According to the United Nations, HIV/AIDS in sub-Saharan Africa is the "worst infectious disease catastrophe since the bubonic plague".
- (6) The HIV/AIDS problem in Southeast Asia is growing dramatically. In 1999, 20 percent of the new infections in the world were in Southeast Asia.
- (7) New investments and treatments hold out promise of making progress against the HIV/AIDS epidemic. For example, a recent study in Uganda demonstrated that a new drug could prevent almost one-half of the HIV transmissions from mothers to infants, at a fraction of the cost of other treatments.
- (8) Making progress against HIV/AIDS requires a global commitment, with a leader-ship role from the United States.

SEC. 3. AMENDMENT OF THE FOREIGN ASSISTANCE ACT OF 1961.

Section 104(c) of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151b(c)) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(4)(A) Congress expects the agency primarily responsible for administering this part to make HIV/AIDS a priority in the foreign assistance program and to undertake a comprehensive, coordinated effort to combat HIV/AIDS. This effort shall include providing

- "(i) primary prevention and education;
- "(ii) voluntary testing and counseling;
- "(iii) medications to prevent the transmission of HIV/AIDS from mother to child; and
- "(iv) care for those living with HIV/AIDS. "(B)(i) In addition to amounts otherwise available for such purpose, there are authorized to be appropriated to the President to carry out this paragraph $300,000,000 for fiscal year 2001, $350,000,000 for fiscal year 2002, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2003, $450,000,000 for fiscal year 2004, and $500,000,000 for fiscal year 2005.

"(ii) Not less than 50 percent of funds made available each fiscal year under clause (i) shall be used to combat the HIV/AIDS epidemic in sub-Saharan Africa.

"(iii) Funds appropriated under this subparagraph are authorized to remain available until expended.".

Family Health International, Family Health Institute, Arlington, VA, January 31, 2000.

Hon. BARBARA BOXER,

Hart Senator Office Building, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR BOXER: Based on Family Health International's 14 years of experience managing more than 1,200 HIV/AIDS prevention and care projects in 60 countries—the majority in sub-Saharan Africa—we strongly support The Global AIDS Prevention Act of 2000.

The need for scaling up HIV/AIDS prevention and care programs in Africa is urgent. We know firsthand that the United States needs to provide more assistance than it has in the past to save more lives, bolster regional security and protect the interests of the United States not only in sub-Saharan Africa, but around the world.

We are pleased that you and members of the U.S. Senate and Congress recognize the urgency of this need and the crucial role the United States plays in international HIV/AIDS prevention and care programming. We have the tools and expertise needed to make a dramatic difference in preventing more people from being infected with HIV and caring for people living with HIV/AIDS. But, this difference can only be made by providing the level of resources it will take to greatly expand the initiatives the United States already has underway with our hundreds of local partners overseas.

We appreciate your recognition and support for the critically important work being done by nongovernmental organizations, including Family Health International, and the United States Agency for International Development. Continuing leadership by the United States on HIV/AIDSs initiatives is needed more urgently now than ever before: by the end of this year, some 60 million people, including over a million Americans, will have been infected with HIV since this global pandemic began.

Your support and that of the U.S. Senate is needed now more than ever, Senator Boxer. We need much more support to save more lives, increase the basic health, well-being and productivity of millions threatened by, infected with or affected by HIV/AIDS, including millions of children, worldwide.

Sincerely,
PETER R. LAMPTEY, M.D. DR. P.H.,
Director, IMPACT Project,
Senior Vice President, AIDS Programs.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to join Senator BOXER in introducing the Global AIDS Prevention Act. This legislation authorizes $2 billion over the next five years to support the Agency for International Development's [AID] efforts to prevent and treat HIV/AIDS abroad. Fully half of the funds authorized would go to fight AIDS in sub-Saharan Africa. The remainder will go to other areas, including some countries of Southeast Asia where infection rates are growing at alarming rates.

While the nations of sub-Saharan Africa have faced a myriad of disasters in the last decades of the 20th century, few reach the cataclysmic proportions that the spread of AIDS has wrought on every level of life in that area. The statistics are mind-numbing—in some countries, one of four adults are living with HIV/AIDS. Life expectancies in those countries over the next 5 years have been slashed from the mid-60s to the early forties. Cumulative deaths attributable to AIDS numbered over 13 million by 1999 and the number of children orphaned by AIDS is estimated between 7 and 10 million. An estimated 1 million children in Africa are HIV positive.

These numbers impact every facet of life in this region of Africa. Where populations of adults aren't likely to enter the workforce or care for their children, an economy cannot prosper and grow. Where millions are orphaned, many times watching their parents die, a future that includes any basic education is likely not to happen. Where governments struggle with civil strife, the basic medical needs of its populations go unmet. I am proud of the private and religious organizations that have heroically struggled to fight the impact on families, however it is clear that the scope of the AIDS crisis requires additional support.

In an area where some country infection rate reaches one out of four of the adult population, our diplomatic efforts must first and foremost include a means to stop this epidemic. While the internal political strife in some of these countries can be equally heartbreaking in outcome, the ongoing devastation spread by AIDS in some of these countries needs to be addressed in a broad and immediate way.

I would like to commend my colleagues from California for her strong leadership in this area and I call on my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support this legislation and meet this devastating epidemic.

By Mr. VOINOVICH (for himself and Mr. GRAMM):

S.J. Res. 38. A joint resolution to provide for a Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment that prohibits the use of Social Security surpluses to achieve compliance; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

 $\begin{array}{c} {\rm BALANCED} \ {\rm BUDGET} \ {\rm CONSTITUTIONAL} \\ {\rm AMENDMENT} \end{array}$

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, the Congressional Budget Office, CBO, released figures last week showing that the United States is on track to achieve a $23 billion on-budget surplus this fiscal year. If CBO's figures hold up, then the United States will have achieved a true, on-budget surplus for the first time in 40 years.

In addition, the United States could enjoy an on-budget surplus ranging somewhere between $11 billion and $69 billion in fiscal year 2001, depending on which set of figures you use.

But what I find truly amazing is what CBO reports could occur over the next 10 years. Under the most realistic assumptions about discretionary spending, CBO estimates we could achieve an on-budget surplus of nearly $900 billion.

As good as this sounds, we must remember not to get ahead of the game. Just because we could obtain an onbudget surplus, does not mean we have obtained an on-budget surplus.

Whatever on-budget surplus we actually achieve this year—and the years that follow—is predicated on the ability of Congress and the President to resist the urge to spend it. Unfortunately, with an amount of unobligated money that large, there will be calls from all segments of society and Government to increase funding for this program, or create that program, or institute massive tax cuts.

That is why the very first priority for this year must be to oppose the temptation to squander this year's surplus on a pork-laden supplemental appropriations bill. I implore my colleagues to maintain the necessary discipline that will let these surpluses grow.

Even though I am cautiously optimistic about the on-budget surpluses projected for this year and the next, I still do not believe we should treat CBO's projections as the gospel truth as we plan 10 years, or even 5 years, down the road.

That is because, as most any economist will tell you, the only thing certain about projections is their uncertainty.

In testimony before the House Banking Committee last year, Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan said:

...it's very difficult to project with any degree of conviction when you get out beyond 12, 18 months.

In addition, he stated:

Projecting five or ten years out is a very precarious activity, as I think we have demonstrated time and time again.

Last July, CBO Director Dan Crippen said, in testimony before the Senate Budget Committee that "10-year budget projections are highly uncertain" and that "economic forecasting is an art that no one has truly mastered." And that is from the Director of CBO—the man in charge of making Congress' surplus projections.

More alarming, as we all know, these surplus projections don't reflect the ticking time bomb of Social Security and Medicare costs that will explode when the baby boomers begin to retire—something that Congress and the President must address now.

More importantly as we bask in the euphoria of these projected surpluses, we must not forget the sobering fact that we still have a $5.7 trillion national debt—a national debt that costs us more than $224 billion a year to service. That is more than $600 million a day in interest costs alone.

Out of every Federal dollar spent, 13 cents goes to pay the interest on the national debt.

In comparison: 16 cents goes for national defense, 18 cents goes for nondefense discretionary spending, and 53 cents goes for entitlement spending. Here is the chart. I think most people are not familiar with it. This shows where the Federal dollar goes: net interest, 13 percent; national defense, 16 percent; nondefense discretionary spending, 18 percent; and 53 percent for mandatory spending.

Think about it. We spend more on interest each year than we spend on Medicare. It is easy to understand our difficulty in reforming Medicare or providing a prescription drug benefit or funding countless other beneficial programs when the money we could use to pay for such programs or activities is being spent on interest.

That is why I believe every fiscal decision we make from here on must be measured against the backdrop of how it will decrease our $5.7 trillion national debt.

In fact, in testimony before the Senate Budget Committee last week, CBO Director Crippen stated:

Most economists agree that saving the surpluses, paying down the debt held by the public, is probably the best thing that we can do relative to the economy.

On the very same day, Federal Reserve Chairman Greenspan said,

My first priority would be to allow as much of the surplus to flow through into a reduction in debt to the public. From an economic point of view, that would be, by far, the best means of employing it.

Lowering the debt sends a positive signal to Wall Street and to Main Street. It encourages more savings and investment which we really need in the country, and, in turn, it fuels productivity and continued economic growth. It also lowers interest rates, which in my view, is a "bird-in-the-hand" cost reduction for most Americans, and better than the "two-in-the-bush" tax-reduction proposals floating around this Congress.

Furthermore, devoting on-budget surpluses to debt reduction is the only way we can ensure that our Nation will not return to the days of deficit spending should the economy take a sharp turn for the worse or a national emergency arise.

As Alan Greenspan recently testified: A substantial part of the surplus. . .should be allowed to reduce the debt, because you can always increase debt later if you wish to, but it's effectively putting away the surplus for use at a later time if you so choose.

Even as most economists agree that the best use of any surplus is to apply it against the debt, the bad news is, the President and some of my colleagues believe the best use of this possible surplus is to increase spending and provide tax expenditures.

By merely proposing his plan, as he outlined at his State of the Union Address, the President has assured a path of confrontation both with this Congress and within this Congress.

I believe that Congress and the President need to avoid such partisan politics and work together on reaching an agreement as to how best to utilize these surpluses.

Further, I believe the best option available to us is to agree on a realistic adjustment to the 1997 budget caps, do the best we can to respond to the needs of the American people within that limit, and use the balance of the surplus to pay down the national debt.

If we can't start paying down our national debt now, with the longest period of economic growth in the history of our Nation, with record low unemployment and low inflation, when will we ever be able to do it?

We have a moral obligation to do it now.

I am ashamed, and so should my colleagues be ashamed, that because of 30 years of irresponsible fiscal policies our national debt has increased 1,300 percent. My granddaughters, Mary Faith and Veronica, and my 2-week-old grandson, John, have each inherited a debt of nearly $21,000 because Members of Congress and our Presidents weren't willing to pay for the things they wanted, or, in the alternative, do without those items they could not afford.

I agree with General Accounting Office Comptroller General David Walker, who, in testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee said:

This generation has a stewardship responsibility to future generations to reduce the debt burden they inherit, to provide a strong foundation for future economic growth, and to ensure that future commitments are both adequate and affordable. Prudence requires making the tough choices today while the economy is healthy and the workforce is relatively large—before we are hit by the baby boom's demographic tidal wave.

Fortunately, that message is starting to be heard. Last month, Speaker of the House, Dennis Hastert, announced his goal of eliminating all federal debt held by the public by 2015. Not soon enough, but Speaker Hastert gets it. And I hope my colleagues on both sides of the aisle join us in supporting debt reduction as our primary fiscal goal because it is in the best interest of this nation.

In order to ensure fiscal discipline and prevent us from "backsliding" into the fiscal mess we've been in for the past 30-plus years, I am introducing today a Balanced Budget Amendment to the Constitution, or what I like to refer to as the "backbone budget amendment."

I believe it is the only guarantee that we will never return to the days of deficit spending and the accumulation of debt, and we should do it now. Now! The time is right, and those of my colleagues who have championed this in the past should seize upon this opportunity to join me in this effort, because, as they know, or should know, a Balanced Budget Amendment is the most effective method of keeping a handle on spending.

My proposal is a departure from previous proposals by stipulating that Social Security surpluses be exempt from deficit calculations. That is, a true balanced budget must be achieved without using off-budget Social Security surpluses to finance spending in other areas. A federal balanced budget constitutional amendment will help Congress and the President make the hard decisions because they will no longer be able to tap the Social Security surplus.

It is a simple matter of fact that without constitutional and statutory balanced budget provisions at the state and local level, many of our state and local governments would be in the same degree of debt as the federal government.

And let me just touch on my own personal experience, because I've had to deal with very real financial problems in my state. Without a charter provision and a constitutional requirement, it would have been virtually impossible for me to bring the City of Cleveland out of the default I inherited when I was Mayor, and to deal with Ohio's $1.5 billion deficit when I was Governor.

Think about it—if we had a Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment, and if we were to have a President who didn't want to make tough budget choices on his or her own, the Balanced Budget Constitutional Amendment would give the President the backbone he or she needs to make those tough choices.

And believe me, I've discovered after just 1 year in the Senate, this Congress needs the "Backbone Budget Amendment" to force us to make those tough choices. If we pass the amendment, I'm confident that three-fourths of our state legislatures would ratify it without question, because most of them are required by laws in their respective states to balance their budgets.

And there is one other thing we need to do now, and that is enact Senator DOMENICI'S biennial budget legislation.

I am a co-sponsor of this legislation because I believe it is an important tool to help use federal funds more efficiently and strengthen Congress' proper oversight role.

Right now, we spend far too much time debating the federal budget, particularly discretionary spending. Conversely, we don't devote nearly as much time as we should on oversight of the federal agencies because of the time and energy consumed by the budget resolution, budget reconciliation and the appropriations process.

Indeed, when he introduced his legislation last year, Senator DOMENICI pointed out in his statement that in 1996, 73% of the votes taken in the Senate that year were related to the budget—often the same subject is voted upon 3 or 4 times a year.

A biennial budget will help Congress and the Executive Branch avoid the annual, lengthy budget and appropriations process and allow us to increase our attention on the government oversight portion of our job.

As Chairman of the Subcommittee on Oversight of Government Management and Restructuring, I have noted that GAO report after GAO report sits on the shelf and no one does anything about them because no one has the time to conduct the follow-up.

And from career bureaucrats to Cabinet Secretaries, nearly everyone in the Executive branch knows that when they're asked to come up to the Hill for an oversight hearing, once it's over, it's over—rarely do they have to worry about any follow-up hearings because Congress just doesn't have the time.

Unfortunately, that reality can create problems that impact public safety or national security.

As a freshman Senator, I was shocked to learn when we had hearings this past year regarding Dr. Lee and the situation at the Los Alamos National Lab that for 20 years we've had a problem with security at the Department of Energy, and no one did anything about it. But GAO knew: they've released 31 major reports on nuclear-security problems at the Department since 1980. That's just incredible!

We need the time for oversight, and the 2-year budget cycle will make that possible, just like it did when I was Governor of Ohio.

There is an old saying, "prepare for tomorrow, today." The President and Congress must make a real commitment to fiscal responsibility, and if we need an example, all we have to do is emulate what most American families do when they have extra money. They don't go out and start spending wildly. They look to pay off their debts—their credit cards, their loans and their mortgages.

With our booming economy and with inflation and unemployment at historically low levels, there exists the best opportunity in a generation to pay down the national debt, reform and preserve Social Security and Medicare and ensure that our Nation meets its constitutional obligations. Such a legacy of fiscal responsibility would be the best possible gift we could give to our children and grandchildren, and to our Nation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print a copy of my legislation in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S.J. RES.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following article is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years after the date of its submission to the States for ratification:

"ARTICLE -

"SECTION 1. Total outlays for any fiscal year shall not exceed total receipts for that fiscal year, unless three-fifths of the whole number of each House of Congress shall provide by law for a specific excess of outlays over receipts by a rollcall vote.

"SECTION 2. Total receipts shall include all receipts of the United States Government except those derived from borrowing. Total outlays shall include all outlays of the United States Government except for those for repayment of debt principal.

"Section 3. Any surplus of receipts (including attributable interest) over outlays of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Funds shall not be counted for purposes of this article. Any deficit of receipts (including attributable interest) relative to outlays of the Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance and the Federal Disability Insurance Trust Funds shall be counted for purposes of this article, and must be completely offset by a surplus of all other receipts over all other outlays.

"Section 4. The limit on the debt of the "SECTION 4. The limit on the debt of the United States held by the public shall not be increased, unless three-fifths of the whole number of each House shall provide by law for such an increase by a rollcall vote.

"SECTION 5. Prior to each fiscal year, the President shall transmit to the Congress a proposed budget for the United States Government for that fiscal year, in which total outlays do not exceed total receipts.

"SECTION 6. No bill to increase revenue shall become law unless approved by a majority of the whole number of each House by a rollcall vote.

"Section 7. The Congress may waive the provisions of this article for any fiscal year in which a declaration of war is in effect. The provisions of this article may be waived for any fiscal year in which the United States is engaged in military conflict which causes an imminent and serious military threat to national security and is so declared by a joint resolution, adopted by a majority of the whole number of each House, which becomes law.

"SECTION 8. The Congress shall enforce and implement this article by appropriate legislation, which may rely on estimates of outlays and receipts.

"SECTION 9. This article shall take effect beginning with fiscal year 2002 or with the second fiscal year beginning after its ratification, whichever is later."

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 189

At the request of Mr. INOUYE, the name of the Senator from Minnesota (Mr. Grams) was added as a cosponsor of S. 189, a bill to restore the traditional day of observance of Memorial Day.

S. 510

At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the name of the Senator from Alabama (Mr. Shelby) was added as a cosponsor of S. 510, a bill to preserve the sovereignty of the United States over public lands and acquired lands owned by the United States, and to preserve State sovereignty and private property rights in non-Federal lands surrounding those public lands and acquired lands.

S. 660

At the request of Mr. BINGAMAN, the name of the Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 660, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide for coverage under part B of the Medicare program of medical nutrition therapy services furnished by registered dietitians and nutrition professionals.

S. 1045

At the request of Mr. L. CHAFEE, the name of the Senator from North Carolina (Mr. EDWARDS) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1045, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to impose an excise tax on persons who acquire structured settlement payments in factoring transactions , and for other purposes.

S. 1144

At the request of Mr. Voinovich, the name of the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. SMITH) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1144, a bill to provide increased flexibility in use of highway funding, and for other purposes.

S. 1163

At the request of Mr. Bennett, the names of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Cleland) and the Senator from Virginia (Mr. Warner) were added as cosponsors of S. 1163, a bill to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research and services with respect to lupus.

S. 1237

At the request of Mr. HUTCHINSON, the name of the Senator from Arkansas (Mrs. LINCOLN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1237, a bill to amend title 10, United States Code, to permit retired members of the Armed Forces who have a service-connected disability to receive military retired pay concurrently with veterans' disability compensation.

S. 1448

At the request of Mr. HUTCHINSON, the name of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. BOND) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1448, a bill to amend the Food Security Act of 1985 to authorize the annual enrollment of land in the wetlands reserve program, to extend the program through 2005, and for other purposes.

S. 1895

At the request of Mr. Breaux, the name of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. Landrieu) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1895, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to preserve and improve the Medicare program.

S. 1921

At the request of Mr. CAMPBELL, the names of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. ASHCROFT) and the Senator from New Hampshire (Mr. SMITH) were added as cosponsors of S. 1921, a bill to authorize the placement within the site of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial of a plaque to honor Vietnam veterans who died after their service in the Vietnam war, but as a direct result of that service

S. 1934

At the request of Mr. Dodd, the name of the Senator from Indiana (Mr. Bayh) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1934, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a tax credit for business-provided student education and training.

S. 2003

At the request of Mr. Johnson, the name of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. Landrieu) was added as a cosponsor of S. 2003, a bill to restore health care coverage to retired members of the uniformed services.

S. 2005

At the request of Mr. Burns, the names of the Senator from Maine (Ms.

SNOWE), the Senator from Maine (Ms. COLLINS), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. DEWINE), the Senator from Washington (Mr. GORTON), the Senator from Florida (Mr. MACK), the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. FRIST), and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. KYL) were added as cosponsors of S. 2005, a bill to repeal the modification of the installment method.

S. 2010

At the request of Mr. Helms, his name was added as a cosponsor of S. 2010, a bill to require the Federal Communications Commission to follow normal rulemaking procedures in establishing additional requirements for noncommercial educational television broadcasters.

S. 2013

At the request of Mr. McCain, the names of the Senator from Georgia (Mr. Coverdell), the Senator from Virginia (Mr. Robb), and the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. Hagel) were added as cosponsors of S. 2013, a bill to restore health care equity for medicare-eligible uniformed services retirees, and for other purposes.

S. CON. RES. 69

At the request of Ms. Snowe, the name of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. Landrieu) was added as a cosponsor of S. Con. Res. 69, a concurrent resolution requesting that the United States Postal Service issue a commemorative postal stamp honoring the 200th anniversary of the naval shipyard system.

S. RES. 128

At the request of Mr. Cochran, the names of the Senator from Utah (Mr. Hatch), the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. Landrieu), the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. Reed), and the Senator from Ohio (Mr. Voinovich) were added as cosponsors of S. Res. 128, a resolution designating March 2000, as "Arts Education Month."

S. RES. 248

At the request of Mr. Robb, the names of the Senator from Missouri (Mr. ASHCROFT), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. BRYAN), the Senator from Ohio (Mr. DEWINE), the Senator from Illinois (Mr. DURBIN), the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN), the Senator from Nebraska (Mr. HAGEL), the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. INHOFE), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEF-FORDS), the Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SSRBANES), and the Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER) were added as cosponsors of S. Res. 248, a resolution to designate the week of May 7, 2000, as "National Correctional Officers and Employees Week."

AMENDMENT NO. 2763

At the request of Mr. SCHUMER, the names of the Senator from Maine (Ms. SNOWE), the Senator from Nevada (Mr. REID), the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEFFORDS), and the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) were added as cosponsors of Amendment No. 2763 proposed to S. 625, a bill to amend title

11, United States Code, and for other purposes.

SENATE RESOLUTION 251—DESIGNATING MARCH 25, 2000, AS "GREEK INDEPENDENCE DAY: A NATIONAL DAY OF CELEBRATION OF GREEK AND AMERICAN DEMOCRACY"

Mr. SPECTER (for himself, Mr. Torricelli, Mr. Abraham, Mr. Biden, Mr. DeWine, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Harkin, Mr. Kennedy, Mr. Kohl, Ms. Mikulski, Mr. Robb, Mr. Roth, Mr. Thomas, Mr. Warner, Ms. Landrieu, Mr. Moynihan, Mr. Sarbanes, Mr. Lautenberg, Mr. Edwards, Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Murray, Mr. Durbin, Mr. Rockefeller, Mr. Smith of Oregon, Mr. Grassley, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Schumer, Mr. Reed, Mr. Levin, and Mr. Enzi) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S.RES. 251

Whereas the ancient Greeks developed the concept of democracy, in which the supreme power to govern was invested in the people:

Whereas the Founding Fathers of the United States of America drew heavily upon the political experience and philosophy of ancient Greece in forming our representative democracy:

Whereas the founders of the modern Greek state modeled their government after that of the United States in an effort to best imitate their ancient democracy;

Whereas Greece is one of the only 3 nations in the world, beyond the former British Empire, that has been allied with the United States in every major international conflict this century:

Whereas the heroism displayed in the historic World War II Battle of Crete epitomized Greece's sacrifice for freedom and democracy as it presented the Axis land war with its first major setback and set off a chain of events which significantly affected the outcome of World War II;

Whereas President Clinton, during his visit to Greece on November 20, 1999, referred to modern day Greece as "a beacon of democracy, a regional leader for stability, prosperity and freedom, helping to complete the democratic revolution that ancient Greece began:"

Whereas these and other ideals have forged a close bond between our 2 nations and their neonles:

Whereas March 25, 2000, marks the 179th anniversary of the beginning of the revolution which freed the Greek people from the Ottoman Empire: and

Whereas it is proper and desirable to celebrate with the Greek people and to reaffirm the democratic principles from which our 2 great nations were born: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate-

(1) designates March 25, 2000, as "Greek Independence Day: A National Day of Celebration of Greek and American Democracy"; and

(2) requests the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, today I am pleased to submit a resolution along with 25 of my colleagues to designate March 25, 2000, as "Greek Independence Day: A Celebration of Greek and American Democracy."

One hundred and seventy-nine years ago, the Greeks began the revolution that would free them from the Ottoman Empire and return Greece to its democratic heritage. It was, of course, the ancient Greeks who developed the concept of democracy in which the supreme power to govern was vested in the people. Our Founding Fathers drew heavily upon the political and philosophical experience of ancient Greece in forming our representative democracy. Thomas Jefferson proclaimed that, "to the ancient Greeks * * * we are all indebted for the light which led ourselves out of Gothic darkness." It is fitting, then, that we should recognize the anniversary of the beginning of their efforts to return to that democratic tradition.

The democratic form of government is only one of the most obvious of the many benefits we have gained from the Greek people. The ancient Greeks contributed a great deal to the modern world, particularly to the United States of America, in the areas of art, philosophy, science and law. Today, Greek-Americans continue to enrich our culture and make valuable contributions to American society, business, and government.

It is my hope that strong support for this resolution in the Senate will serve as a clear goodwill gesture to the people of Greece with whom we have enjoyed such a close bond throughout history. Similar resolutions have been signed into law each of the past several years, with overwhelming support in both the House of Representatives and the Senate. Accordingly, I urge my Senate colleagues to join me in supporting this important resolution.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the resolution submitted by Senator Specter designating March 25, 2000 as Greek Independence Day. The Greek-American community has made significant contributions to the United States. It is in honor of those achievements that we recognize Greek Independence Day.

The ancient Greeks conceived the very notion of democracy when they placed the power to govern in the hands of the people. Our founding fathers relied on the political and philosophical experiences of ancient Greece to create the government we have today. As a result, America's close relationship with Greece is long and historic. I believe that James Monroe best expressed America's feelings toward Greece when he said, "The mention of Greece fills the mind with the most exalted sentiments and arouses in our bosoms the best feeling of which our nature is susceptible."

As Greece fought for its independence in the 1820s, the American Revolution became a driving ideal. In fact, Greek intellectuals translated our own Declaration of Independence to use as their statement of freedom. By the end of World War II, Greece was one of our most important allies in the region as it fought to stem the Communist tide across Europe. In 1953, President Dwight D. Eisenhower appropriately noted this effort when he said, "... Greece asked no favor except the opportunity to stand for the rights which it believed, and it gave to the world an example of battle, a battle that thrilled the hearts of all free men and free women everywhere."

Today, we know that Greece is one of only three nations in the world which has allied itself with the United States in every major international conflict this century. Through immigration, we have grown even closer. During the early 1900s, one out of every four Greek males between the ages of 15 and 45 emigrated to the United States. Greek-Americans have the highest median educational attainment among all American ethnic nationalities, and they are now a successful and integral part of this country.

The relationship between Greece and America is a unique one which has survived the test of war and the looming threat of Communism. We owe a great deal to Greece, and to its people who have chosen to make America their home. Greek civilization touches our lives as Americans and enhances the cultural existence of this great nation. I hope my colleagues will join me in expressing our gratitude to Greece and all Greek-Americans for the role they have played in building this country.

SENATE RESOLUTION 252—EX-PRESSING THE SENSE OF THE SENATE THAT REBIYA KADEER, HER FAMILY MEMBER AND BUSI-NESS ASSOCIATE, SHOULD BE RELEASED BY THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Mr. WELLSTONE submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations:

S. Res. 252

Whereas members of the Uighur minority population in Xinjiang, China, are subject to ongoing repression and violations of their internationally recognized rights of free expression, association, and belief;

Whereas on August 11, 1999, the Government of the People's Republic of China arbitrarily detained Rebiya Kadeer, a prominent and respected Uighur businesswoman well-known in the United States;

Whereas from 1993 to 1998, Ms. Kadeer was an elected member of the Provincial People's Political Consultative Conference in Xinjiang;

Whereas in 1995, Ms. Kadeer was a delegate to the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Warran in Pailings ference on Women in Beijing;

Whereas the police have detained Ms.
Kadeer previously and kept her under close surveillance, threatening her because of the alleged separatist activities of her husband, who came to the United States in 1996 and was granted political asylum after publishing articles critical of the Chinese Government:

Whereas on September 2, 1999, Chinese authorities formally charged Ms. Kadeer with "illegally offering state secrets across the border", and she is currently detained in Urumqi, the capital of Xinjiang;

Whereas Ms. Kadeer's son, Ablikim Abdyirim, and her secretary, Kahriman Abdukirim, were also arbitrarily detained by Chinese security forces in August 1999 in Urumqi, without any justification or evidence of their involvement in criminal activities of any kind; and tivities of any kind; and Whereas on November 20, 1999, Ablikim Abdyirim was sent for 2 years to the Wulabai Reeducation Through Labor School, without charge or judicial review, in clear violation of international human rights standards, and Kahriman Abdukirim received a 3-year sentence in the same facility: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the President should express to the representatives of the Government of the People's Republic of China the sense of the Senate that Ms. Kadeer, her family members and business associate, should be immediately and unconditionally released.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, China's terrible treatment of ethnic minority Uighurs, a Muslim community in the northwestern province of Xinjiang, has not received the same level of international attention as that of the Tibetans. The Uighurs are also subject to ongoing repression and violations of their internationally recognized rights of free expression, association and belief. The Chinese government is cracking down on a separatist movement in Xinjiang as part of its overall strategy of maintaining "staat all costs. According to bility" human rights organizations such as Amnesty International and Human Rights Watch, over the past year China has used draconian measures including public sentencing rallies, long prison terms, and—alarmingly—a rising number of executions of suspected "splittists."

In an apparent attempt to stop the flow of information overseas about this crackdown, Chinese security officials arbitrarily detained a prominent Uighur businesswoman, Ms. Rebiya Kadeer, this past August in Urumqi, the capital of Xinjiang. Her husband is a U.S. resident who broadcasts on Radio Free Asia and the Voice of America, championing the cause of his people.

For years, Ms. Kadeer has been praised by the Chinese government for her efforts to promote development in Xinjiang, including a project helping Uighur women develop their own businesses. She has also been praised in the Wall Street Journal for her business savvy. She owns a department store in Urumqi as well as a profitable trading company.

But now she has been put out of business, is being held in prison awaiting trial, charged last September with "illegally offering state secrets across the border." Even worse, her son and her secretary were also detained and have already been sent to a labor camp. If Ms. Kadeer is convicted, she could be sent to prison for many years.

Ms. Kadeer's case demonstrates that even business people in China are not safe from the arbitrary use of state power. As China tries to become a member of the World Trade Organization, this reality is crucial to bear in mind—both for Chinese and foreign in-

I urge my colleagues to call on the President to seek the immediate, unconditional release of Ms. Kadeer, her son, and secretary. Today I offer a sense of the Senate resolution urging their release, and hope it can be considered quickly and adopted unanimously by this body.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEES TO MEET

COMMITTEE ON ARMED SERVICES

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Armed Services be authorized to meet at 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday, February 2, 2000, in open session, to receive testimony on the situation in Bosnia and Kosovo.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON FINANCE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the Senate Committee on Finance be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on February 2, 2000 at 10:00 a.m. to hear testimony regarding the status of Internal Revenue Service Reform.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

COMMITTEE ON HEALTH, EDUCATION, LABOR, AND PENSIONS

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, Subcommittee on Public Health, be authorized to meet for a hearing on "Gene Therapy: Promoting Patient Safety" during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, February 2, 2000, at 9:30 a.m.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Intelligence be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, February 2, 2000 at 10:00 a.m. To hold an open hearing on intelligence matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

SELECT COMMITTEE ON INTELLIGENCE

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President I ask unanimous consent that the Select Committee on Intelligence be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Wednesday, February 2, 2000 at 2:00 p.m. To hold an closed hearing on intelligence matters.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

HONORING JIM ATKINSON

• Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to honor a true Montana hero—Jim Atkinson. His death, after a long battle with leukemia last December, was a great loss to me personally and to the State of Montana.

You know, we always talk about how important education is. Especially here in Congress, we talk about how children are the future and that we need to invest in that future, and that's true. But Jim Atkinson did more than just talk about education; he lived it. He was on the front lines every day, as a principal at Charlo Elementary and later as the vice president of the Montana Association of Elementary and Middle School Principals.

As an Administrator in the Montana school system, Jim was instrumental in the effort to modernize our State's schools. He realized quickly how important technology would be to students, and set up a computer lab for the Charlo school. Without people like Jim all our talk about education wouldn't amount to anything. His foresight and dedication to education in Montana made him a true hero. But there was more to Jim than just his job.

Originally a native of Abington, PA, it was the outdoors and the land that brought Jim to Montana. He was an accomplished mountain climber and fly fisherman. Montana's rugged peaks and blue ribbon trout streams had a hold on Jim's soul. And Jim was a true family man. He is survived by his wife, Luan, and his two sons, Sam and Tyson.

Mr. President, Jim was a young man. He was only forty-eight at the time of his death. He spent his life serving his community, educating children, raising his family and enjoying the land of our majestic State. Many men would be lucky to accomplish this much in a hundred years. I expect Jim's legacy will last much longer than that.

RECOGNITION OF MATTHEW E. SCHLIMME

• Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, across America, buildings are named for great Americans and fallen heroes so that the living might memorialize the legacy of those who have died. Petty Officer 3rd Class Matthew E. Schlimme was just such an American. He was an extraordinary hero in service to his nation and fellow man.

Raised on a farm in Southeast Missouri, Matthew knew the value of hard work, the necessity for respect and consideration of others, and the need to overcome obstacles. One such obstacle he had from an early age was a fear of the water. Not only did Matthew join the U.S. Coast Guard to overcome his fear, but in doing so he served his country and saved a life.

On February 12, 1997, Officer Schlimme and two other Coast Guardsmen were thrown overboard in 24-foot seas while attempting to rescue a sailboat. Before going overboard, Schlimme was able to buckle in Seaman Apprentice Benjamin Wingo. Mr. Wingo was the sole survivor. Officer Schlimme lost his life, but gained the thanks of a nation.

Mr. Schlimme's parents, Larry and Haroletta Schlimme, of Burfordville, Missouri, were present at the January 27, 2000, dedication of the Matthew E. Schlimme Industrial Facility in St. Louis. The building will provide a production site for navigation equipment and will house the St. Louis Electronic Support Detachment.

Mr. and Mrs. Schlimme can be proud of their son's bravery and courage. His act of heroism has been remembered in the hearts of many Missourians. All of Missouri is deeply grateful to Officer Schlimme for his bravery and ultimate sacrifice. ●

MAESTRO YURI TEMIRKANOV

• Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I am most pleased to join with the citizens of Maryland, Governor Parris Glendening, and other colleagues in government in welcoming Maestro Yuri Temirkanov, one of the most talented and gifted conductors of our time, as the new Music Director of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.

Maestro Temirkanov's inspired energy, imagination, and popularity, coupled with the renowned excellence and stellar reputation of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, promises Marylanders and the nation an unprecedented artistic combination. As the eleventh Music Director in the Orches-83-vear history, Maestro Temirkanov will oversee all artistic programming of the BSO, conduct twelve subscription concerts, the opening fundraising gala, any recordings, and will lead tours as well.

The Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, through its critically-acclaimed concert tours, Grammy Award-winning recordings, and cutting-edge concert formats, has earned deserved respect in the world of classical music. The addition of Maestro Temirkanov takes the BSO to the highest echelon of musical excellence and achievement. A recent article from the Baltimore Sun included the following quote from Mikhail Baryshnikov:

Baltimore audiences can look forward to special excitement, because Yuri Temirkanov is one of the truly inspired maestros of today.

Mr. President, as a strong supporter of the arts, and on behalf of the citizens of Maryland, I take great pleasure in welcoming Maestro Temirkanov to the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra and ask that recent articles from the Baltimore Sun, Baltimore Magazine, and the Washington Post, be printed in the RECORD.

The articles follow:

[From the Baltimore Sun, Jan. 21, 2000] Temirkanov Powerful in BSO Debut

(By Terry Teachout)

So how does a brand-new music director go about making a really big impression at his inaugural concert?

Yuri Temirkanov, who took the helm of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra last night, did it by detonating a performing of Gustav Mahler's 90-minute-long "Resurrection" Symphony at Joseph Meyerhoff Symphony Hall, aided and abetted by soprano Janice Chandler, mezzo-soprano Nancy Maultsby and the Baltimore Symphony Chorus. Short of inviting John Waters to set off nuclear weapons at midnight in the Chesapeake Bay, you can't get much bigger than that.

The 61-year-old Temirkanov is not a household name outside his native Russia, where he took over the legendary St. Petersburg Philharmonic in 1968 (back when it was the Lenigrad Philharmonic) and led it by all accounts with great distinction.

But he has already made waves in Baltimore. Several inches of snow didn't stop local music lovers from turning out in force to hear his official debut, and Mayor Martin O'Malley was on hand to declare him an honorary citizen of the city, expressing the hope that "what is now great will become even greater."

Though he's a certified performer, the major is hardly a full-fledged music critic. Still, I think he's onto something. Temirkanov gave us a "Resurrection" that was weighty, emphatic, deliberate and eloquent, with a resplendent finale full of great sunbursts of sound. What's more, the BSO has very clearly taken to him—with good reason. He is a powerful musical communicator with something strongly individual to say. Furthermore, it's clear that he has the kind of personality that makes orchestras long to play their best.

To be sure, orchestras almost always play their best when Mahler is on the program. He has become so popular in recent decades that it is hard to remember a time when he was ever anything else. Yet in his own time and for long afterward, the extreme emotional weather of his music struck most concertgoers as peculiar at best, neurotic at worst. Though his proteges, Bruno Walter and Otto Klemperer among them, resolutely insisted on programming and recording his symphonies, he was widely thought to be little more than a virtuoso conductor who composed on the side: in Ralph Vaughan Williams' wrong-headed but witty summing up, his years of podium experience had turned him into "a tolerable imitation of a composer.'

We know better now, but do we really know Mahler? And are his violent passions likely to wear well in our icy age of Irony Lite? Certainly anyone who sees him as a musical special-effects man, or his colossal symphonies as turn-of-the-century equivalents of such movies as "Independence Day," is missing the point. Mahler was nothing if not serious, especially about spiritual matters. Above all, he was (in Walter's apt phrase) "a God-seeker," and his search was fraught with angst.

When rehearsing the "Resurrection" Symphony for his 1907 farewell concert with the Vienna Philharmonic, he went so far as to confess to that hard-boiled bunch of conductor-haters that it was a musical portrayal of "the wrestling of Jacob with the Angel, and Jacob's cry to the Angel: 'I will not let thee go except thou bless me.'" Whatever else that is, it isn't cool.

If the Second Symphony, completed in 1894, is a supreme masterpiece of religious art, it is one whose essential character is as much theatrical—even operatic—as it is spiritual. The expansive first movement was conceived as a free-standing symphonic poem called "Todtenfeier" (Funeral Rites), and the four sharply contrasting movements that follow describe a journey from fathomless despair to the ecstatic deliverance of the Last Judgment.

Like Beethoven in his Ninth Symphony, Mahler ups the expressive ante by introducing vocal soloists and a chorus, who sing of the world's end and the heavenly life to come: "All that has perished must rise again! Cease from trembling! Prepare to live!"

As it happens, the BSO is scarcely in need of resurrection. In his 13 years at the orchestra's helm, David Zinman deprovincialized what had long been perceived in the music business as a stodgy second-tier ensemble and turned it into one of America's strongest orchestras.

Among countless other good things, he taught the BSO how to play Mahler's demanding music. His 1995 performance of the Third Symphony is one of the happiest and most vivid memories of my concert-going life. In all the hoopla surrounding Temirkanov's arrival, it's worth remembering that what happened last night would not have been possible had it not been for Zinman's superb stewardship.

But Temirkanov is very much his own man, and he has had a striking effect on the sound of the BSO. Zinman was a quirky, intelligent modernist; Termirkanov is a highoctane romantic of the old school. A slight man who conducts without a baton, he makes large but straightforward gestures with his startlingly long and supple arms; he likes a dark, full sound, built from the basses up, and he favors plenty of portamento, the great swooping string slides that are so stylish in Mahler.

He doesn't value precision for its own sake—the first movement was expansive rather than tightly controlled, not always to its best advantage—but he knows how to rise to an expressive occasion, and the great choral finale was beautifully controlled and superbly passionate.

On the whole, this was a rather slow performance, more like Leonard Bernstein than Klemperer, and my taste runs to a Mahler that is tauter and more sardonic. Yet there a more than one way to make magic, and Temirkanov's interpretation seemed to me indelible. Indeed, the finale brought tears to my eyes, and I doubt I was alone.

The soloists, not surprisingly, were excellent. Janice Chandler was bright and pure, Nancy Maultsby ripe-voiced and warm. The Baltimore Symphony Chorus did itself proud and deserved its share of the 12-minute standing ovation at evening's end.

Aside from everything else, last night's concert (which will be repeated tonight at 8 p.m. and tomorrow at 11 a.m.) and next week's follow-up, an all-French program featuring pianist Leon Fleisher, are obviously designed to send out a subliminal message about the BSO's new boss. Most Russian conductors are perceived in the West as one-trick ponies, and Temirkanov is no exception: Of his 26 recordings, all but two are of Russian music.

To kick off his first season with Mahler, Debussy and Ravel is thus to issue a bold declaration of independence from repertoire stereotypes, which bodes well for a conductor who will be rightly expected to play the field. Judging by last night's performance, I'd say he's off to a terrific start. I plan to return next week to hear the second chapter in what promises to be a fascinating musical story. You come, too.

[From the Baltimore Magazine, Sept. 1999]
FROM RUSSIA, WITH LOVE

(By Max Weiss)

Yuri Temirkanov cannot tell a joke. He starts to tell it—in Russian, of course—and then halfway through, he starts to laugh. And then you start to laugh, because even though you haven't the faintest clue what he's saying, when Temirkanov laughs, it's impossible not to laugh with him. By the time he spits out the punchline, tears are streaming down his face; he's laughing this joyous, exuberant, completely guileless guffaw. And pretty soon, tears are streaming down your face even though his interpreter—the inscrutable Mariana Stokes—has barely started translating. At this point, the joke is completely irrelevant.

But, just for the record, Temirkanov favors viola jokes. (Violas, in case you didn't know, are the Rodney Dangerfield of the orchestra.) And here's the first (of many) viola jokes Temirkanov tells:

How do you teach a viola player to play staccato?

You write out a whole note and tell him it's a solo.

(Okay, so maybe it's funnier in Russian.) When David Zinman announced his retirement as music director of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra two years ago, you could feel the panic in the music community. It was Zinman who had put the BSO on the map—made it artistically viable, world-renowned, even cutting edge. And it was Zinman who had really connected to Baltimore audiences with his regular-guy, artistas-mensch persona. How could we possible replace him?

Enter Yuri Temirkanov.

It's not just that the 59-year-old Temirkanov—the music director of the St. Petersburg Philharmonic Orchestra and the former principal conductor of the Royal Philharmonic in London—is widely considered one of the most prodigiously talented conductors alive. It's also that Temirkanov is so completely loyable.

There are some people who exude empathy, whose every facial expression, gesture, vocal inflection conveys an emotion. That's inflection conveys an emotion. Temirkanov. You can see this remarkable body language when he conducts. As he dances on the podium, waving his arms (he doesn't use a baton), he looks like he's playing an elaborate game of charades. Here he's petting a horse. Here he's churning butter. Here he's tinkling at an imaginary piano in the air. And yet every gesture is eminently clear The horse petting thing: That's Temirkanov trying to get the brass to play with a more emphatic rhythm. The butter churning, that's urging for a more blended, sweeping sound. The tinkling in the air, that's to suggest the tossed-off nature of a woodwind arpeggio.

"He's very clear with what he wants," says Phillip Kolker, the orchestra's principle bassoonist. "He doesn't speak much, but he has a very effective way of communicating."

Because of his emotional expressiveness—coupled with his puckish good looks (he suggests a smaller, older Kenneth Branaugh), his romantic sensibilities (he has a penchant for lush interpretations of Beethoven and Shostakovich), and his insouciant charm (at a spring press conference, reporters hung delightedly on his every word)—Temirkanov is already a big hit with Baltimore fans.

When he performed his first concert series as BSO music director last March, the crowds were simply ecstatic. It was as if the audience wanted to embrace Temirkanov with a giant bear hug of applause and appreciation.

Temirkanov is humbled by this warm response—"it's incredibly touching," he says—but it's a safe bet that he wasn't happy with any of his first three performances.

"I never had a concert where I said to myself, 'Ahhh, that was really something!'" he explains, munching on a cannoli at Vaccaro's Italian pastry cafe in Little Italy. "When I play the concert, I know exactly what has gone wrong. And when people say, 'Wonderful! Wonderful!' I listen to the compliments with pleasure. But I know it wasn't that good."

He equates the praise of concertgoers with well-wishers at a funeral. Then he giggles at the thought: "Have you ever heard a bad word at a funeral? If only the people could hear what is said about them! No one felt this so strongly when they were alive!"

To Temirkanov, a true artist is never satisfied with his work. "It will mean that I'm beginning to die as an artist," he says.

Striving to be a great artist is the focal point of Temirkanov's life. Sure, he has hobbies—fishing, cartoon-drawing (he can whip off a giant-schnozzed, Hirschfield-like caricature of himself in 30 seconds flat). And of course he has family: His son plays violin with the St. Petersburg Philharmonic Orchestra, and his beloved wife died in 1997. But it's clear that music shuts out most other earthly concerns. As such, he is notorious for eschewing such modern trappings as computers and televisions and cars.

Once, ill-advisedly, the trusty Marina Stokes—who has been with the maestro as an assistant and friend for over 15 years—tried to teach Temirkanov to drive. "It was a disaster," she says with thinly

"It was a disaster," she says with thinly concealed mirth. "He drove over a flower bed"

"You see!" laughs Temirkanov. "Even my left foot is romantic! I don't drive into cars. I drive into flower beds."

[From The Washington Post, Jan. 21, 2000] BALTIMORE SYMPHONY'S MAN OF SUBSTANCE (By Philip Kennicott)

The solid and sensible Baltimore Symphony Orchestra, which puts its decidedly working-man's city on the cultural map, has an aristocrat at its head. Yuri Temirkanov, the eminent and respected Russian conductor, gave his inaugural concert as the BSO's music director last night. If his tenure builds on the strengths of this performance, the Temirkanov years could be legendary.

Baltimore is a lucky city. Fifteen years ago, when the Cold War was still in progress, the idea that one of the Soviet Union's foremost and distinguished artists would take the head artistic job at the BSO was inconceivable. Temirkanov was the chief of Leningrad's Kirov Opera, and within a few years, would take the helm of the country's most respected orchestra, the St. Petersburg Philharmonic. He was a blue-blood musician, if not in the traditional sense, in the artistic sense, a man of wide culture, immense influence and a reputation for artistic and personal integrity. He could afford to take risks that would have sunk a lesser figure.

Then the Cold War ended, and with it the subsidies that made the Soviet musical scene flourish. The St. Petersburg Philharmonic, which he still leads, maintains its quality but is threatened by dwindling audiences and dwindling resources. To keep it afloat, Temirkanov must tour the orchestra, and when he does, foreign audiences want him to bring Russian repertoire—Tchaikovsky, Shostakovich, Prokofiev.

But Temirkanov doesn't want to be pigeonholed. One might have expected that the world's very best orchestras would offer one of the finest living conductors the chance to conduct Elgar and Mahler; yet Baltimore secured him, and now a very good orchestra has a very great conductor. Early signs suggest that both will flourish.

Temirkanov chose Mahler's Symphony No. 2 for his first official concert as music direc-Like Beethoven's Symphony No. 9, which also does service for large, ceremonial occasions, Mahler's Second is best heard infrequently; even for listeners who love it beyond reason, it takes discipline to keep its brutality raw and its sentimentality delicate and unself-conscious. Although it lasts at least an hour and a half, it is perhaps Mahler's most succinct statement: Everything that he does before and after this symphony is here in germ, the funeral marches, the bucolic alpine sounds, the despair of death and the frisson of hope that perhaps this world is not wrought from cold, insensible iron.

The new music director conducts Mahler with little wasted motion. In this often violent and saturnine work, Temirkanov called for only those cataclysms necessary to make the composer's point. He is a purist on the podium, attending diligently if not slavishly to the score, taking the spare theatrical liberty that proves he is confident of the audience's attention. He will extend a pause to the breaking point or allow the sound of offstage horns to die into protracted silences, but these exceptional moments only underscore his judicious, masonry approach.

The excitement of the performance was the excitement of comprehension. One heard Mahler's effort to build a new psychology for the orchestra while remaining somewhat distant from the music's bellicose and sloppy extremes. It made Mahler unfold the way Beethoven unfolds, though at a much more geological pace.

This runs counter to misguided expectations about how Russian-trained conductors conduct, and how Mahler is supposed to be played. Temirkanov's interpretation was not a cinematically sweeping approach, nor an overly personal one. But it invited serious listening, appreciation of the orchestra's manifold strengths and respect for the conductor's attention to balance.

Temirkanov was rewarded by his new orchestra with ferocious attention. String sounds were clear and incisive, woodwind playing precise and balanced, horns and trumpets warm and blended. Chaos was always intentional, never an unfortunate accident. Soprano Janice Chandler and mezzo-soprano Nancy Maultsby were well chosen, and used as elements within the musical construct rather than soloists dominating it. The BSO chorus sang its opening whisper of resurrection—"Auferstehen"—with a sound familiar from Robert Shaw, a fully fleshed whisper, at the limit of a large chorus's ability to sing a shade above silence.

Baltimore and the orchestra made the evening an event. Outside the Meyerhoff Symphony Hall, a searchlight cut laserlike swaths through the cold night sky. Mayor Martin O'Malley gave the new conductor honorary Baltimore citizenship. But musical protocol and political protocol don't mix well: Mahler's monumental symphony was the point of the evening, and Temirkanov seemed uncomfortable receiving his first huge ovation before having conducted a note. But that discomfort represents the strengths this cultured, dignified and exceptional conductor will bring to the orchestra: a style long on substance and refreshingly free of empty gestures and self-aggrandizement.●

MEMORIAL OF MRS. JEAN MACARTHUR

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the passing of a wonderful woman and a great American. On the 21st of January, at the age of 101, Mrs. Jean MacArthur passed away at Lenox Hill Hospital in New York.

In 1988, President Reagan recognized her contribution to America by presenting her the Presidential Medal of Freedom. As you know, the Medal of Freedom is the highest award our country can give to a civilian. The citation for the award recognized that "Jean MacArthur has witnessed the great cataclysms of our time, survived war and peace, conquered tragedy and known triumph." President Reagan also referred to her as "a shining example, a woman of substance and character, a loyal wife and mother, and like her General, a patriot."

The General and Mrs. MacArthur were married in 1937. Mrs. MacArthur remained devoted to her husband until his death in 1964. Her devotion to him was not only emotional, but involved a great deal of physical sacrifice. You see, Mr. President, Mrs. MacArthur lived with the General in Manila until they were forced to retreat to Corregidor by the Japanese. While on Corregidor, she endured daily air attacks while raising their 4 year old son, Arthur. Furthermore, when it was obvious the Japanese would take the Philippines, the president of the Philippines offered passage for her and her son to Australia. She replied: "We have drunk from the same cup; we three shall stay together." She then continued to stay with her husband in the field until General MacArthur finally accepted the surrender of the Japanese in Japan.

After the death of General Mac-Arthur, Mrs. MacArthur lived out her life in New York where she remained active in philanthropic activities. She even served as the honorary chairman of the MacArthur Foundation, which was created in honor of her husband.

The spouses of our Americans in uniform seldom receive the recognition they deserve for their contribution to the valor, patriotism, and loyalty of our fighting forces. Her contribution to America cannot be quantified, but it must not be forgotten. It's no wonder that General MacArthur often introduced her as "my finest soldier."

Mr. President, I ask my colleagues to join me today in paying tribute to this outstanding woman and her sterling contribution to America.

TRIBUTE TO THOMASINA "TOMMY" ROGERS

• Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate the Administration on the selection of Thomasina "Tommy" Rogers, a constituent and friend, to serve as the Chairman of the Occupational Safety and Health Review Commission. Ms. Rogers was confirmed by the U.S. Senate and has served on the Commission since November 1998. On June 4, President Clinton designated her Chairman.

Ms. Rogers, a resident of Upper Marlboro, MD, has held a number of high ranking positions in the federal government, both as a career civil servant and as a political appointee. She entered the Senior Executive Service in 1987. At the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, she served as Legal Counsel where she received numerous awards for exemplary performance. She was later nominated and confirmed to chair the Administrative Conference where she served until 1995.

Ms. Rogers received a law degree from Columbia University and an undergraduate degree in journalism from Northwestern University. She has served on the Boards of Directors of Children's National Medical Center in Washington D.C. and the American Arbitration Association since 1995.

Ms. Rogers is the first woman to be designated Chairman and the first African American to serve as a member of the Commission. She is married to another outstanding Marylander, and friend, Gregory Gill. They have a daughter, Cleo.

I want to commend the Administration for it's excellent choice and look forward to Ms. Rogers' tenure as Chairman ●

RELIGIOUS LEADERS ON RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT IN SOUTHEASTERN EUROPE

• Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, the World Conference on Religion and Peace (WCRP) is an organization that is dedicated to promoting cooperation among the religions of the world on behalf of peace while maintaining respect for religious differences.

Since its founding in 1970, the WCRP has become a genuinely global movement with over 30 national chapters and members in over 100 countries.

Two months ago, in Amman, the capital city of Jordan, the WCRP held its 7th World Assembly, which brought together senior leaders of many of the major religions of the world as well as their civil and political counterparts.

The Assembly was held on November 26 and 27, 1999, under the patronage of King Abdullah II and the chairmanship of Prince El Hassan bin Talal, and was attended by some 1,300 delegates from 68 countries

I note that among the participants in the Amman Assembly was our distinguished former colleague, a Member from Indiana for 22 years of the House of Representatives, where he was Majority Whip, and is now President Emeritus of New York University, Dr. John Brademas.

Dr. Brademas, who is also Chairman of the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), presided at a discussion in Amman on "The Shape of the Future as a Challenge to Religion."

Mr. President, the Assembly also convened a "Forum of South Eastern European Religious Leaders" to promote inter-religious cooperation for reconciliation, reconstruction and development in the region. Representatives from more than 25 different religious communities in 10 countries from South Eastern Europe participated in the forum.

I am pleased to note that the person who organized and chaired this forum, James Cairns, WCRP Project Director, South Eastern Europe, Sarajevo, lived several years in Elkhart, Indiana, where his father was a Presbyterian Church pastor.

As the Secretary-General of WCRP, Dr. William F. Vendley, observed, "This unprecedented gathering of religious leaders from South Eastern Europe will initiate a process of contact and a dialogue among the religious communities both within specific states and throughout the region to develop concrete inter-religious cooperation"

Mr. President, together this group of leaders of several faiths, drawing on their diverse traditions and working together, produced a statement calling for the promotion of reconciliation, democracy and the peaceful development of South Eastern Europe, and committing themselves to opening dialogue among their communities.

Mr. President, because of the great importance of the events in this troubled part of the world and the significant role of religious leadership in South Eastern Europe, I ask to have the statement printed in the RECORD.

The statement follows:

STATEMENT OF RELIGIOUS LEADERS ON RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT IN SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

As leaders and responsible representatives of religious communities from South Eastern Europe we have gathered at this Forum in Amman Jordan on 26–27 November 1999, in the context of the Seventh World Assembly of the World Conference on Religion and Peace, to discuss the current situation in our region and to identify how our communities can work together to promote reconstruction and development both within our respective states and throughout the region as a whole.

As religious people, we must affirm that in each of our traditions human life is sacred. Any violation of the rights of any person is not acceptable and must be condemned. Our religious traditions all seek to promote fullness of life through peace, justice, mercy and love.

CONFLICT IN SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

Sadly, our recent experience in South Eastern Europe has been filed with conflict that has denied these to many people. After the fall of communism, our region has suffered through unrest and conflict. These conflicts have rekindled old prejudices and created mutual distrust and division among peoples. We regret that key actors in the international community lacked the vision, commitment and preventive strategies to prevent these catastrophes. Even countries that have escaped the violence that has afflicted the states of the former Yugoslavia have faced serious social crises that have created considerable instability in their societies.

We are proud of the role that our religions have played in the history, culture and traditions of the nations and peoples of our region. Our religious identities have been and will continue to be an essential part of who we are as believers and as people. But, we are also aware that this close identity between religious and national communities has been misused by those in positions of influence and power. Too often, within our ethnic and religious c0ommunities there have been efforts to portray others as the enemy and a danger to the safety of our own community. We must resist and overcome such stereotyping to ensure that our heritage can serve to build strong futures for all people and not simply be used to perpetuate the myth that security comes only in ethnically pure states.

JUSTICE AND FORGIVENESS

We regret and mourn the destruction and death of so many innocent victims in the conflicts that have raged through the region, as well as the destruction of religious objects in all our communities. We are challenged to ask for forgiveness and seek reconciliation across communities, not because religious communities are responsible for these conflicts, but because religion must set the example for the rest of the society to follow. We acknowledge that as members of communities we cannot escape a sense of collective shame for what has occurred, but we must preserve the principle of individual guilt and responsibility for acts and atrocities committed during these conflicts, particularly those leaders who were instrumental in creating these crises. The deep principle of justice in each of our traditions requires that those responsible be judged based on international standards of law without guilt being assigned to entire communities. Punishing entire populations simply multiplies injustices and the suffering of the innocent.

THE BOLE OF CIVIL SOCIETY

As we look to the future, religious communities can and must play a central role in building strong civil society throughout the region. Political leaders and institutions have a primary role and responsibility for building strong states, but material reconstruction and development can be long lasting only with a corresponding moral and social reconstruction and development. Religious communities must be decisive leaders in a process of promoting truth, justice and reconciliation in their societies so that all persons and groups can have their rights respected and protected throughout the region. In this regard, we must develop a new concept of security. Security cannot be based solely on armaments and military strength, but must be based on strong and open societies, in which all are protected and cared for and in which conflicts are resolved through dialogue and negotiation rather than through violence. Therefore, we urge the governments in our region to reduce their militaries and armaments and to work to reduce the presence of arms among their populations.

As religious leaders and representatives from the region, we are encouraged by the efforts of the international community to develop the Stability Pact of Reconstruction and Development in South Eastern Europe. We must remind both international authorities and our own national leaders, however, that the welfare of human beings individually and as groups must remain at the center of such efforts. Without this human dimension no amount of good works will provide true security, peace and prosperity.

In this regard, we express our solidarity with the brothers and sisters in each of our faith communities in Yugoslavia. Both for stability and successful regional integration it is essential for Yugoslavia to be part of the Stability Pact process as soon as possible. In the meantime, however, humanitarian assistance must not be denied to those in need and we urge the international community to allow basic foodstuffs, medicines, and heating fuel to be provided to the people of that country without delay.

A COMMON CALL TO THE GOVERNMENTS OF SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

Almost all of our communities are emerging from a communist period that severely marginalized religion in society. Together we seek to promote a strong civil society and the essential role of religious communities in that process, but we cannot accomplish this goal alone. Therefore, we call on civil authorities at the local, state, regional and international level:

To promote and actively practice democracy, human rights, and the rule of law, with particular protection for minority groups, in all states in the region.

To respect and establish the formal separation of political and religious institutions so that each can freely perform its own tasks and respect the functions of the other.

To regard religious communities, which possess both infrastructure and expertise in providing social services to the people and which have an essential role in protecting the social security of all people, as legitimate partners in the work of reconstruction and development.

To provide support for the development of strong civil society through adopting appropriate laws, financial regulations, and other policies that will provide the necessary environment for religious communities and other civic organizations to thrive.

To allow free practice of religious belief for all persons and to ensure the availability of religious service in the military and other social institutions

To promote policies of economic development that are sustainable and humane and can ensure economic security for all people in the region. Integration into broader European structures is an important dimension of this process.

To adopt and implement laws on restitution of property to religious communities that was nationalized or expropriated by previous regimes. This property is essential for religious communities to retain their independence from political control and to carry out their religious and social mission.

To develop media practices that do not promote division, mistrust and hostility among peoples, but can contribute to building healthy democratic societies. In this regard we call for greater access for all religious communities to the media in their respective countries.

OPENING RELIGIOUS DIALOGUE

As representatives of our respective religious communities, we know that there is no alternative to dialogue both within and among our communities, and we commit ourselves to take the following steps to promote dialogue and cooperation among ourselves and to enhance the role of our communities as important social institutions in our societies:

We will seek partnerships with other civic and social organizations in our societies to carry out social welfare activities for which we share a common concern.

We will educate all persons to understand and respect our different faith traditions in order to prevent ignorance and fear from once again fueling violence. To this end we must ensure that school curriculums and textbooks treat each religious tradition in a way that individuals from that tradition can recognize themselves. We will also provide basic information about each religious community and organize teacher exchanges in our own religious institutions to promote better understanding and mutual respect.

We commit ourselves to pray for and to promote tolerance, coexistence and peace both within our own communities and for our brothers and sisters in other communities. We also pledge ourselves to promote a climate of peace within our communities by stressing to our own officials that preaching must not interpret our own faith by attacking others. We must show respect to others by not using inflammatory language in our public statements.

We encourage the formation of inter-religious working committees in each state to foster contact and dialogue among the communities as a first step towards practical cooperation.

We will work to take part in joint public meetings and visits by religious leaders within our own states and around the region to promote the idea of tolerance and common living among communities and peoples.

We pledge ourselves to find the means to provide mutual assistance for those who suffer in whatever way in our societies. In these efforts, we want to state that majority religious communities have a particular responsibility to protect the human and religious rights of smaller or minority communities in their areas.

Our region continues to face considerable challenges in the process of reconstruction, reconciliation and development. We believe that religious communities can play a vital role in this process, and we are thankful to God that we have had the opportunity to meet together and discuss such critical issues, and we express our appreciation to the World Conference on Religion and Peace for convening this important meeting. We commit ourselves to pursuing contact and dialogue with each other both within the states of South Eastern Europe and across the region as a whole for the purpose of building active instruments of interreligious cooperation, and we ask for the World Conference on Religion and Peace to continue to assist us in facilitating this process of building cooperation in our region.

FORUM OF SOUTH EASTERN EUROPEAN RELIGIOUS LEADERS, WORLD CONFERENCE ON RELIGION AND PEACE

PARTICIPANTS LIST

Islamic

Mr. Mehmet Emin Aga, Mufti of Xanthi, Greece.

Dr. Rexhep Bojaj, Mufti and President, Islamic Community of Kosovo.

H.E. Dr. Mustafa Ceriç, Reisu-l-Ulema, Islamic Community of Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Mr. Idriz Demirovic, Mufti and President, Islamic Community of Montenegro.

Mr. Moustafa Alich Hadji, Grand Mufti, Islamic Community of Bulgaria.

Mr. Aziz Hasanoviç, Senior Imam, Zagreb, Croatia.

Mr. Hamdija Jusufspahiç, Mufti, Islamic Community of Serbia.

H.E. Mr. Sulejman Red'epi, Reis-ul-Ulema, Islamic Community of Macedonia.

Mr. Selim Stafa, Deputy Chairman, Islamic Community of Albania.

Mr. Ibrahim Serif, Mufti of Komotini, Greece

Mr. Muamer Zukorliç, Mufti, Islamic Community of Sand'ak.

Orthodox

His Beatitude Anastasios, Archbishop of Tirana and All Albania, Albanian Orthodox Church.

Very Rev. Ieronim Cretu, Superior of Romanian Orthodox Church in Jerusalem.

Prof. Georgios Filias, Professor, Theological Faculty, Greek Orthodox Church.

H.E. Timotej Jovanovski, Metropolitan of Debar-Ki-evo, Macedonian Orthodox Church. H.E. Nikolaj Mrla, Metropolitan of

Dabrobosnia, Serbian Orthodox Church. His Grace Artemije Radosavljevic, Bishop of Raska-Prizren, Serbian Orthodox Church. H.E. Gligori Stefanov, Metropolitan of Veliko Tirnovo, Bulgarian Orthodox Church.

Roman Catholic

Fr. George Frendo, Vicar General, Archdiocese of Durres-Tirana, Albania.
Dr. Karl Ocvrik, Professor, Theological

Dr. Karl Ocvrik, Professor, Theological Faculty, Archdiocese of Ljubljana, Slovenia. H.E. Vinko Cardinal Puljic, Archbishop of Vhrbosna (Sarajevo).

Msgr. Marko Sopi, Bishop of Prizren, Kosovo.

Jewish

Rabbi Menachem Hacohen, Great Rabbi, Jewish Community of Romania.

Mr. Emil Kalo, President of Organization of Jews in Bulgaria n Shalom.

Dr. Ognjen Kraus, President of Coordinating Board of Jewish Communities in Croatia.

Mr. Aca Singer, President of Federation of Jewish Communities in Yugoslavia.

Protestant

Dr. Peter Kuzmiç, President, Council of Evangelical Churches in Croatia.●

RESTORATION OF LITHUANIA'S INDEPENDENCE

• Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, on February 6 of this year, in the Divine Providence Church, in Southfield, Michigan, several hundred Lithuanian Americans will gather to mark the tenth anniversary of the restoration of Lithuania's independence. Joined by Lithuania's ambassador to the United States. His Excellency, Stasvs Sakalauskas, they will be celebrating their nation's original, modern independence day, February 16, 1918, as well as the events of March 1, 1990, the date on which Lithuania was finally and irrevocably released from the grip of Soviet communism.

Michigan's Lithuanian-American community also will celebrate the perseverance and sacrifice of their people, which enabled them to achieve the freedom they now enjoy.

I have reviewed the bare facts before: On March 11, 1990, the newly elected Lithuanian Parliament, fulfilling its electoral mandate from the people of Lithuania, declared the restoration of Lithuania's independence and the establishment of a democratic state. This marked a great moment for Lithuania and for lovers of freedom around the globe.

The people of Lithuania endured 51 years of oppressive foreign occupation. Operating under cover of the infamous Hitler-Stalin Pact of 1939, Soviet troops marched into Lithuania, beginning an occupation characterized by communist dictatorship and cultural genocide.

Even in the face of this oppression, the Lithuanian people were not defeated. They assisted their oppressors and kept their culture, their faith and their dream of independence very much alive even during the hardest times.

The people of Lithuania were even able to mobilize and sustain a non-violent movement for social and political change, a movement which came to be known as Sajudis. This people's movement helped guarantee a peaceful transition to independence through full participation in democratic elections on February 24, 1990.

Unfortunately, as is so often the case, peace and freedom had to be purchased again and again. In January of 1991, ten months after restoration of independence, the people and government of Lithuania faced a bloody assault by foreign troops intent on overthrowing their democratic institutions. Lithuanians withstood this assault, maintaining their independence and their democracy. Their successful use of non-violent resistance to an oppressive regime is an inspiration to all.

Lithuania's integration into the international community has been swift and sure. On September 17, 1991, the reborn nation became a member of the United Nations and is a signatory to a number of its organizations and other international agreements. It also is a member of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, the North Atlantic Cooperation Council and the Council of Europe.

Lithuania is an associate member of the European Union, has applied for NATO membership and is currently negotiating for membership in the WTO, OECD and other Western organizations.

The United States established diplomatic relations with Lithuania on July 28, 1992. But our nation never really broke with the government and people of Lithuania. The United States never recognized the forcible incorporation of Lituania into the U.S.S.R., and views the present Government of Lithuania as a legal continuation of the inter-war republic. Indeed, for over fifty years the United States maintained a bipartisan consensus that our nation would refuse to recognize the forcible incorporation of Lithuania into the former Soviet Union.

America's relations with Lithuania continue to be strong, friendly and mutually beneficial. Lithuania has enjoyed Most-Favored-Nation (MFN) treatment with the United States since December, 1991. Through 1996, the United States has committed over $100 million to Lithuania's economic and political transformation and to address humanitarian needs. In 1994, the United States and Lithuania signed an agreement of bilateral trade and intellectual property protection, and in 1997 a bilateral investment treaty.

In 1998 the United States and Lithuania signed The Baltic Charter Partnership. That charter recalls the history of American relations with the area and underscores our "real, profound, and enduring" interest in the security and independence of the three Baltic states. As the Charter also notes, our interest in a Europe whole and free will not be ensured until Estonia. Latvia, and Lithuania are secure.

Mr. President, I commend the people of Lithuania for their courage and perseverance in using peaceful means to regain their independence. I pledge to work with my colleagues to continue working to secure the freedom and independence of Lithuania and its Baltic neighbors, and I join with the people of Lithuania as they celebrate their independence.

RECOGNITION OF THE NACHES VALLEY HIGH SCHOOL LEADERSHIP CLASS

• Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, as the Senate prepares to debate the Elementary and Secondary Education Act in the coming weeks, one of the topics we will no doubt address is this issue of school safety.

I want to recognize the extraordinary efforts of a group of students and teachers in eastern Washington in addressing violent crime in their community and making their school a safer place for all students. The Leadership Class at Naches Valley High School has done an excellent job at incorporating creative solutions and programs to curb gang activity and encourage fellow students to do well in school. For their efforts, I am presenting these students and their teacher, Mr. Sanford Jetton with my "Innovation in Education" award.

Naches Valley is a rural school district at the foot of the eastern side of the Cascade Mountains. For years, Naches Valley High School reflected the small community values with little conflict between students. In 1996, it discovered it was not immune from the problems that are common-place in most large urban schools—gangs, drugs, depression, crime, to name a few.

When the high school had its first incident of gang violence, students in the Leadership class were both frightened and angry. While such a reaction would be expected, their response was anything but typical. Not only did the students confront the gang members, challenging them to be positive contributors to the school atmosphere, but they proactively worked with their principal, their Leadership teacher Sanford Jetton, the Mayor, and the deputies from the sheriff's department to address the problem.

The students helped write a town ordinance which declared the local park to be part of the school grounds for an hour before and an hour after school, or whenever that park is being used for school activities. This allows for disruptive students to be dealt with both by law enforcement and the school's own "zero tolerance" gang policy.

As a result of this direct intervention, most of the gang members relinquished that affiliation and eventually graduated from Naches. In addition, there have been no further incidences of gang violence at Naches Valley High School since 1996.

The Leadership class did not stop with the problem of gang violence. Its members looked for innovative ways to promote drug and violence prevention through school and community service. The list of student-initiated accomplishments is quite impressive:

The class established a Student Accountability Board (S.A.B.) which provides alternative consequences for students pulled over by the sheriff's office for traffic violations. The S.A.B. has resulted in a 50 percent reduction in traffic citations. Seat belt use among students has also risen from 63 percent in 1997 to 93 percent in 1999.

Working with the University of Washington, the class prepared a suicide awareness program which has since spread to six other schools.

The class initiated a "Student Sharing Solutions" program which teams up schools throughout the Yakima Valley for such events as a countrywide graffiti paint-out.

The class has also taken the lead in such projects as replenishing local food banks and in raising money for a fellow NVHS student who was severely injured in a car crash and whose family has no medical insurance.

These young leaders, and their teacher have been recognized in their community at problem solvers and generous servants. In 1998, the Naches Valley Leadership Class received the Greater Yakima Chamber of Commerce Service Award.

As the Senate prepares to take on the reauthorization of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act, I believe we in Congress would do well to trust students and teachers, like Sanford Jetton and his Leadership class with more freedom and flexibility to create these types of innovative programs.

That is why I have introduced my Straight A's education bill to give parents, teachers, principals, superintendents and school board members with the flexibility to make the best decisions about how to educate our children and provide measures to keep states accountable for the results.

SUPER BOWL CHAMPION, ST. LOUIS RAMS

• Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, it is with great pride that I rise today with my distinguished colleagues to support the pending resolution and express my sincere congratulations to the Super Bowl XXXIV Champion St. Louis Rams. In the aftermath of a heart-stopping NFC division victory over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and an outstanding regular season record of 13 wins and 3 losses, the St. Louis Rams increased their intensity to win Super Bowl XXXIV, bringing home the most priced possession in the National Football League, the Lombardi Trophy. In an extraordinary effort and show of heart, the Rams countered the incredible second-half push by the Tennessee Titans in a game that more than lived up to its billing of "Super" and made history on Sunday, January 30, 2000, by pulling out a thrilling victory by the score of 23-16, becoming the Super Bowl XXXIV Champions.

This was Coach Dick Vermeil's third year as head coach of the Rams. Coach Vermeil previously led the Philadelphia Eagles to the Super Bowl in 1980, but had been away from coaching for almost 15 years. The passionate 63vear-old coach showed he still had the stuff it takes to lead this team of stars to the championship. The fans of professional football have appropriately awarded Coach Vermeil by voting him the Staples Coach of the Year, the only NFL honor determined solely by a vote of the fans.

The three-year path to glory began slowly, with 9 wins and 23 losses over the previous two seasons, including just 4 victories last season, but the team turned it around this year. While the Rams were truly a team that played well together all year, this triumphant season can be attributed to the performance of several key players, including six players that were chosen to start in the Pro Bowl.

Kurt Warner, stepping in as the starter after Trent Green was injured in an early preseason game, enjoyed one of the best years ever for an NFL quarterback, throwing for 4,353 yards, 41 touchdowns and only 13 interceptions, a performance worthy of being awarded the NFL's Most Valuable Player and the Pro Bowl starting quarterback. This remarkable individual, in just his second season in the NFL, was bagging groceries in Waterloo, Iowa, just five years ago. While setting passing and scoring records in the Arena Football League for 3 seasons and 1 season in the NFL Europe, he never gave up his dream of playing in the NFL. Last night, he helped to bring the dream of a Super Bowl championship home to St. Louis.

Marshall Faulk, one of the league's premier running backs, set an NFL record this season for combined rushing and receiving yards from the line of scrimmage in a single season with 2.429, in addition to scoring 12 touchdowns. He was also chosen to start in the Pro Bowl.

All season long, the team benefited from a stellar group of talented receivers, led by Isaac Bruce, who will join his teammates in the Pro Bowl; Torry Holt; Az-zahir Hakim; and Ricky Proehl. Proehl, you may remember, caught a clutch game-winning touchdown in the closing minutes of the Rams' win last week over the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, while Bruce made a truly spectacular play in the fourth quarter of the Super Bowl by catching a 73 yard touchdown pass that sealed the championship. These stars helped the Rams to establish early on that they were an offensive-minded team. scoring a total of 526 points this season, the third-most in NFL history.

But as the saying goes, "Defense wins championships," and the Rams proved this adage, by leading the NFL in rushing defense, and ranking sixth in the league in overall defense. This season, the Rams' defensive end, Kevin Carter, led the league with 17 quarterback sacks and earned his first start in the Pro Bowl. After only 5 years in the league, this outstanding defender has developed a well-documented work ethic that has helped him achieve more sacks over the past two seasons than anyone else in the league.

We all know that to be champions requires a strong commitment to work harder and be more disciplined than the rest. The Rams' Super Bowl win is a credit to the extraordinary efforts by the entire Rams' organization. After moving to St. Louis in 1995, the management went to work in hiring excellent personnel and a committed coaching staff. This season, the organization's slogan was aptly and accurately versed: "Gotta go to work!" With the whole organization working as one cohesive unit and regularly working well beyond the hours of 9 to 5, they showed us just how much can be accomplished when everyone works together for a common goal and is committed to doing more than his or her fair share.

We would be remiss if we overlooked another admirable quality of this fine organization, and that is the commitment to the community. When the Rams relocated to St. Louis in 1995, the team identified community involvement as one of the top priorities. Since that time, many charitable organizations have benefited from the time and resources of these big-hearted athletes, as various Rams players have dedicated dollars for every touchdown, interception, field goal, sack and more. Some examples of how these stars contribute to the community include:

- 1. The defense live—donating $500 for every quarterback sack to a local homeless shelter.
- 2. Wide receive Isaac Bruce—donating $500 for every touchdown to Edgewood's Childhaven, an educational center for children with learning disabilities.
- 3. Running back Marshall Faulkcontinuing the "Marshall Plan" that began in Indianapolis by donating $2,000 for every touchdown that he scores to the Marshall Faulk Founda-
- 4. Quarterback Trent Green-donating $300 for every Rams passing touchdown to the Trent Green Family Foundation.
- 5. Safety Keith Syle—donating $500 for every interception to local literacy programs.
- 6. Kicker Jeff Wilkins—donating $50 for every field goal to Cardinal Glennon Children's Hospital.
- 7. Tight end Roland Williams-donating $86 for every catch to the Roland Williams Youth Life Line Foundation which supports children in Roland's hometown.

Most of these players have also been successful in receiving matching commitments from local businesses and individuals, helping to foster a true sense of community. In addition, each year, players make countless appearances at local schools, hospitals and youth centers to use their influence with children to stress the importance of education and making proper choices in life.

The hard work and dedication of the Rams to their team and the people of the St. Louis metropolitan area deserves our highest commendations. So, on behalf of myself and the good people of my state of Illinois, I congratulate Coach Dick Vermeil, Super Bowl Most Valuable Player Kurt Warner, Marshall Faulk, Isaac Bruce, and the entire St. Louis Rams team on an outstanding performance.

Coach Vermeil, players, and fans: congratulations on a great season and an outstanding victory.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE ST. LOUIS RAMS

• Mr. BOND. Mr. President, On January 30th, the St. Louis Rams faced the Tennessee Titans in one of the most spectacular Super Bowls ever. Both teams played valiantly, and in the end, the Rams were triumphant.

The Rams' victory in Super Bowl XXXIV was the only fitting ending for a season that one expects to find in a movie script. From day one, the Rams' motto was "Gotta Go To Work." Embracing that attitude, the Rams posted one of the best seasons ever. Quarterback Kurt Warner, the regular season and Super Bowl MVP, came from bagging groceries and playing in the arena football league to lead his team to the most coveted prize in football. He became only the second man ever to throw 40 or more touchdown passes in one season. Runningback Marshall Faulk set a new record for total yards from scrimmage. The offense scored 526 points, the third highest total ever. Head Coach Dick Vermeil was named the NFL's coach of the year. Six Rams were chosen to start in the Pro Bowl. The team's defense was top rated in the NFL against the run.

Perhaps even more impressive than the Rams' regular season was their performance in the Super Bowl. The Rams, living their slogan "Gotta Go To Work," played like a team possessed. Warner set a new Super Bowl record with 414 yards passing. Wide receiver Isaac Bruce caught a 73-yard touchdown pass. Wide receiver Torry Holt set a rookie record with 7 catches for 109 yards-and a touchdown. The defense, led by defensive end Kevin Carter and linebacker London Fletcher, never yielded for a moment. When their backs were up against the wall, linebacker Mike Jones heroically tackled the Tennessee Titan's wide receiver Kevin Dyson to seal the victory.

My congratulations go out to the Rams players, the coaching staff, and the loyal St. Louis fans, who have supported the Rams in anticipation of this moment.

The spirit of the St. Louis Rams provides an example for St. Louis, and all of America, of how to live and work. I commend Kurt Warner, Isaac Bruce, Mike Jones and all of the Rams for the sense of unity and pride they have brought to St. Louis.●

CLOTURE VOTE VITIATED—S. 1287

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the cloture vote with respect to the nuclear waste legislation be vitiated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). Without objection, it is so ordered.

REMOVAL OF INJUNCTION OF SE-CRECY—TREATY DOCUMENT NO. 106–19

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, as in executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the injunction of secrecy be removed from the following treaties transmitted to the Senate on February 2, 2000, by the President of the United States: Treaty with Egypt on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters (Treaty Document No. 106–19).

Further, I ask unanimous consent the treaty be considered as having been read for the first time, that it be referred with accompanying papers to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed, and that the President's message be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The message of the President is as follows:

To the Senate of the United States:

With a view to receiving the advice and consent of the Senate to ratification, I transmit herewith the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of the Arab Republic of Egypt on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters, signed at Cairo on May 3, 1998. I transmit also a related exchange of diplomatic notes for the information of the Senate. The report of the Department of State with respect to the Treaty is enclosed.

The Treaty is one of a series of modern mutual legal assistance treaties being negotiated by the United States in order to counter criminal activities more effectively. The Treaty should be an effective tool to assist in the prosecution of a wide variety of crimes, including terrorism and drug-trafficking offenses. The Treaty is self-executing.

The Treaty provides for a broad range of cooperation in criminal matters. Mutual assistance available under the Treaty includes taking the testimony or statements of persons; providing documents, records and items of evidence; locating or identifying persons or items; serving documents; transferring persons in custody for testimony or other purposes; executing requests for searches and seizures; assisting in proceedings related to immobilization and forfeiture of assets, restitution, and collection of fines; and any other form of assistance not prohibited by the laws of the Requested State.

I recommend that the Senate give early and favorable consideration to the Treaty and give its advice and consent to ratification.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON. THE WHITE HOUSE, February 2, 2000.

SEQUENTIAL REFERRAL—S. 1977

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Governmental Affairs Committee reports S. 1977, the bill then be sequentially referred to the Committee on Finance for a period of up to 45 days during which the Senate is in session. I further ask unanimous consent that if the bill is not reported by the end of that period, it be discharged from the Finance Committee and placed back on the calendar.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

ORDERS FOR THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2000

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 10:30 a.m. on Thursday, February 3. I further ask consent that on Thursday, immediately following the prayer, the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate then proceed to a vote on the confirmation of the nomination of Alan Greenspan to be chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, for the information of all Senators, when the Senate convenes tomorrow, it will immediately proceed to a vote on the Greenspan nomination. Therefore, Senators can expect the first vote to occur at approximately 10:30 a.m. tomorrow. Following that vote, the Senate will proceed to a period of morning business for general floor statements and bill introductions. Further, to accommodate the Democratic conference, the Senate will not be in session this Friday, February 4. On Monday, it is expected that the Senate will begin consideration of S. 1052, the Mariana Islands legislation, and on Tuesday the Senate should begin debate on the nuclear waste bill. Senators can expect votes throughout next week's session.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order following the remarks of Senator Murray.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

REIMBURSEMENTS FOR THE WTO MINISTERIAL

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I come to the floor today as part of my ongoing work to ensure that the city of Seattle gets the money it should receive for security costs incurred during the 1999 World Trade Organization Ministerial.

Mr. President, I have been working with the city of Seattle, the administration, and others on this issue for more than a year and let me say that I welcome Senator Gorton's interest in this topic earlier today.

Actually, back in 1994, I worked to resolve a similar problem associated with Seattle's hosting of the Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation forum. In 1994, working with the Clinton administration, we were able to provide the city of Seattle with close to $1 million for APEC related costs.

Mr. President, for the record, I want to walk my colleagues through some of the history of the issue of the funding of the WTO that was discussed on the floor earlier today.

From the moment Seattle was awarded the WTO Ministerial meeting, I worked with the city of Seattle and others to ensure Seattle was given an opportunity to successfully host the WTO. For almost a year, I met with the city, the Seattle Host Organizaour Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky and others within the executive branch. At every opportunity, I stressed the importance of supporting the city of Seattle in its efforts to provide the necessary security arrangements to the delegates and other WTO visitors.

The Clinton administration—in its fiscal year 2000 budget—requested $2 million in State Department money for WTO related expenses. This request was formulated months before a U.S. host city for the WTO was selected. From the very beginning, the Washington congressional delegation and WTO organizers in Washington state realized this request would be inadequate.

Beginning in March of 1999, with my appropriations request letter to the Commerce, Justice, State appropriations subcommittee, I encouraged the Congress to provide $5 million to the State Department for WTO related expenses. And I urged the Congress to essentially earmark one-half of this money for Seattle to meet a portion of the WTO security expenses.

The Senate Commerce, Justice, State bill did provide the State Department with $5 million for WTO related expenses, but the House version did not. During the conference report, I worked with my Washington state congressional colleagues to protect the $5 million in new WTO money.

Unfortunately, the original CJS conference report did not provide new money. Instead, it said the State Department could take up to $5 million for existing accounts and move them over to be used for WTO expenses.

When I saw that language, I was concerned. To me, it increased the likelihood that the State Department would not assist Seattle with WTO security related costs. Fortunately, as often happens with appropriations bills, the final product is a compromise between the Congress and the administration.

On several occasions, I continued to express to the administration the need for securing $5 million in new money—rather than relying on the State Department to move old money around.

Mr. President, I asked unanimous consent to print in the RECORD a letter dated September 28, 1999.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE.

 $Washington,\,DC,\,September\,28,\,1999.$ Hon. JUDD GREGG,

Chairman, Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary, Senate Appropriations committee, The Capitol, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GREGG: As you know, the World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial will be held in Seattle later this year. The Seattle Host Organization is busy preparing to host the largest trade meeting ever held in the United States. About 5,000 official delegates from 135 nations as well as thousands of reporters, demonstrators and other interested parties will converge on Seattle to participate in WTO Ministerial events. In addition, President Clinton and numerous heads of state are expected to attend the meetings and play an active role in the Ministerial.

The City of Seattle and other local law enforcement officials are spending considerable time and resources preparing for the numerous security issues associated with the highprofile event. The Senate-passed fiscal year 2000 Commerce, Justice and State Appropriations Act provides $5 million to the State Department for WTO-related expenses. This is the only federal contribution directed to the WTO Ministerial. The House bill, unfortunately, did not include any federal commitment for WTO expenses. In conference, I strongly encourage you to protect the Senate's $5 million WTO appropriation. Additionally, I urge you to include the following report language in the conference report.

"Requested Conference Report language: The conference recommendation directs that $5 million be made available from this account for the costs associated with hosting the World Trade Organization conference in Seattle, WA and that 50% of such funds be allocated for reimbursement, through the City of Seattle, of local law enforcement and fire agencies for costs incurred in providing security for the meeting, including costs for overtime and motorcade expenses."

I look forward to your continued attention and support for this important issue.

Sincerely.

Patty Murray, $U.S.\ Senator.$

Mrs. MURRAY. This letter was written to the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Committee and in close consultation with WTO organizers in Seattle, including the City of Seattle. Unfortunately, despite efforts by my office and the City of Seattle, no other Senators signed the letter urging the Appropriations Committee to provide the WTO funding, as well as earmark funds for the City of Seattle.

I worked to make it a bipartisan letter. Perhaps if other Senators had signed the letter when I asked last year, we would have been able to provide earmark money for Seattle and avoid part of the problem now facing my state, as was discussed by my colleague from Washington earlier today.

The WTO was a difficult period for my constituents. We are continuing to deal with the many issues raised for our state during the ministerial. The city of Seattle and other local governments have been forced to bear $12 million in security costs. this is a far higher cost than anyone anticipated. It threatens to force other budget cuts to make up for the State Department's refusal to work with my constituents.

Congress—with strong assistance from the President and Vice President—did provide $5 million in WTO money. The issue before us now is between my constituents—who have been asked to absorb virtually all WTO security costs—and the State Department.

Obviously, this issue will not go away. And I have already begun to work with the administration to get further support in forcing the State Department to assume some responsibility for the $12 million in WTO security costs.

Now is not the time for the State Department to discredit or deny the legitimate issues raised by my constituents. And now is not the time to politicize an issue that remains difficult and volatile for my constituents. Seattle and Washington state want to heal the WTO wounds

This administration has been enormously helpful to Washington state interests. Across the board, the President and the Vice President, have both devoted time, energy and resources to Washington state's problems fighting for jobs for aerospace workers, supporting our high tech economy, devoting new resources to environmental problems, and addressing our difficult transportation problems are all examples of the close working relationship between this administration and Washington state.

And I expect the same degree of support in trying to resolve the current problem on WTO security related costs incurred by the city of Seattle and other local governments in Washington state.

Mr. President, I encourage my colleagues to join me in working with the administration to address this very difficult problem. The best way to do this is through cooperation—by trying to convince the State Department that in hosting international events, we must be careful not to ask local governments to assume costs that are clearly federal responsibilities.

Mr. President, I will continue my efforts to ensure that the city of Seattle and other local governments are not left holding the bag, and once again, I welcome my colleagues to join me in this effort.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 10:30 A.M. TOMOBROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate stands adjourned under the previous order.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 6:52 p.m., adjourned until Thursday, February 3, 2000, at 10:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate February 2, 2000:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

THOMAS G. WESTON, OF MICHIGAN, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF MINISTER-COUNSELOR, FOR THE RANK OF AMBASADOR DURING HIS TENURE OF SERVICE AS SPECIAL COORDINATOR FOR CYDDIS

SUSAN S. JACOBS, OF VIRGINIA, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF COUNSELOR,

0000

TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO PAPUA NEW GUINEA, AND TO SERVE CONCURRENTLY AND WITHOUT ADDITIONAL COMPENSATION AS AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO SOLOMON ISLANDS, AND AS AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF VANUATU.
KARIL WILLIAM HOFMANN OF MARYLAND A CAREER

KARL WILLIAM HOPMANN, OF MARYLAND, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF COUNSELOR, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE TOGOLESE REPUBLIC.

JOHN F. TEFFT, OF VIRGINIA, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF MINISTER-COUNSELOR. TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND CUUNSELOR, 10 BE AMBASSADOR BATRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF LITHUANIA. JANET A. SANDERSON, OF ARIZONA, A CAREER MEM-BER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF COUN-

SELOR, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE DEMOCRATIC AND POPULAR REPUBLIC OF ALGE-

DONALD Y. YAMAMOTO, OF NEW YORK, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF COUN-SELOR, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF DJIBOUTI.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

LAURESS L. WISE II, OF VIRGINIA, TO BE COMMIS-SIONER OF EDUCATION STATISTICS FOR A TERM EXPIRING JUNE 21, 2003, VICE PASCAL D. FORGIONE, JR. TERM EXPIRED.

IN THE AIR FORCE

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT IN THE RESERVE OF THE AIR FORCE TO THE GRADE INDI-CATED UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 12203:

To be major general

BRIG. GEN. RALPH S. CLEM, 0000 BRIG, GEN, JOHN M. DANAHY, 0000 BRIG. GEN. JOSEPH G. LYNCH, 0000 BRIG. GEN. JEFFREY M. MUSFELDT, 0000 BRIG. GEN. ROBERT B. SIEGFRIED, 0000

To be brigadier general

COL. GERALD A. BLACK, 0000 COL. RICHARD B. FORD, 0000 COL. JACK C. IHLE, 0000 COL. KEITH W. MEURLIN, 0000 COL. BETTY L. MULLIS, 0000 COL. SCOTT R. NICHOLS, 0000 COL. DAVID A. ROBINSON, 0000 COL. RICHARD D. ROTH, 0000 COL. RANDOLPH C. RYDER, JR., 0000 COL. JOSEPH L. SHAEFER, 0000 COL. CHARLES E. STENNER, JR., 0000 COL. THOMAS D. TAVERNEY, 0000 COL. JAMES T. TURLINGTON, 0000

IN THE ARMY

THE FOLLOWING ARMY NATIONAL GUARD OF THE UNITED STATES OFFICER FOR APPOINTMENT IN THE RE-SERVE OF THE ARMY TO THE ARMY TO THE GRADE INDICATED UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 12203:

To be brigadier general

COL. DAVID E. GLINES, 0000

IN THE NAVY

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT IN THE UNITED STATES NAVAL RESERVE TO THE GRADE INDICATED UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 12203:

To be rear admiral

REAR ADM. (LH) WILLIAM J. LYNCH, 0000 REAR ADM. (LH) JOHN C. WEED, JR., 0000

IN THE AIR FORCE

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE RESERVE OF THE AIR FORCE UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 12203:

LABAINE L. ACOSTA, 0000 MARC C. ALBERTSEN, 0000 VICKI A. ALLEN, 0000 LESLIE R. ANZJON, 0000 RONALD B. ARENSTEIN, 0000 SONIA M. ASTLE, 0000 LOU ALLEN A. ASTON, 0000 SHANNA D. ATNIP, 0000 MARCIA J. BACHMAN, 0000 CATHERINE T. BACON, 0000 PAUL L. BAILEY, 0000 THOMAS F. BALDY, 0000 WAYNE J. BARNUM, 0000 PATRICIA W. BATTLES, 0000 DAVID A. BEARDEN, 0000 WAYNE A. BEAVER, 0000 BENITA H. BECKLES, 0000 WILLIAM E. BEST, 0000 ROGER A. BINDER, 0000 GEORGE L. BONDAR, 0000 SUSAN E. BOWMAN, 0000 KERRY A. BREED, 0000 BAIRD S. BREHM, 0000 STEPHANIE A. BROTHERTON, 0000

CHARLES A. BROWN, JR., 0000 OLIVIA A. BURGESS, 0000

MARK B. BURQUEST, 0000 KEVIN A. BUSHEY, 0000 GORDON M. CALLISON, 00 KATHLEEN M. CAMPBELL. 0000

KATHLEEN M. CANFIELD,

STEVEN L. CARNES, 0000 CAROLYN S. CARNEY, 0000 ROBIN E. CHANDLER, 0000 KENNETH P. CHATELAIN,

0000 GEORGE L. CLARK, 0000 DAVID L. COMMONS, 0000 JODY C. COOK, 0000 JAMES R. COOKE, 0000 MICHAEL D. CORNELL, 0000 JUAN C. CORVALAN, 0000 SCOTT A. CRISLIP, 0000 MARK A. CULBERTSON, 0000 JAMES B. DABNEY, 0000 LAWRENCE M. DANNER, 0000

ROBIN L. DAVITT, 0000 MAX H. DELLAPIA, 0000 LEONARD P. DIGREGORIO.

HENRY H. DORTON, JR., 0000 CHRISTINE J DRAKE 0000 BERNADETTE B. DSOUZA

PAULA A. H. DUNAWAY, 0000 DANIEL L. DUROCHER, 0000 WARREN L. EASTMAN, 0000 OMAR ETON, 0000 RANDALL G. FALCON, 0000 GLEN P. FIKE, 0000 MARTHA E. FINN, 0000 KATHLEEN A. FITZGERALD.

0000 DERENCE V. FIVEHOUSE

CHARLES V. FLOCK, 0000 MICHELE M. FORMICOLA.

LINDA K FORTMEIERSAUCIER, 0000 LAWRENCE A. FRANKLIN,

LINDA P. FREDRICKSON, 0000

BRUCE R FREUND 0000 GERALD M. FRIEDMAN, 0000 RUSSELL A. FRIEMEL, 0000 WILLIAM T. GARDNER, JR.

0000 MARY B. GIBBONS, 0000 DALE G. GOODRICH, 0000 MARY J. GRABULIS, 0000 GEORGE H. GROBERG, 0000 JANICE L. GUNNOE, 0000 MAN MOHAN GURSAHANI. 0000 LEE D. GUSTIN, 0000

JEFFREY L. HACKETT, 0000 RICHARD L. HAMILTON, 0000 WILLIAM L. HAMMOND, JR.,

EDWARD W. HATCH, 0000 JANICE E. HAWKINS, 0000 JOYCE E. HEISER, 0000 THOMAS F. HENNESSY, III, 0000

RICHARD F. J. HENTERLY.

JR., 0000 KLAUS J. HOEHNA, 0000 STEPHEN J. HOGAN, 0000 GREGORY P. HOLDER, 0000 ELIZABETH A. HUNT, 0000 RICHARD A. HUOT, 0000 BRENT T. INMAN, 0000 CARRIE M. ISHISAKA, 0000 ANN G. JACKSON, 0000 GARRY C JACKSON 0000 JAMES F. JACKSON, 0000 LEROY C. JAN, 0000 MELVIN L. JEFFERS, JR., 0000

DENNY A. JOBES, 0000 RONALD L. JOHNSTON, 0000 RAYMOND P. JOINSON, 0000 STEPHEN M. KEEN, 0000 GLENN P. KINDER, 0000 HENRY B. KINTNER, 0000 RAYMOND M KLEIN 0000 MICHAEL J. KRAMER, 0000 JAMES E. KUHNS, 0000 JOHN F. KURZAK, 0000 EVA K. LAEVASTU, 0000 BRIAN J. LALLY, 0000 JEAN L. LAUZON, 0000 LEO J. LAWRENSON, 0000 BEVERLY L. LEE, 0000 LOUIS J. LELI, 0000 JAMES D. LYND, 0000 JAMES P. LYNOTT, 0000 MICHAEL L. MAQUET, 0000 PETER L. MARCUZZO, 0000 RICHARD L. MARSH, 0000 WILLIAM C. MARSHALL

THOMAS A. MAUZAKA, 0000 JOEL R. MAYNARD, 0000 MIKE H MCCLENDON 0000 KATHLEEN M. MCCORMICK,

0000 BETTY C. MCCOY, 0000 JANIE L. MCKENZIE, 0000 PRISCILLA E. MERRILL, 0000 PHILIP C. METEER, 0000 MIRIAM G MICHAEL 0000 WALTER S. MICHAEL, JR.,

GEORGE M. MIHELICK, 0000 MILLARD E. MOON, 0000 NORMAN L. MOORE, JR., 0000

SYNYA K. BALANON, 0000

ANTHONY S. BANKES, 0000

JOSEPH B. BEARD IV. 0000

JOHN S. BRUUN, 0000

STEPHEN R. CHEN, 0000

MATTHEW R. BONZANI, 0000

COLLEEN M. CHRISTENSEN,

DONALD T. MORLEY, 0000 BELINDA R. MORRONE, 0000 KARIN G. MURPHY, 0000 PHILIP D. MYKYTIUK, 0000 ROBERT L. NERENBERG.

DONNA R. NOLTER, 0000 JODY E. NYVALL, 0000 JOHN J. O'CONNOR II 0000 MICHAEL J. ONISICK, 0000 CHARLES A. ORR, 0000 FRANK J. PADILLA, 0000 ARTHUR J. PATEFIELD, 0000 ALLAN D. PAYNE, 0000 DAVID C. PEEL, 0000 MICHAEL D. PEFLEY, 0000 LOREN S. PERLSTEIN, 0000 PENNY F. PIERCE, 0000 GILDA C. PRICE, 0000 PATRICIA A. QUISENBERRY, 0000

TRAVIS P. BATTAN, 0000 PATRICIA R. REFSDAL, 00 KATHERINE A. B. REPKO, 0000

JOHN A. RICHARDSON II, WILLIAM S. RICHARDSON

0000 JOHN E. RILEY, JR., 0000 REBECCA J. RITCHEYFRITZ,

0000 RONALD R. ROJAS, 0000 GARY E. ROMSAAS, 0000 KRISTIN L. BUDIN, 0000 JAMES C. RUEHRMUND, JR.,

JOHN M. SALMON, 0000 CHARLES M. SCHENCKE.

RICHARD D. SCHIKORA, 0000 MARK C. SCHWING, 0000 THOMAS C. SELVAGGI, 0000 LEE W. SERGI, 0000 HARVEY C. SHAPIRO. 0000 MARK E. SHEPROW, 0000 MICHAEL G. SHOOK, 0000 HENRY R. SKILLERN, 0000 HENRY R. SKILLERN, 0000
STEVEN H. SLICK, 0000
DANA M. SMERCHEK, 0000
BRIAN L. SMITH, 0000 ELLIS P. SMITH, 0000
EMILY J. SMITH, 0000
JAMES F. SMITH, 0000 SAMMIE M. SMITH, 0000 VANCE M. SMITH, 0000 KENNETH N. SNYDER, 0000 QUAY C. SNYDER, 0000 ROBERT G. SPEER, 0000 GREGORY H. STANLEY, 0000 JUDY M. STEPLER, 0000 DAVID E. STINE, 0000 ROBERT R. STORMES, 0000 GERRY D. STOVER, 0000 OLIVIA Y. STRINGER, 0000 MICHAEL K. SUMIDA, 0000 CATHY W. SWAN, 0000 JOHN A. TALL, 0000 JOHN A. TALL, 0000 ROBERT O. TARTER, 0000 ROGER K. THOMSON, 0000 JACOB G. THORN, JR., 0000 JULIE A. TIZARD, 0000 RAYMOND B. TORGERSON, 0000

MICHAEL A TORRES 0000 PAULA H. TSUFIS, 0000 ROBERT T. ULRICH, 0000 RIDLEY NORTMAN USHERWOOD, 0000 SUBRAHMANYAM VADLAMANI, 0000

JAMES C VANHOUSEN 0000 PAUL M. VANSICKLE, 0000 RAYMOND J. VEATCH, 0000 RAYMOND T. VIZZONE, 0000 EVA T. WALLACE, 0000 SHERMAN S. WALLEN, 0000 JEFFREY L. WALLER, 0000 MICHAEL F. WALSH, 0000 SANFORD E WAY 0000 MICHAEL J. WEININGER, 0000

MARILYN A WELCH 0000 FREDERICK L. WHITICAN,

0000 DAVID P. WIDAUF, 0000 SUSAN M. WILKERSON, 0000 ANTONY G. WILLIAMS, 0000 SUSAN J. WILLIAMSON, 0000 DALE A. WOLFE, 0000 WILLIAM E. WOODS II, 0000 ROGER A. WUJEK, 0000

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR A REGULAR APPOINTMENT IN THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 531.

To be captain

0000 CHRISTOPHER A. COOP, 0000 ELVIN J. CRUZZENO, 0000 KAREN I. DACEY, 0000 KRISTINA F. DIFRANCESCO,

LORI R. DISEATI. 0000 PATRICK M. ELLISON, 0000 CHRISTIAN T. HANLEY, JR.,

BRANDON R. HORNE, 0000 KIRK E. JENSEN, 0000 MATTHEW C. KATUS, 0000 COLLEEN M. KERSGARD.

MARIA R. J. KOSTUR, 0000 MICHAEL J. KOZNARSKY,

KERRY P. LATHAN, 0000 ALARIC C. LEBARON, 0000 DANETTE S. LEBARON, 0000 MONICA M. LOVASZ, 0000 JUSTIN Q. LY, 0000

DANIEL S. MADSEN, 0000 MICHAEL J. MCBETH, 0000 JOHN V. MONTORELLO, 0000 ALI D. MORRELL, 0000 PATRICK M.

MIJEHLBERGER 0000 AMY L. PARKER, 0000 TARA N. PIECH, 0000 BRIAN A. SHANER, 0000 LUKE B. SIMONET, 0000 MARK A. SLABAUGH, 0000 ADRIAN K. STULL, 0000 KEITH A. SWARTZ, 0000 MARK W. TRUE, 0000 DMITRY TUDER, 0000 JANET L. VEESART, 0000 MEGUMI M. VOGT, 0000 ANDREW L. WINGE, 0000 EDWARD K. YI, 0000

IN THE ARMY

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN THE NURSE CORPS, MEDICAL SERVICE CORPS, MEDICAL SPECIALIST CORPS AND VETERINARY CORPS UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTIONS 624 AND 3064:

To be colonel

JAIME ALBORNOZ, 0000 CARLOS M. ARROYO, 0000 KATHERINE A. BABB, 0000 JOHN M. BEUS, 0000 JAMES A. BLAGG, 0000 LARRY G. CARPENTER, 0000 DAVID S. CARTER, 0000 MICHAEL B. CATES, 0000 MAUREEN COLEMAN, 0000 BRIAN J. COMMONS, 0000 PATRICIA A. CORDTS, 0000 MICHAEL D. DALEY, 0000 WILLIAM G. DAVIES, 0000 STEPHEN L. DENNY, 0000 SHARON S. DERUVO, 0000 MARY R. DEUTSCH, 0000 DONNA M. DIAMOND, 0000 KATHLEEN N. DUNEMN, 0000 PRINCESS L. FACEN, 0000 BRADLEY D. FREEMAN, 0000 TIMOTHY D. GORDON, 0000 GREG A. GRIFFIN, 0000 DAVID S. HEINTZ, 0000 JOSEPH C. HIGHTOWER, 0000 NANCY S. HODGE, 0000 SALLY S. HOEDEBECKE, 0000 WILLIAM J. HULEATT, JR., 0000

DORENE HURT, 0000 LELAND L. JURGENSMEIER,

0000 WILLIAM S. KIRK, 0000

BRIAN E. KNAPP, 0000

JEFFREY N. LEGRANDE. LARRY C. LYNCH, 0000 FRANCIS L. MC VEIGH, 0000 ELIZABETH A. MILFORD,

JUDITH J. MINDERLER, 0000 BRENDA F. MOSLEY, 0000 ROGER W. OLSEN, 0000 ANALIZA Y. PADDERATZ,

ROBERT M. PONTIUS, 0000 NATHANIEL POWELL, JR.,

0000 ANN B. RICHARDSON, 0000 DOUGLAS S. RINEHART, 0000 MARGARET RIVERA, 0000 LYNELE ROCKWELL, 0000 GEMRYL L. SAMUELS, 0000 CATHERINE M. SCHEMPP.

0000 SCOTT R. SEVERIN, 0000 KATHLEEN Y. SHACKLE, 0000

RONALD L. SHIPPEE, 0000 DEBRA L. SPITTLER, 0000 DANIEL A. STRICKMAN, 0000 ROBERT J. THOMPSON, 0000 WREN H. WALTERS, JR., 0000 LISA D. WEATHERINGTON, 0000

NOEL R. WEBSTER, 0000 BETTY J. WILEY, 0000 TIMOTHY D. WILLIAMSON, 0000

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN THE JUDGE ADVOCATE GENERAL'S CORPS UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTIONS 624 AND 3064:

To be lieutenant colonel

THOMAS E. AYRES, 0000 GREGORY T. BALDWIN, 0000 TRACY A. BARNES, 0000 PETER G. BECKER, 0000 ELIZABETH D. BERRIGAN, JOSEPH H. BESTUL, 0000

DAVID L. CONN, 0000 TIMOTHY M. CONNELLY,

DENISE A. COUNCILROSS,

0000 FLORA D. DARPINO, 0000 JAMES J. DILIBERTI, 0000 FRED K. FORD, 0000 PAUL D. HANCQ, 0000 MICHAEL J. HARGIS, 0000 FRANK M. HRUBAN, 0000 ROBIN L. JOHNSON, 0000 KEVIN D. JONES, 0000 RANDY T. KIRKVOLD, 0000 CHRISTINE LERCH, 0000

MAURICE A. LESCAULT, JR., 0000 EDWARD J. MARTIN, 0000 MICHAEL A. NEWTON, 0000 CHRISTOPHER J. O'BRIEN, TARA A. OSBORN. 0000 CURTIS A. PARKER, 0000 CHARLES N. PEDE, 0000 JODY M. PRESCOTT, 0000

JOHN P. SAUNDERS, 0000 LISA M. SCHENCK, 0000 BERTIE A. SMISEK, 0000 MICHAEL E. SMITH, 0000 PERKUCHIN K. SPAULDING. PAMELA M. STAHL, 0000

FRED P. TAYLOR, 0000 GUY JOHN TAYLOR, 0000 MARK W. TOOLE, 0000 DAVID A. WALLACE, 0000 JOEL E. WILSON, 0000

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES ARMY UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C. SECTION 624:

To be colonel

0000

ROBERT B. ABERNATHY, JR., 0000 WILLIAM G. ADAMS, 0000 CHARLES R. ALEXANDER, JR., 0000 HAL K. ALGUIRE, 0000 KENNETH R. ALLEN, JR.,

0000 MICHAEL J. ALTOMARE,

MICHAEL P. ANDERSON, 0000 MICHAEL F. ANDERSON, 000
RONALD J. ANDREWS, 0000 JOAN C. ARNOLD, 0000
PAUL L. ASWELL, 0000 STEFAN M. AUBREY, 0000
ALLISON T. AYCOCK, 0000
DENNIS J. BALDRIDGE, 0000
BEIAN B. BALDRY 0000 BRIAN R. BALDY, 0000

STEPHEN C. BALL, 0000 ALBERT E. BALLARD, JR., 0000 ELISHA L. BALLARD, 0000 JAMES R. BARTRAN, 0000

JAMES M BATES JR. 0000

MICHAEL W. BECHTOLD,

MARK A. BELLINI, 0000 KEVIN C. BENSON, 0000 MICHAEL W. BIERING, 0000 BRIAN F. BOCKLAGE, 0000 DOUGLAS A. BOONE, 0000 JAMES C. BOOZER, SR., 0000 MICHAEL B. BORDERS, 0000 MICHAEL BOSACK, 0000 JODY L. BRADSHAW, 0000

WILLIAM C. BRADSHAW, ARNOLD N BRAY 0000 DALLAS C. BROWN III, 0000 JOSEPH A. BROWN, 0000 MARYK BROWN 0000 ULYSSES BROWN, JR., 0000 BRUCE E. BRYDGES, 0000 JAMES J. BUDNEY, JR., 0000 GLENN L. BURCH, 0000 CARLOS A. BURGOS, 0000 BENJAMIN H. BUTLER, 0000 DONALD M. CAMPBELL, JR.,

WILLIAM M. CANIANO, 0000 PAUL R. CAPSTICK, 0000 RICHARD G CARDILLO JR

CRAIG L. CARLSON, 0000 PATRICK O. CARPENTER. CARL J. CARTWRIGHT, 0000 DANNY N. CASH, 0000 ALAN C. CATE, JR., 0000 JOSEPH D. CELESKI, 0000 BROOKS B. CHAMBERLIN,

PETER M CHAMPAGNE 0000 ALEJANDRO L. CHAMPIN

JAMES A. CHEN. 0000 TIMOTHY D. CHERRY, 0000 MARK A. CIANCHETTI, 0000 MICHAEL G. CLARK, 0000 ARNALDO CLAUDIO, 0000 MARK W. CLAY, 0000 TERRY L. CLEMONS, 0000 CHARLES T. CLEVELAND.

JAMES H. COFFMAN, JR.

0000 HOWARD I. COHEN, 0000 THOMAS A. COLE, 0000 THOMAS M. COLE, 0000 GLEN C. COLLINS, JR., 0000 MICHAEL COLPO, 0000 KEVIN T. CONNELLY, 0000 MICHAEL J. CONRAD, JR.

0000 JOSEPH CONTARINO III. 0000 TERRY P. COOK, 0000 KEITH L. COOPER, 0000 PETER C. COOPER, 0000 BONALD C CORDELL 0000 RADAMES CORNIER, JR.,

ROBERT D. COX. 0000 DAVID B. CRIPPS, 0000 LARRY W. CROCE, 0000 KENNETH E. CROWDER, 0000 KENNETH M CROWE 0000 DONALD R. CURTIS, JR., 0000 DANIEL G. DALEY, 0000 ARTHUR K. DAVIS, 0000 RODNEY M. DAVIS, 0000 GENARO J. DELLAROCCO

JAMES N. DELOTTINVILLE.

JAMES M. DEPAZ, 0000 TERRY K. DEROUCHEY, 0000 SHANE M DEVERILL 0000 PETER J. DILLON, 0000 ALFRED E. DOCHNAL, 0000 RICHARD C. DOERER, 0000 MARK T. DOODY, 0000 PATRICIA A. DOOLEY, 0000 RICK A. DORSEY, 0000 KENNETH S. DOWD, 0000 BILLY J. DOWDY, 0000 ROBERT H. DRUMM, JR., 0000 DONALD G. DRUMMER, 0000 GLEN P DUDEVOIR 0000 DOUGLAS R. ELLER, 0000 PAUL L. ENGLISH, JR., 0000 CHRISTOPHER G. ESSIG, JEFFERSON G. EWING, 0000 DAVID G. FARRISEE, 0000 DAVID J. FARRUGGIA, 0000 ORLANDO J. FERNANDEZ 0000 DENNIS E. FIELDS, 0000

MICHAEL D FITZGERALD

ROBERT G. FIX, 0000 ANN G. FLETCHER, 0000

JOSEPH F. FONTANELLA 0000 BARRY J FOWLER 0000 MELVIN R. FRAZIER, 0000 MARY C. FRELS, 0000 JOHN R. FREUND 0000 WILLIAM H. FRITZ, JR., 0000 LOUIS L. FUERTES, 0000 JOSEPH L. GARNES, 0000 JOHN F GARRITY III 0000 MICHAEL J. GEARTY, 0000 ROGER A. GERBER, 0000 DANIEL M. GERSTEIN, 0000 THOMAS J. GIBBONS, 0000 PETER J. GITTO, 0000 TIM R. GLAESER, 0000

STEVEN M GONZALES 0000 EMILIO T. GONZALES, 0000 EMILIO T. GONZALEZ, 0000 TED M. GOOD, 0000 MONICA M. GORZELNIK, 0000 MARK A. GRABLIN, 0000 WILLIAM J. GRAHAM, JR.,

FRANK J. GRAND III. 0000 MICHAEL O. GRANT, 0000 WILLIAM G. GRAVES, 0000 WILLIAM L. GREER, 0000 WILLIAM A. GUINN, 0000 MICHAEL J. GUTHRIE, 0000 ROBERT G. GUTJAHR, 0000 MARK L. HAINES, 0000 DAVID C HALL 0000 STUART B. HAMILTON, 0000 JACK W. HAMPTON, JR., 0000 DAVID L. HANSEN, 0000 MARK D. HANSON, 0000 PERRY HARGROVE, 0000 JAMES E. HARRIS III, 0000 LEE A HARRIS 0000 ROBERT L. HARRISON, 0000 EDWARD A. HART, 0000 SAMMIE E. HASKIN, 0000 BICHARD G HATCH 0000 ROY HAWKINS, 0000 THOMAS W. HAYDEN, 0000 JACOB N. HAYNES, 0000 PETER T. HAYWARD, 0000 THOMAS K. HEINEKEN, 0000 RONALD P. HEITER, 0000 RICHARD N HELFER 0000 JAMES A. HELIS, 0000 DAVID S. HENDERSON, JR.

0000 DONALD J HENDRIX 0000 TOMMY G. HENNESSEE, 0000 MARK R. HENSCHEID, 0000 DAVID M. HERGENROEDER.

0000 SAMUEL J. HERNANDEZ 0000

JYILII D HEWITT 0000 CHARLES W. HIGBEE, 0000 RONALD P. HIGHAM, JR.,

0000 JAMES L. HODGE 0000 RICHARD A. HOEFERT, 0000 MICHAEL E. HOFFPAUIR, 0000

JACK D HOGGE JB. 0000 RICHARD M. HOLCOMB, 0000 SHARON L. HOLMES, 0000 TIMOTHY W HOPE 0000 ANN L. HORNER, 0000 ROBERT L. HOUSE, 0000 DONALD T. HOWARD, 0000 FLOYD E. HUDSON, JR., 0000 JAMES L. HUGGINS, JR., 0000 RICHARD P. HUGHES, 0000 FRANK R. HULL, 0000 ERIC D. HUTCHINGS, 0000 DAVID F. IFFLANDER, 0000 KENNETH M. IRISH III, 0000 WILLIAM A. JENKS, 0000 JEFFREY F. JOHNS, 0000 ORLEY H. JOHNS, 0000 ALBERT JOHNSON, JR., 0000 ALVIE JOHNSON 0000 BRENT A. JOHNSON, 0000 MICHAEL E. JOHNSON, 0000 NANCY A. JOHNSON, 0000 ROBERT L. JOHNSON, JR.,

THEODORE E. JOHNSON, 0000 THOMAS C. JOHNSON, 0000 WILLIAM R. JOHNSON, JR.,

MARK W. JONES, 0000

REUBEN D. JONES, 0000 JEFFREY D. JORE, 0000 CHARLES H. JORGENSON

SUSAN L. JUNKER, 0000 PAUL C. JUSSEL, 0000 NICKOLAS G. JUSTICE, 0000 JAMES J. KARR, 0000 ROBERT V. KAZIMER, 0000 ROBERT B KEYSER 0000 FREDERICK R. KIENLE, 0000 JAMES E. KNAUFF, JR., 0000 DONALD P. KOTCHMAN, 0000 THOMAS A. KRUEGLER, 0000 MARK M. KULUNGOWSKI, 0000 WILLIAM G LAKE JR 0000 MICHAEL J. LALLY III, 0000 PATRICK G. LANDRY, 0000 GEORGE A. LATHAM II, 0000 JAMES F. LAUFENBURG.

0000 MICHAEL E. LAVALLE, 0000 DAVID L. LAWRENCE, 0000 SUSAN S. LAWRENCE, 0000 KIM C. LEACH, 0000 JOHN R. LEE, 0000 CRAIG W. LEEKER, 0000 KEVIN A. LEONARD, 0000 CHARLES S. LEWIS, 0000 RICHARD G. LEYDEN, 0000 GEORGE T. LOCKWOOD, 0000 WILLIAM M. LONG, 0000 ARMANDO LOPEZ, JR., 0000 DAVID LOPEZ, 0000 WARREN J. LOPEZ, 0000 CECIL L. LOTT, JR., 0000 TROY L. LOVETT. 0000 ALBERT LUSTER, 0000 ANNE F. MACDONALD, 0000 ELIZABETH A. MACGUIRE, 0000 RODNEY A MALLETTE 0000

MICHAEL J. MALLORY, 0000 MARDI U. MARK, 0000 GREGG F. MARTIN, 0000 MICHAEL R. MARTINEZ, 0000 ROGER F. MATHEWS, 0000 JORGE R. MATOS, 0000 JODY A. MAXWELL, 0000 KELLY L. MAYES, 0000 BRIAN K. MAYS, 0000 MARK G. MC CAULEY, 0000 JOHN F. MCCUE, JR., 0000 JAMES M. MCDONALD, 0000 RICHARD P. MCEVOY, 0000 JAMES P. MCGAUGHEY, 0000 PHILLIPE MCGHEE 0000 KEVIN P. MCGRATH, 0000 MICHAEL J. MCKINLEY, 0000 KURT A MCNEELY 0000 PATRICK B. MCNIECE, 0000 RICHARD R. MCPHEE, 0000 PATRICIA E. MCQUISTION.

0000 ISRAEL R. MCREYNOLDS,

GORDON H. MERENESS. JR...

PATRICK J. MICHELSON,

0000 JOHN P. MIKULA, 0000 LLOYD MILES, 0000 GREGORY S. MILLER, 0000 STEVEN R. MIRR. 0000 GERALD A. MOCELLO, 0000 JOSEPH I. MOORE, 0000 WAYNE A. MOORE, 0000 STEVEN C. MOORES, 0000 JAMES K. MORGAN, 0000 ROBERT C. MORRIS, JR., WILLIAM R. MOYER, 0000 LLOYDE MIJES 0000 JOHN F. MULHOLLAND, 0000 MIKE G. MULLINS, 0000 RANDALL P. MUNCH, 0000 JOSEPH D. MYERS, 0000 HUBERT W. NEWMAN, 0000 STEVEN H. NICHOLS, 0000 HENRY C. O'BRIEN, 0000 JOHN B. O'DOWD, 0000 RODGER A. OETJEN, 0000 ROBERT D. OGG, JR., 0000 JAMES R. OMAN, 0000 TIMOTHY O'NEIL, 0000 JAMES M. PALERMO, 0000 ROY J. PANZARELLA, 0000

CHRISTOPHER R. PAPARONE, 0000 CHRISTOPHER J. PARKER,

JAY M. PARKER, 0000 GARY L. PARRISH, 0000 MELISSA E. PATRICK, 0000 SCOTT E. PATTON, 0000 FOSTER P. PAYNE II. 0000 JOHN W PEARODY 0000 DAVID G. PERKINS, 0000 STEVEN R. PERRY, 0000 FRANK S. PETTY, 0000 WILLIAM H PHELPS 0000 JOSE A. PICART, 0000 KENNETH L. PIEPER, 0000 JAMES F PIKE 0000 PAUL R. PLEMMONS, 0000 STEVE M. POET, 0000 RICHARD L. POLCZYNSKI. 0000

GERALD J. POLTORAK, 0000 RONALD W. PONTIUS, 0000 GINGER T. PRATT, 0000 WILLIAM H. PRATT, 0000 TIMOTHY J. QUINN, 0000 DUANE T. RACKLEY, 0000 ROBERT W BADCLIFFE 0000 JOHN L. RAMEY, 0000 JOE E. RAMIREZ, JR., 0000 ALLEN D. RAYMOND IV, 0000 DENNISK REDMOND 0000 GEORGE E. REED, 0000 GREGORY R. REID, 0000 WILLIAM B. REILLY, 0000 JAMES E. RENTZ, 0000 ROBERT L. REYENGA, 0000 MARTIN I. REYES, 0000 SANDRA V. RICHARDSON

0000 MICHAEL N. RILEY, 0000 LEOPOLDO A. RIVAS, 0000 MARK D ROCKE 0000 CARLOS RODRIGUEZ, 0000 DENNIS E. ROGERS, 0000 JAMES E. ROGERS, 0000 MICHAEL D. ROSENBAUM, 0000 JERRY H. ROTH, 0000 THOMAS J BOTH II 0000 JAMES R. ROWAN, 0000 LARRY D., RUGGLEY, 0000 MICHAEL A. RYAN, 0000 JOHN R. SADLER, 0000 SCOTT W. SALYERS, 0000 LUIS D. SANS, 0000 LAWRENCE H. SAUL, 0000 STEVEN B. SBOTO, 0000 JACK V. SCHERER, 0000 JAMES S. SCHISSER, 0000 THOMAS A SCHNEIDER 0000 CHARLES M. SELLERS, 0000 JULIA K. SENNEWALD, 0000 MICHAEL C. SEVCIK, 0000 DAVID G SHADDRIX 0000 MICHAEL A. SHALAK, 0000 WENDELL K. SHELTON, 0000 GUY T. SHIELDS, 0000 KEVIN A. SHWEDO, 0000 ROBERT W. SIEGERT III, 0000 STEVEN C. SIFERS, 0000 JAMES V SLAVIN 0000 CARLETON M. SMITH. 0000 DAVID J. SMITH, 0000 JEFFREY G. SMITH, JR., 0000 KEVIN M SMITH 0000 CHARLES O. SMITHERS III,

JOHN C. SNIDER, 0000 THOMAS J. SNUKIS, 0000 TEDDY R. SPAIN, 0000 THOMAS W. SPOEHR, 0000 PATRICK A. STALLINGS,

0000 DANIEL L. STEADMAN, 0000 RALPH R. STEINKE, 0000 GEORGE W STEURER 0000 MARK A. STEVENS, 0000 LARRY STUBBLEFIELD, 0000 DANIEL V. SULKA, 0000 GARRETT J. SULLIVAN, 0000 JACK N. SUMME, 0000 ROBERT L. SUTHARD, JR., 0000

GLENN H TAKEMOTO 0000 DANIEL L. TAYLOR, 0000 SAMUEL T. TAYLOR III, 0000

STUART S. TAYLOR, 0000 MICHAEL J. TERRY, 0000 DAVID J. THOMAS, 0000 LARRY L. THOMAS, 0000 RICHARD G. THOMPSON, 0000

JOSE A TORRES JR. 0000 SIMEON G. TROMBITAS, 0000 MICHAEL S. TUCKER, 0000 MICHAEL S. TUCKER, 0000 GERRY B. TURNBOW, 0000
CECILIA K. TYLER, 0000 NELVIN E. TYLER, JR., 0000 LANE M. VANDESTEEG, 0000
PETER J. VARLJEN, 0000
JAMES E. VEDITZ, 0000
MATHIAS D. VELASCO, 0000 MATHIAS R. VELASCO, 0000 EDWARD R. VISKER, 0000 EDWARD R. VISKER, 0000 KEITH R. VORE, 0000 JAMES I. VOSLER, 0000 JOSEPH L. VOTEL, 0000 MARTIN L. VOZZO, 0000 DWAYNE K. WAGNER, 0000 JOSEPH L. WALDEN, 0000 STEPHEN L. WALKER, 0000 ROY A. WALLACE, 0000 WENDELL C. WARNER, 0000 LEONARD D. WATERWORTH, 0000 CAVIET WATEINS 0000

THOMAS W. WEAFER, 0000

JAMES E. WEGER, 0000 JOHN M. WELSH, 0000 KEVIN R. WENDEL, 0000 JEFFREY S. WHITE, 0000 FRANCIS J. WIERCINSKI, 0000 STEVE T. WILBERGER, 0000 KEVIN V. WILKERSON, 0000 WILLIAM M. WILKINSON.

0000 GREGORY M. WILLIAMITIS,

0000 THOMAS W. WILLIAMS, 0000 THOMAS W. WILLIAMS, 0000 WILLIAM R. WILSON, 0000
WILLIAM T. WOLF, 0000
TERRY A. WOLFF, 0000
ALLEN F. WOODHOUSE, 0000
KEVIN V. WRIGHT, 0000
CHRISTOPHER J. YOUNG, 0000

DON C. YOUNG, 0000 JOSEPH D. YOUNG, 0000 MORRIS M. YOUNG, 0000 PAUL A. ZACHARZUK, 0000 JAMES E. ZANOL, 0000 MARK J. ZODDA, 0000 MICHAEL A. ZONFRELLI, 0000

X0000

IN THE MARINE CORPS

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADE INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES MA-RINE CORPS UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTION 624:

To be colonel

MICHAEL C. ALBO, 0000 BERNAL B. ALLEN, JR., 0000 GEORGE J. ALLEN, 0000 RONALD L. BAILEY, 0000 ROBERT G. BAKER, 0000 BRUCE M. BARNES, 0000 DAVID L. BARRACLOUGH, 0000

DENNIS W BEAL 0000 DREW A. BENNETT, 0000 INGRID E. BERGMAN, 0000 GLENN C. BIXLER, 0000 BARRY B. BIZZELL, 0000 LEONARD A. BLASIOL, 0000 ROBERT M. BRADY, 0000 DANNY L. BRUSH, 0000 SHERROD L. BUMGARDNER, JR., 0000

SALVADOR J. CALLEROS,

0000 WILLIAM M. CALLIHAN, 0000 RICHARD A. CHRISTIE, 0000 PAUL CROISETIERE, 0000 ROBERT B. CRONIN, 0000 WILLIAM R. CRONIN, 0000 DANIEL E. CUSHING, 0000 GEORGE M. DALLAS, 0000 EUGENE T. DANIELS, JR.,

HENRY C. DEWEY III, 0000 RONALD G. DODSON, JR, 0000

HENRY J. DONIGAN III, 0000 ROSE M. FAVORS, 0000 WILLIAM S. FEBUARY, 0000 MARC W. FISHER, JR., 0000 JEFFREY E. FONDAW, 0000 STEPHEN L. FORAND, 0000 STEPHEN H. FOREMAN, 0000 RAYMOND C. FOX, 0000 BRUCE A. GANDY, 0000 GEORGE P. GARRETT, 0000 THOMAS C. GREENWOOD, 0000

THOMAS E. GREGORY, 0000 DARCY E. GRISIER II, 0000 CRAIG L. GROTZKY, 0000 GORDON B. HABBESTAD. 0000 WALTER B. HAMM, 0000

TIMOTHY C. HANIFEN, 0000 THOMAS L. HANKS, 0000 WILLIAM E. HARDY, 0000 ANTHONY M. HASLAM, 0000 KEVIN A. HOEY, 0000 RANDALL W. HOLM, 0000 TIMOTHY B. HOWARD, 0000

FRED S. HUDSON, JR., 0000 DOUGLAS R. ISLEIB, 0000 MICHAEL K. JOHNSON, 0000 DANIEL L. KARLS, 0000 ELLIOT S. KATZ, 0000 JAMES R. KEADLE, 0000 JAMES J. KINNERUP III, 0000 TIMOTHY J KOLB 0000 DANIEL D. LESHCHYSHYN,

0000 WILLIAM R. LISTON, 0000 ROBERT E. LOVE, 0000 WILLIAM LUCENTA, 0000 MARK D. MAHAFFEY, 0000 MICHAEL P. MARLETTO

LANCE R. MCBRIDE, 0000 RONNELL R. MC FARLAND. 0000

DAVID W. MCLAWHORN, 7833 WILLIAM J. MILES, 0000 CLAYTON F. NANS, 0000 PATRICK M. O'DONOGUE,

0000 KEVIN P. O'KEEFE, 0000 STEPHEN W. OTTO, 0000 JONATHAN T. PASCO, 0000 STEPHEN M. POMEROY, 0000 JOHN J. POMFRET, 0000 JEFFREY A. POWERS, 0000 JOHN M. REED, 0000 RICHARD M. REED, 0000 VICTOR J BILEY III 0000 MARK R. SAVARESE, 0000 JONATHAN R. SCHARFEN 0000

RAYMOND E. SCHWARTZ III.

0000 DAVID L. SHELTON, 0000 HARMON A. STOCKWELL. 0000 GARY S. SUPNICK, 0000

THOMAS B. SWARD, 0000 STEVEN J THOMPSON 0000 ANTHONY E. VANDYKE, 0000 DENISE R. VANPEURSEM, 0000

CLIFTON E WASHINGTON

ERIC C. WEBER, 0000 EARL S. WEDERBROOK, 0000 CHRISTOPHER M. WELDON, JEFFREY A. WHITE, 0000 JOHN D WILLIAMS 0000 JOSEPH R. WINGARD, 0000 JOHN E. WISSLER, 0000 RICHARD W. YODER, 0000

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

STAY THE COURSE—DON'T TAP OUR STRATEGIC OIL RESERVES

HON. MAX SANDLIN

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. SANDLIN. Mr. Speaker, I welcome an apparent change in direction by Energy Secretary Bill Richardson away from draining millions of barrels of oil from the strategic Petroleum Reserve (SPR) in the coming weeks.

Draining the Strategic Petroleum Reserve and dumping foreign oil on our market is a dangerous precedent, both from an economic standpoint and as a national security issue. I am glad that Secretary Richardson backed down.

The Administration's strategy on dealing with rising oil prices has been unclear. Last month, Secretary Richardson indicated that the Energy Department might move to open the SPR and encourage foreign countries to dump oil on the U.S. market in an effort to reduce prices. The New York Times reported Sunday that Secretary Richardson is reluctant to open the reserves, but Time reports this week that "Richardson is quietly but vigorously pushing a proposal that would pour millions of barrels of oil from America's Strategic Petroleum Reserve onto the market in the coming weeks."

Mr. Speaker, I have been a vocal critic of plans to use oil from the SPR in response to the rising price of oil. Doing so would be extremely dangerous to our economy and our national security. The reserve was created to fill any gaps in oil supply during war or other emergencies. Using it to manage price is improper and contrary to long-standing practices.

It now appears that the White House has decided to stay the course. I have told the Administration that releasing oil from the reserves would not only threaten oil producers, but sets a dangerous precedent. Our Strategic Petroleum Reserve must be closely guarded in order to maintain our national security.

Large-scale government intervention in the oil market would hurt domestic oil producers. I know that high heating oil prices are a serious problem for working families in the Northeast, but Texas oil producers are not to blame. If we open our reserves every time the price of oil moves, we invite even more harassment from OPEC and the threat of an actual supply disruption.

Mr. Speaker, this entire episode highlights the fact that we need a national energy policy. Right now, all we do is respond to the emergency of the moment. We have no plan, no policy.

Secretary Richardson has wandered all over the map on this issue. I'm glad that good policy and reason prevailed.

President Clinton needs to take the long view of America's energy issues. I am hopeful that the White House will focus its energy on developing a long-term energy policy that will protect American consumers and producers and while ensuring our national security.

HONORING VICTORIA CRISTIANO MARION

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a woman who is a woman who has made a difference in her community.

Victoria Cristiano Marion was born to immigrant parents in Pueblo, Colorado. She knows that as long as there is family and education, little else matters. From the first day of school, Victoria knew that respect for education and for teachers was very important. She always knew she wanted to be a teacher and after she graduated from high school, Victoria attended summer classes at Western State College in Gunnison, Colorado. She passed the state exam that qualified her to teach in Colorado.

Victoria's first teaching position was in Pueblo County at Pleasant View School. After that, she worked at Danforth School and became a full-time teacher when she received her life certificate in teaching in 1929. She taught at Bessemer for four years and then accepted a position at Strack School.

In 1943, Victoria passed the principal's exam and was appointed teacher-principal at Strack. Victoria was principal at Strack, Edison School, Washington School, Goodnight School and Sunset Park School. She retired from Sunset in 1973.

During World War II, Victoria was called upon to sponsor Italian prisoners of war who were stationed in Pueblo. She taught them about life in America and also about the democratic form of government. Many of those soldiers immigrated to the United States after the war. One of those soldiers eventually became her husband. Victoria married Vincent Marion and they shared 40 years together.

Victoria taught naturalization classes for Italians that wished to become American citizens after the war. She also helped organize the local Dante Alighieri Society, an organization dedicated to preserving the Italian language. She received the honor of Cavaliere of the Italian Republic for her many years of service to the Italian people.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer a tribute to Victoria Cristiano Marion. She is a great American, dedicated to education and people.

protect American consumers and producers HONORING MR. CLARENCE E. EGER

HON. JOHN P. MURTHA

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, this month, Mr. Clarence E. Eger marked his 50th year as a Cresson Township Supervisor.

During this half-century of public service, Mr. Eger has worked day and night on all facets of Township activity—always willing to help, and always anxious to serve the people in the region. Such service has resulted in an extremely high quality of community service.

The type of dedication to public service shown by Mr. Eger serves as a hallmark of the kind of selfless dedication and commitment that are the very heart and spirit of the United States of America. We're fortunate in our area to still have such strong commitment from so many individuals, and it's one of the characteristics that make communities like Cresson Township one of the best places to live.

It's an honor and pleasure for me to commend Mr. Eger on his 50 years of public service, and to make these remarks as a reminder to all Americans of how this type of dedication can improve the lives of so many people, produce tremendous progress in a community, and serve as the guideposts that keep our Nation the greatest in the world.

I congratulate Mr. Eger and wish him many more years of service.

IN MEMORY OF SGT. GEORGE R. DINGWALL OF THE MIDDLE-TOWN, CONNECTICUT POLICE DE-PARTMENT

HON. SAM GEJDENSON

OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join members of the Middletown Police Department, thousands of residents of the city and his home town of Haddam, and his family in remembering Sgt. George R. Dingwall. Sergeant Dingwall was killed in the line of duty on January 28 while attempting to apprehend two burglary suspects. Sergeant Dingwall made the supreme sacrifice in order to protect residents of his community and our State.

Sergeant Dingwall was a 19-year veteran of the Middletown Police Department After joining the force in 1981, he served in a number of capacities, including in the traffic division, as a detective and as a member of the Department's SWAT team. He was promoted to Sergeant in 1989.

George Dingwall is described by those who knew him best—his colleagues, family and neighbors—as "a nice person," "a great guy" and "a great neighbor." Police Chief Edward Brymer has stated that Sergeant Dingwall

• This "bullet" symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor. Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor. "had a distinguished career and was well respected by all of us at the Middletown Police Department." Lt. David Gervais, who joined the force with Sergeant Dingwall, commented that "he would drop everything to help family and friends." Sergeant Dingwall was also well-known as a loving husband and father.

Mr. Speaker, I extend my deepest sympathy to Sergeant Dingwall's family and friends, members of the Middletown Police Department, and residents of Middletown and Haddam. Sgt. George Dingwall is an American hero and he exemplifies the qualities of an extraordinary public servant—dedication to community, courage and selflessness.

HONORING CHARLES M. BURT

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Charles M. Burt for being named the Irrigation Person of the Year by the California Irrigation Institute. Dr. Burt is currently a professor in the BioResource and Agricultural Engineering Department at the California Polytechnic State University, as well as the Director of the university's Irrigation Training and Research Center. Dr. Burt is being honored on January 24th at the California Irrigation Institute's 38th Annual Meeting.

Charles M. Burt is being recognized for his many contributions to education and the advancement of irrigation knowledge and practice. In addition to his roles as a professor and the Director of the Irrigation Training and Research Center, Burt is a member of several related organizations. He belongs to the American Society of Agricultural Engineers, the Water Resources Engineering Division of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and the Irrigation Association. He is also a member of the Advisory Board for the Office of Water Conservation, the American Society of Agronomy, the United States Committee on Irrigation and Drainage (USCID), and numerous others

Dr. Burt began his irrigation career in 1975, when he designed several large drip systems in the USSR and Iran, as a Keller Engineering Irrigation System Designer. He worked on this through 1976 until he worked as an Irrigation System Designer for Wren-Oneal Co. in Fresno. In 1981 and 1982 Dr. Burt worked on irrigation design and project planning as the Chief Engineer and partner of JM Lord, Inc. Since that time, he has continued his commitment to irrigation and education at the California Polytechnic State University.

Mr. Speaker, I want to congratulate Charles M. Burt for being named Irrigation Person of the Year. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Dr. Burt many more years of continued success.

HONORING COUNTY COMMISSIONER RALPH JOHNSON

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to pause and remember a man who surpassed personal challenges to give fully to his community. Mr. Ralph Johnson passed away on December 28, 1999. He was 51.

Ralph served as a County Commissioner in Elbert county since 1996. He was a rancher who spent most of his life in the small town of Agate, Colorado. Before he was elected County Commissioner, Ralph served on the Agate School Board. In his younger days, he was a rodeo rider. In 1974 he was involved in an accident that nearly took his life. Ralph lived, but he lost the use of his legs and the accident caused health problems that eventually lead to his death.

Ralph was a soft-spoken cowboy who brought dedication and a sense of humor to his public service. He was always committed to his community. He will be remembered for his dedication and his readiness to do anything it took to serve the people.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer tribute in memory of Ralph Johnson, a cowboy's cowboy and a great American.

THE SHANGHAI SYNAGOGUE: A VERY SPECIAL JEWISH COMMUNITY

HON. TOM LANTOS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, this past December, Congregation B'nai Emunah in San Francisco marked its fiftieth anniversary. This Saturday, the congregation will celebrate this important milestone. I invite my colleagues to join me in congratulating this very special Jewish community on its longevity, unique history, and contributions to our city.

The name of the Congregation—B'nai Emunah—means "Children of Faith," and its history is truly unique. After Jewish businesses and synagogues were destroyed by the Nazis in 1938, many countries closed their borders to Jewish migrants who sought to flee the racism, terror and persecution they found under Nazi rule.

One stunning exception to this was the city of Shanghai, China. There threatened remnants of the Jewish community from Germany and Austria found refuge. Shanghai was a free city governed by the international Shanghai Municipal Council. The city and the Chinese people had already welcomed thousands of Russian Jewish refugees after the Soviet revolution of 1917. In 1938 Shanghai required no visas or other formalities for the more than 20,000 Jewish immigrants from Germany and Austria who flocked to that safe haven.

Mr. Speaker, immediately upon arriving in Shanghai, the German and Austrian Jewish community rebuilt in camps the sanctuaries that they had watched the Nazi mob destroy in their homelands. When the war in the Pacific broke out in 1941, the community was ghettoized in a dilapidated Chinese slum, but their synagogues continued to function. They survived and flourished even under Japanese occupation and occasional mistaken bombs from U.S. Air Force planes.

Following World War II and the outbreak of the Civil War in China, the entire Jewish community in Shanghai left China and dispersed. Thousands relocated to San Francisco, the nearest American port. In 1949 a group of dedicated Jews met with one of the rabbis from Shanghai and made the decision to reestablish the synagogue they had twice lost. The new congregation embraced all the elements of the late Shanghai community—Russian, Sephardim and German/Austrian—and was named congregation B'nai Emunah, although it has always been known as "The Shanghai Synagogue."

In the last fifty years, Congregation B'nai Emunah has expanded and flourished. A new generation has emerged to whom the Shanghai story is as important to their own identity as it was to the preceding generation. This jubilee fiftieth year will see the building of the "Shanghai Center," which will house a museum, library and archive. Mr. Speaker, I invite my colleagues to join me in extending congratulations to Congregation B'nai Emunah on this very important occasion.

A TRIBUTE TO SONIA SANCHEZ

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute to a woman who has become a living legend in Philadelphia and around the world, Sonia Sanchez. Sonia Sanchez deserves our praise for reasons more numerous than can be listed here. Her leading roles as a mother, activist, professor, and poet have made her a beacon of hope to people who have traditionally marginalized in our society, including people of color, homosexuals, women, the poor and the young. A petite, African-American woman born into a poor family in Alabama, Sonia Sanchez transcended what most would consider a modest existence to become one of Temple University's most cherished professors. It is with a hint of sadness that I reflect on her accomplishments today, for last month Sonia decided to retire from Temple University, after 22 years of service.

To realize the significance that Sonia has had on our community, one need look no further than her resume, which serves as a testament to Sonia's courage and the strength of her convictions. She is the author of 16 books including Homecoming, We a BaddDDD People, and Homegirls and Handgrenades, for which she won the American Book Award in 1985. Sonia has also edited two anthologies: We Be Word Sorcerers: 25 Stories by Black Americans and 360 Degrees of Blackness Coming at You. She was furthermore a contributing editor to The Black Scholar and The Journal of African Studies. Sonia has won a multitude of national awards for her accomplishments in literature including the Governor's Award for Excellence in the Humanities in 1988 and the Outstanding Arts Award from the Pennsylvania Coalition of Black Women.

Sonia's works are now recognized all over the world. She has lectured at over 500 universities and colleges in the United States and has traveled extensively, reading her poetry in Africa, Cuba, England, the People's Republic of China, Norway, and Canada. Despite such international acclaim, Sonia has always focused her efforts to the shaping of young minds, which for the past 22 years has been back in Philadelphia at Temple University. Her brilliant career in education, which began on the west coast at San Francisco State University (where she started one of the first black studies curriculums in the United States) has always pushed the edges, breaking down barriers between men and women, whites and blacks, and intellectuals and the working class.

This unique contribution has not gone unnoticed at Temple University. Sonia was the first Presidential Fellow at Temple University and currently holds the Laura Carnell Chair in English as well as being the Chairperson of the Women's Studies Program. As you can see, Temple University will sorely miss the presence of Sonia Sanchez. However, I am confident that retirement will not mute the voice that has influenced so many of us over the past 65 years. It is with great pride that I reflect on these past years in which Philadelphia has been home to Sonia Sanchez. And it is with great enthusiasm that I hope for many more.

HONORING DR. ROBERT S. YOUNG

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to pause and remember a man that will be missed by many people in Southern Colorado. Dr. Robert S. Young passed away on January 19, 2000. He was 85 years old.

Dr. Young was the medical director of CF&I Steel Corporation from 1969 to 1984 and again in the early 1990's. He loved working at the steel mill. He was dedicated to assuring that workers followed safety rules to prevent injuries suffered from occupational hazards. When injuries did occur, Dr. Young was always ready to make sure the employee was fully recovered before returning to the workplace. He enjoyed the associations he developed with staff and employees. His relationships at the mill were the most satisfying part of his career.

Dr. Young was a medic in World War II and during his time overseas, he worked with Dr. Hatt from Massachusetts who was in charge of the Shiners Hospital. Dr. Young worked at the Shiners Hospital for Crippled Children in Honolulu after the war.

Dr. Young had a private practice in Fort Scott, Kansas and Pueblo, Colorado for 26 years. He will always be remembered for giving the best care to his patients.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute in memory of Dr. Robert Young. His memory will live forever in the commitment of quality care for patients.

TRIBUTE TO REV. PAUL BINION, EDWARD RICHARDSON, JUDGE IVY GLOVER ROBERTS, CYNTHIA ANN STERLING, AND JOE WIL-LIAMS

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Rev. Paul Binion, Edward Richardson, Judge Ivy Glover Roberts, Cynthia Ann Sterling, and Joe Williams, for being selected the Year 2000 Portraits of Success by KSEE 24 and Companies that Care. In celebration of African-American History Month, these five distinguished local leaders are being honored for their unique contributions to the betterment of their community.

Rev. Paul Binion has served the Westside Church of God for the past twenty-one years as Senior Pastor. In addition, he serves on many boards and committees: Evangelicals for Social Action, Black Californians for Life, Prison Fellowship of Central California, and Interstate Association of the Church of God. He also serves on the No-Name Fellowship Steering Committee, Fresno Leadership Foundation, Parents Aware, Fresno Pacific University Service Corp., Fresno Institute for Urban Leadership, and West Fresno Ministerial Alliance.

Edward Richardson was the first African-American building contractor to be licensed in the City of Fresno by the State of California. Mr. Richardson has become a mentor for other African-Americans starting his or her own construction companies. He is soon to be inducted into the African-American Museum for the work he has done in the Central Valley.

Judge Ivy Glover Roberts maintains a private law practice, in addition to her duties as the University Complex Developer for Wilberforce University. Previously she was an administrative law judge for the State of California for eight years, and was Criminal Courts Commissioner, Deputy District Attorney, and Deputy Probation Officer for Los Angeles County.

Cynthia Ann Sterling is a full-time funeral director and grief counselor, as managing director of Sterling Funeral Home, Inc. In addition, she serves on the Fresno City Planning Commission, is State President of the National Funeral Directors & Morticians Association, President of Fresno African-American Minstries, and a Board member of the Girl Scouts of America. Sterling Funeral Home is a Fresno tradition, founded in 1949 by Cynthia's parents, Elma and Feltus Sterling.

Joe Williams is CEO of Richard Heath & Associates, responsible for the day-to-day operation of this $2 million corporation that has contracts with the State of California Healthy Families Program, energy conservation programs with PG&E, Southern California Gas, San Diego Gas & Electric, and Southern California Edison. He is former executive director of Fresno County Economic Opportunities Commission, responsible for Head Start, refugee services, youth-at-risk services, and many others.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great honor that I pay tribute to Rev. Paul Binion, Edward Richardson, Judge Ivy Glover Roberts, Cynthia Ann Sterling, and Joe Williams for being recognized as the KSEE 24 Companies that Care 2000 Portraits of Success honorees. I applaud the contributions, ideas, and leadership they have exhibited in our community. I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing these fine people many more years of continued success.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CHARLES F. BASS

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I was regrettably absent on Monday, January 31, and consequently missed a recorded vote on H. Con. Res. 244. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall vote No. 2.

HONORING JAMES A. BARRETT

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to pause and remember the life of a World War II veteran who sadly passed away on January 4, 2000.

James A. Barrett was born on January 5, 1919 to James and Ida Barrett in Cortez, Colorado. James attended school in Cortez and graduated from Cortez Union High School. During World War II, James served in the United States Army and Air Force. For nearly two years, he was held captive as a prisoner of war in Germany.

James was a life member of the Cortez Elks Lodge #1789, a member of the Mancos Veteran's of Foreign Wars, and the Mancos Lodge of Masons. He married Frances Normera Petty in 1940 and they celebrated 59 years of marriage.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute in James memory and honor. He was a great American who greatly contributed to his country and community.

HONORING THE NATIONAL APPRECIATION DAY FOR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

SPEECH OF

HON. DENNIS J. KUCINICH

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES $Tuesday,\ February\ 1,\ 2000$

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the National Appreciation Day For Catholic Schools. As a former Catholic school student, I know first hand the value of a Catholic education. Catholic schools teach students faith, discipline, pride, and a respect for learning. They instill a strong moral foundation necessary for children to grow while distinguishing right from wrong. Catholic schools are unique in that they allow students to grow and learn in a spiritual environment, establishing the body as a whole; mind and soul.

I especially wish to recognize the delegation of students, teachers, and parents that make the National Appreciation Day For Catholic Schools a special day. Their commitment to ensuring an exceptional Catholic education and maintaining quality Catholic schools ensures that Catholic students in the future will continue to benefit from outstanding educational opportunities. An overwhelming percentage of students in our Diocese of Cleveland attend college, which is a sign of the excellent work of our local Catholic School systems are doing.

I would also like to recognize the National Catholic Educational Association (NCEA) for their efforts to promote educational and catechetical goals. By sponsoring events like the Seton Awards, which recognize individuals who have made outstanding contributions to Catholic education, the NCEA works diligently to insure better education across America.

Providing excellent educational opportunities for all children is one of the most important goals in our society. I am encouraged by the involvement of the students, teachers and parents who are observing the National Appreciation Day For Catholic Schools.

A TRIBUTE TO REV. VERNAL E. SIMMS

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Rev. Vernal E. Simms, the newly-elected President of Black Clergy of Philadelphia and a distinguished member of the church. Rev. Simms was born and raised in Boston, Massachusetts. Throughout his life, he has made undying efforts to serve the community and push forward to better the church and its people. He has spent tireless days helping in the production and creation of community developments such as weekly and monthly food programs, day care centers, and facilities to accommodate the older generation of his community. Rev. Simms has managed to organize a new way of life for many and continues to provide consistent efforts in furthering these ideas and expanding on the future of all communities that surround him. In the course of sharing his knowledge and compassion he has touched many while pastoring in Plymouth, Massachusetts; Chatham, New York; Brooklyn, New York; and Moorestown, New Jersey.

Rev. Simms currently serves as the pastor of Morris Brown African Methodist Episcopal Church in North Philadelphia, and the Vice President of the African Methodist Episcopal Preacher's meeting of Philadelphia and the Vicinity. While assuming such immense and prestigious responsibilities, he has found time to be a loving father of four and the husband of Mary L. Boxley.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my fellow Philadelphians to join me today in congratulating Rev. Vernal E. Simms, Sr. on his election as President of Black Clergy of Philadelphia and vicinity. I am confident that this organization will continue to grow and prosper under his leadership. I look forward to his successful future.

HONORING DONALD R. D'AMICO, WINNER OF THE AMERICAN CEN-TURY AWARD

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to honor a winner of the American Century Award, Ronald R. D'Amico, Retired Colonel of the United States Air Force.

Colonel D'Amico served in the USAF for nearly 30 years, most of which were as a combat and fighter pilot. He flew 129 combat missions during the Korean War and over 100 missions in Vietnam during three tours of duty. Colonel D'Amico was awarded four Distinguished Flying Crosses for heroism, two Purple Hearts, and thirteen Air Medals among a total of 50 awards and decorations.

Colonel D'Amico also displayed a quality of character that makes us all proud to be Americans. During the Korean conflict, Don used some of his spare time to help an orphanage for Korean children. He would gather milk that the soldiers would not drink and take it to the orphanage along with other supplies, some of which were donated and mailed from his parents' church in Rochester, New York. Even now, Don keeps pictures of the children he helped.

During the Vietnam Conflict, Don nearly lost his life after being shot down during an attack on a heavily fortified enemy position. Fortunately, he and his crew were rescued and after nine months in the hospital, Don returned for two more tours of duty.

Since retiring from the Air Force in 1977, Don continues to be involved with issues and community service. In the 1980's, he volunteered with a variety of organizations that worked to educate America about the dangers of Communism. In 1989, he joined the Board of Directors of Street-Smart Inc., a program helping inner-city youth avoid the dangers of gang involvement. In 1990, Street-Smart was recognized by President Bush as one of the "Thousand Points of Light".

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to honor Donald R. D'Amico, American Century Award Winner. He risked his life in defense of freedom and still gives selflessly to his country and community.

IN MEMORY OF DON HUTSON

HON. IKE SKELTON

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, it is with deep sadness that I inform the House of the death of Don Hutson, of Lebanon, Missouri. He was 68.

Mr. Hutson was born on November 4, 1931, in Kansas City, MO, to Alpha Henry and Lola Hutson. He graduated as valedictorian from Oak Grove High School and went on to graduate with honors from Central College. In 1958, he earned a juris doctor degree with honors from George Washington University Law School. He then spent 4 years as a staff assistant to Senator Stuart Symington. This gave him an opportunity to work on many legislative issues beneficial to the state of Missouri

Mr. Hutson was a well known and respected attorney, who practiced law in Kansas City and Lebanon for 40 years. Prior to entering private practice, he was appointed assistant prosecuting attorney for Jackson County, serving as chief trail attorney for most of the major felony cases in Kansas City. He was commended for successfully prosecuting and convicting dozens of organized-crime figures during one of the first national organized-crime drives.

Mr. Hutson was recognized for his numerous achievements throughout his life. He was named in Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, Who's Who in America, Who's Who in the Midwest and Who's Who in American Law. In addition, he was active in his community and civic affairs. Mr. Hutson was an ordained minister in the Christian Church and served as a Christian Church minister at Oak Grove, Lone Jack and other churches in Missouri. He was the founder of the Lebanon Arts Council and involved with the Lebanon Chamber of Commerce and the Lebanon Concert Association.

I know the Members of the House will join me in extending heartfelt condolences to his family: his son, Eric; his three daughters, Sheila, Robin, and Heather; and five grandchildren.

A TRIBUTE TO REV. RANDALL McCASKILL

HON. ROBERT A. BRADY

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor Rev. Randall McCaskill and commend him for his accomplishments during his 3 year tenure as head of the Black Clergy of Philadelphia and the surrounding vicinity. Rev. McCaskill has inspired and aided countless citizens of Philadelphia during his leadership. Working together with the Rendell administration in fostering improved inter-racial relations. Rev. McCaskill gave his unique insight during such trying times as the 1998 Gravs Ferry incident. It was in times of urgency such as this that Rev. McCaskill showed us how truly important he is to our city. As President of the Black Clergy of Philadelphia, he recognized his role as a motivating force in our community. He consistently offered solutions to numerous problems our city faced, maybe best illustrated by his diplomatic efforts during the sensitive School Board of Philadelphia budget negotiations of 1998-99 and his key role in resolving the potentially crippling dispute between SEPTA management, and its union heads and employees.

Rev. Randall McCaskill has been anything but passive in his efforts to help Philadelphians in need. He has assumed massive responsibility within a diverse body of national and local organizations, most obvious being his role as founder and pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church. As pastor, McCaskill manages the fiscal solvency of the church, which offers day care, job training, medical services, etc. Furthermore, Rev. McCaskill is a member of the original charter founders of the Opportunities Industrialization Centers and is Vice-President of the Strawberry Mansion Corporation, which manages a $4 million budget neighborhood investment project. He is Vice-President of the Community Development Corporation, a multi-million dollar corporation which addresses issues of housing, rehabilitation, weatherization, and other related redevelopment issues. Rev. McCaskill is also Chair of the Community Renaissance Alliance, Inc., an organization that works toward building low income housing for Philadelphia Senior Citizens.

Mr. Speaker, Rev. McCaskill is more than just a dynamic leader and a man of God, Randall McCaskill is my friend. I know I speak for all Philadelphians when I say thank you to him for his continued participation in the struggle to improve the conditions of our proud city. We are eternally grateful to him for showing us that where there is a will there is a way. By breaking down barriers along racial lines, socio-economic lines, etc., Rev. McCaskill has become the personification of our city's ageold tradition of "brotherly love"; a truly remarkable man.

HONORING FORMER COLORADO LEGISLATOR AND FBI SPECIAL AGENT, ROBERT DENIER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a true advocate of crime prevention.

Robert DeNier has played a role in trying to stop criminal activity in Southwestern Colorado for most of his life. Robert served as a special agent in the FBI for 27 years. During that time, he worked hard to eliminate crime.

Robert also served in the Colorado State House of Representatives from 1976 to 1982 and in the State Senate from 1986 to 1990. While in office, Robert tried to pass legislation appropriating funds to be designated for youth crime intervention. Legislation on the issue never passed while Robert was in office. However, in 1995, under a bill co-sponsored by State Senator Jim Dyer and State Senator Ben Alexander, legislation and an appropriation to build a detention center passed through both houses and became reality.

The center is located in Durango and, after a unanimous vote of the Colorado General Assembly, is named after Robert. The Robert DeNier Youth Services Center was opened on January 25, 2000.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute in honor and thanks to Robert DeNier, a man that is dedicated to making Colorado a better place to live.

HONORING WILLIAM M. LYLES

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor William M. Lyles for being named the 1999 Entrepreneur in Residence, a program of the Sid Craig School of Business at California State University, Fresno. Each year the program hosts a successful entrepreneur in order to stimulate local business interest

William M. Lyles is the president and chief executive officer of Fresno-based Lyles Diversified, Inc. Lyles was selected as the 1999 Entrepreneur in Residence because of his tremendous qualifications and service to both the community at large and the business community.

Mr. Lyles' extensive business involvement includes: W.M. Lyles Co., a general engineering contractor engaged primarily in underground pipeline and utility construction, and Kaweah Construction Co., a general engineering contractor specializing in heavy concrete and mechanical construction. He is also involved in American Paving Co., a general engineering contractor with interests primarily in paving residential and commercial property, and Saratoga Capital, Inc., a San Jose-based property management corporation, handling rental properties and real estate sales. In addition, Lyles also holds a partnership in Pelco, a Clovis-based company designing, manufacturing, and marketing components for closed circuit television security and surveillance systems.

Lyles Diversified, Inc. is a California corporation engaged in construction and manufacturing. The company's varied interests include subdivision and industrial tract developments, real estate ownership and management, shopping centers, and farming interests. Lyles plays an active role in all of his business ventures.

Lyles has received several awards, including the 1991 Leon Peters Award, the 1992 Outstanding Philanthropist, and the Purdue Alumni Citizenship Award, among others.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor William L. Lyles for his achievements as a businessman. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Lyles many more years of continued success.

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT D. SQUIER

HON. ROBERT A. WEYGAND

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. WEYGAND. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a few minutes today to pay tribute to Robert D. Squier who passed away last week after a long illness. While his name may be familiar to some, particularly those with an interest in politics, people around the United States and even in some foreign countries know him by his work. Bob was a political consultant. He advised Presidents and would-be Presidents, Senators and those wishing to be Senators and Governors and hope-to-be Governors on how to conduct their campaigns and how to communicate their dreams, beliefs and accomplishments to the voters.

Bob believed deeply in his craft and in our political system. Despite what many think of his profession, he knew how important it is to reach out to voters. But he also knew his role. In an interview several years ago, he remarked, "the candidate is always more important than the consultant. The consultants that do poorly in this business are the ones who begin to forget that."

Bob only worked for Democrats, and the list of politicians he advised over the years is a who's who of Democratic politicians and a modern American history book itself. Squier began his career while still in college when he produced a campaign commercial for Orville Freeman, then Governor of Minnesota who would later become Secretary of Agriculture. He would later be hired by President Lyndon Johnson as a television advisor, and he went on to work for Hubert Humphrey's Presidential campaign. In the years that followed, the list of those that sought and benefited from his wisdom continued to grow; Muskie, Carter, DODD, ROCKEFELLER, Bumpers, Simon, Hart, BYRD, BIDEN, GRAHAM, ROBB, Pell, Richards, Clinton, GORE to name but only a few.

It is fair to say that politics was in his blood. I know, however, that it was also in his genes. I have been fortunate for many years to know and work with his son, Mark, who learned at his feet and went on to open his own firm. I extend to Mark and his brother, Robert, their 3 children, and Bob's wife, Prudence, my deepest sympathy.

HONORING ROLF FUNK

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a man from Colorado who has displayed tremendous amounts of determination and strength to overcome a life-threatening injury.

Mr. Rolf Funk, of Silverthorne, Colorado, has always had a love for skiing. During his sophomore year of high school, in 1951, Rolf started to pursue his passion and began ski jumping. After ten years of training and competition, Rolf decided to train for the Olympics. He became the first person to use a 900 meter ski jump. For the next 35 years, Rolf competed and won various medals and awards. In 1994, Rolf competed in the United States National Competition and finished in third place.

Then in 1995 tragedy struck. Many people believed that Rolf would never walk again, much less ski.

While Rolf was training in Breckenridge, Colorado, he was going down a run and struck a mogul unexpectedly. The impact was to Rolf's neck and back and he laid in the snow, unable to move. Ski Patrol units moved quickly to stabilize Rolf and to try to minimize the injuries and transport him to a medical facility.

Rolf was air-lifted to Denver Swedish Hospital. The verdict was a spinal cord injury that was initially paralyzing. Rolf was unable to move any of his extremities and the doctors decided that surgery was needed to relieve pressure to the spinal cord. It was unclear to the surgeon whether or not Rolf would receive any motor functions after the surgery. The surgery was a success, but at first there were no signs that it would help Rolf recover any mobility in his legs or arms. Day by day, however, Rolf began to get physical movements back in his extremities.

Rolf was transferred to Craig Hospital where specialists could concentrate on helping him recover. Rolf was convinced, in his heart, that he would not only walk again, but that he would continue his love, skiing. Just a few short weeks after the accident, Rolf was released from the hospital and he returned to Breckenridge to continue physical therapy. He worked hard and miraculously, in a relatively short time, Rolf was skiing again.

Just fourteen months after his accident, Rolf entered in the USSA Masters Competition. He did not place in that competition, but just participating was winning for him. The members of the USSA Masters presented Rolf with an honorary medal.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer tribute to Rolf Funk and congratulate him on a miraculous recovery, his patience, strength and faith. Rolf's resilliance and undying passion for life is an inspiration to us all.

SIKH BURNS SELF TO DEATH TO PROTEST POLICE BRUTALITY IN INDIA

HON. JOHN T. DOOLITTLE

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. DOOLITTLE. Mr. Speaker, I was distressed to hear that Mandeep Pal Singh Sodhi, a 27-year-old Sikh man, burned himself to death in front of the Uttar Pradesh Legislawas reported in the Hindustan Times on January 11. He was protesting police brutality against his family. Mandeep Pal Singh Sodhi's tive Assembly building. His self-immolation brothers were detained and brutalized by police. Their mother was promised an inquiry, but nothing happened. Recently, the Committee for Coordination on Disappearances in Punjab, led by Hindu human rights activist Ram Narayan Kumar, issued a preliminary report that included the names and addresses of 838 Sikhs who were picked up, tortured, murdered, and secretly disposed of by the police. According to figures compiled by the Punjab State Magistracy and by human rights groups, the Indian government has killed over a quarter of a million Sikhs since 1984.

It is not just Sikhs who have suffered this kind of oppression. The Indian government has victimized Christians, Muslims, Dalits, and others. Groups associated with the ruling BJP have burned down Christian churches and prayer halls. Allies of the government have murdered nuns, priests, and missionaries.

The self-immolation of Mandeep Pal Singh Sodhi should serve as a wake-up call to the country that proudly proclaims itself "the world's largest democracy." It should serve as a call to India to begin living up to the democratic principles that it proclaims. India must stop this police brutality and release its political prisoners. It must hold a free and fair internationally-supervised plebiscite on the issue of independence in Khalistan, Kashmir, Nagaland, and wherever else people within India are struggling for freedom. Until then, the U.S. should stop its aid to India and encourage it to act like the democratic country it claims to be.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit the Hindustan Times article into the RECORD.

[From the Hindustan Times, Jan. 11, 2000] SELF IMMOLATION IN FRONT OF UP ASSEMBLY (By Bhupendra Pandey)

LUCKNOW, JANUARY 10-Motorists, pedestrians and policemen watched in shock as a young man, allegedly because of police harassment, immolated himself on the busy road opposite the Vidhan Sabha on Monday afternoon.

The 27-year-old youth, identified as Mandeep Pal Singh Sodhi, a resident of Krishna Nagar, suffered 70 per cent burns and died on way to hospital.

Later, the police inspector posted at Krishna Nagar was sent to the police lines for illegally detaining the deceased's brother and harassing his family members. Chief Minister Ram Prakash Gupta has announced a financial assistance of Rs 1 lakh to the dependents of the victim. The District Magistrate of Lucknow has directed the ADM, City, to probe the incident.

According to eyewitnesses, Mandeep got off a bus near the Royal Hotel intersection and doused himself with kerosene. Then, he went towards the Assembly and set himself on fire and started running. Soon, he was transformed into a ball of fire.

After he collapsed and lay writhing on the road, three policemen tried feebly to rescue him. Others also joined them, but by then Mandeep had already suffered excessive burns.

Thereafter, he was taken to the nearby Shyama Prasad Mukherjee Hospital from where he was referred to the KGMC. But he succumbed to burn injuries on the way.

Initially, policemen were unable to identify the youth but later found a slip of paper tucked in his shoes. According to it, Mandeep ran a small chemists shop outside a private nursing home in Krishna Nagar.

Meanwhile, Mandeep's mother, Manpreet Kaur, has accused the police of forcing her son to commit suicide. with police harassment, my son committed suicide,'' she said.

According to her, her husband, Surendra Pal Singh, who died five years ago, ran a flourishing transport business. But it ran into tough times after his death. She said that her tale of woes began a year ago when the SO of Sarojini Nagar raided her house and detained her two sons, Yashpal and Inderpal, without specifying the charges. Later, they were booked in a case of a motorcycle theft. In March last year, the two were again booked in a case of another motorcycle theft and jailed. The two brothers were also booked under the Gangster Act.

Mrs. Kaur said that she had earlier met then Chief Minister Kalyan Singh and also the Circle Officer of Sarojini Nagar. She had been assured of an inquiry into the matter. But nothing happened. In fact, Yashpal was picked again on Saturday night in connection with a recent case of motorcycle theft in Krishna Nagar.

Today, Mrs. Kaur decided to complain to District Magistrate and despite Mandeep's request to her to stay at home, she left for the DM's office. Soon after Mandeep too boarded a bus for the Vidhan Sabha.

Mrs. Kaur learnt about her son's immolation in the afternoon when she came home after meeting the DM. Yashpal was released by the police following the DM's interven-

STEM CELLS MAY BE THE KEY TO CURING PARKINSON'S AND MANY OTHER DISEASES

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to introduce a resolution to allow Federal Funding of human pluripotent stem cell research to help us further understand Parkinson's disease and other medical conditions. I am asking for no specific amount of money, nor to direct disease-specific research. I am only asking that Federal money be allowed to be used to utilize the next best chance science has, to not only treat, but to cure, debilitating and life threatening illnesses that afflict millions of Americans.

Many people have been confusing human pluripotent stem cell research with human embryo research. Stem cells are not embryos. There is a ban on the use of Federal funds for human embryo research in the United States. Stem cells cannot develop into a complete human being, and therefore, under the law, they are not embryos.

Stem cells are a type of cell that can be turned into almost any type of cell or tissue in the body. With further research, these cells may be used as "replacement" cells and tissues to treat many diseases including Parkinson's disease, Alzheimer's disease, diabetes, AIDS, Lou Gehrig's disease and others. Stem cell research holds hope of one day being able to treat brain injury, spinal cord injury, and stroke for which there is currently no treatment available. And they may solve the problem of the body's reaction to foreign tissue, resulting in dramatic improvements in the treatment of a number of life-threatening conditions, such as burns and kidney failure, for which transplantation is currently used.

The resolution discusses Parkinson's disease in particular for many reasons. My family has been personally affected by this devastating illness and I am proud to serve as cochair of the Congressional Working Group on Parkinson's Disease. However, it is science that makes the best argument to lead with this disease. With all that is already known about Parkinson's disease, it is believed that with Federal funds and stem cell research it is very possible that Parkinson's disease could not only be treatable, but curable within as little as five years!

Dr. Gerald D. Fischback, the Director of National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, in testimony last year to the Senate said, "I concur that we are close to solvingand I mean the word 'solving'-Parkinson's Disease. I hesitate to put an actual year number on it. I think, with all the intensive effort. with a little bit of skill and luck, five to ten years is not unrealistic. We will do everything possible to reduce that below five years. I would not rule that out."

Mr. Speaker, here is why that is possible. Parkinson's disease is a progressive degenerative brain disease which kills a specialized and vital type of brain cell, a cell which produces the substance dopamine, that is essential for normal movement and balance. The loss of these dopamine-producing cells causes symptoms, including slowness and paucity of movement, tremor, stiffness, and difficulty walking and balancing, which makes the sufferer unable to carry out the normal activities of daily living. In 30% of the cases those symptoms include dementia. As the disease progresses, it inflicts horrific physical, emotional, and financial burdens on the patient and family, requiring the caregiver to assist in the activities of daily living, and may eventually lead to placement in a nursing home until death.

With further research into stem cells, scientists will be able to "reprogram" the stem cells into the dopamine-producing cells which are lost in Parkinson's disease.

Parkinson's disease affects at least one million Americans. Fifty-thousand are diagnosed each year and for every one diagnosed, two who have Parkinson's disease are not diagnosed. It is alarming to think that two million Americans with Parkinson's disease are undiagnosed.

Parkinson's disease costs the Federal Government approximately $10 billion in healthcare costs, and on average, the cost per patient is $5,000 per year. As a society, we spend $15 billion a year on Parkinson's disease and that is only in direct costs for treatments that only bring temporary relief.

Building on the technology developed from research on Parkinson's disease makes treatments and even cures possible for many conditions. These include Alzheimer's, diabetes, AIDS, Lou Gehrig's, brain injury, spinal cord injury, stroke, and problems with the body's reaction to foreign tissue. It may even provide for safer and more effective ways to test drugs without experimenting on humans and animals. We cannot allow the opportunities afforded us by stem cell research to go untapped!

The National Institutes of Health has proposed guidelines to human stem cell research to address the legal and ethical issues surrounding this particular type of research. It is being approached in a responsible way to utilize the technology while being sensitive to the ethical questions raised. The National Bioethics Advisory Commission (NBAC) even felt they could have gone further and is very supportive of allowing this type of research to continue with Federal funding. The NBAC points out that Federally funding this research will allow Federal oversight to ensure this type of research continues ethically. And finally, the American people support stem cell research as shown by a nationwide survey conducted by Opinion Research Corporation International last year that found that 74% of those polled favored funding of stem cell research by NIH.

Federal funds are crucial to allow scientists to proceed with stem cell research and to exploit fully this novel, innovative, and ground-breaking technology.

HONORING JOHN MUMMA ON HIS RETIREMENT

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a man who has demonstrated deep care for his country and community.

John Mumma will be retiring after acting as a public servant for over 27 years. John, Division of Wildlife Director, decided that he needed to spend more time with his family. John realized that he was spending all of his time at work and that his family was paying the price.

After serving the Forest Service for over 27 years, John will be sorely missed. He has had a long and distinguished career in public service. John became the Director of the Division of Wildlife in November of 1995. Just after he was named director, the division faced the daunting task of completely revamping its management structure. He had the ability to lead the agency through that massive project and many great successes during his distinguished tenure.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute in honor of John's service with the Division of Wildlife over the last 27 years. The State of Colorado will be hard pressed to find another leader like him.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CHARLES F. BASS

OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I was regrettably absent on Monday, January 31, and consequently missed a recorded vote on H.R. 2130. Had I been present, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall vote No. 3.

A TRIBUTE IN HONOR OF ELEANOR NADOBNY

HON. JAMES A. BARCIA

OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. BARCIA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a wonderful lady, Ms. Eleanor Nadobny, of Bay City, MI, on the occasion of her retirement from Local 362 United Auto Workers. Both in character and spirit, Eleanor is an inspiration to those around her and will be sorely missed by her boss and her co-workers.

Eleanor was born on October 2, 1920, in my home town of Bay City, and has lived and contributed to our community her entire life. Like so many of our neighbors, her father immigrated from Poland, having made his way from Ellis Island to eventually raise his family in Michigan.

Eleanor has been a member of the Saint Stanislaus Church in Bay City most of her life. She is much loved by parishioners for her faithful presence and contributions to the Church.

On September 6, 1941, Eleanor married Mr. Arthur John Nadobny. They had three children—Barbara, Carolyn, who later married Gary Ciaciuch, and Arthur, who married Janie Nalazek. And in a sad turn of fate, her husband passed away on February 16, 1960. Eleanor became a widow with three children to support.

At that time, she was working from her home as a photograph colorist. For each photograph that she hand colored, she was paid only $1.25. And from that, she had to buy her paints, her brushes, and support her family.

On March 26, 1967, she was hired by Local 362 as a bookkeeper. At that time, Local 362 represented some 3,400 members of GM-Powertrain. She has worked for those members, and their sons and daughters for the past 33 years. Those who have ever asked for those members, and their sons and daughters for the past 33 years. Those who have ever asked for a pressing issue, know that she is, indeed, a treasure.

Eleanor's retirement from Local 362 is a great loss for the union, but her family is sure to benefit. She is known to be a great cook, and makes a homemade dinner for her family every Sunday. On that day, her eight grand-children—Susan and Mark Rosebrock, Michelle Ciaciuch, Mark and Lisa Ciaciuch, Chad Nadobny, Kari Nadobny, and Scott Clerc—and her great grandchild Brooke Rosebrock, sit down for a wonderful meal. Eleanor's Polish meatballs and golabki are particularly famous.

I'm suré Eleanor will have much happiness during her retirement, and hope that she continues cooking, traveling, and enjoying one of her favorite activities, going to Branson, MO, to attend the great performances there.

Mr. Speaker, I invite you and our colleagues to join me today in honoring Ms. Eleanor Nadobny for her fine work these many years on behalf of Local 362. Please join me, on the occasion of Eleanor's retirement, in wishing her many more wonderful years with her family, and saying thank you for the many years she has invested on behalf of the working men and women of GM-Powertrain.

WILLIAM N. BALTZ, MEMBER OF CONGRESS, 22ND CONGRES-SIONAL DISTRICT-ILLINOIS

HON. JERRY F. COSTELLO

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the memory of a former colleague, the Honorable William N. Baltz, D-Millstadt, who represented the 22nd Congressional District of Illinois from March 4, 1913 to March 3, 1915.

The Baltz family came originally from Hessen-Darmstadt, Germany. Early records indicate that most members of their family were engaged in agricultural pursuits. One was a blacksmith, while another served as the Mayor of Gross Bierbrau. Johann II and his wife Maria along with their seven children departed Bremen, Germany on June 3, 1834 and arrived in Baltimore on August 25. One son disappeared in Philadelphia on their trek westward. Johann and his family traveled by wagon and boat down the Ohio River valley to St. Louis and in December of that year they settled in Sugar Loaf Township, just west of Millstadt, Illinois, where that home still stands. Five children were born there and their legacy continues today.

The descendants of Maria and Johann are numerous. The Baltz family served as farmers, teachers, storekeepers, postmaster, lawyers, bankers, physicians, millers, dentists, engineers, scientists, writers, church, school and also civic leaders. Among the most prominent of these descendants was William Nicolas Baltz, a farmer and staunch democrat. He was born in Millstadt, Illinois on February 5, 1860 and attended the public schools in Millstadt. In addition to farming, he engaged in milling and banking, helping to establish the First National Bank of Millstadt. He served as the President of the Millstadt Board of Education from 1892-1917 and also served on the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors from 1897 to 1913. He was the County Board's Presiding Officer from 1908 to 1911.

William was elected to the 64th United States Congress on March 4, 1913 and represented the Illinois 22nd Congressional district in Woodrow Wilson's first administration up to March 3, 1915. Referred to as "Honest Bill" by his constituents, Congressman Baltz played as the catcher for the annual House vs. Senate baseball game, I might add, without a glove. In the 1914 game, William hit a three bagger off the wall of Griffith stadium in Washington and that year the Democrats beat the Republicans. William's father, Phillip, was also an appointee of President Andrew Johnson serving as the Postmaster of Millstadt. William and a brother G.F. (Gus) married two Diesel sisters, Katherine and Otillia. Gus, also a lover of baseball, graduated from ISNU in 1900 and captained that year's baseball team as a center fielder.

William and his brothers, Richard G. and Fred L., also founded the Millstadt Milling Company in 1893. It was purchased by Golden Dipt Corporation in 1957. The brothers organized the First National Bank of Millstadt in 1903 and it's chief operating officials are still in the Baltz family.

William was unsuccessful in his re-election efforts to the Congress and soon thereafter served along with his brother Fred as the Mayors of Millstadt. William resumed his agricultural and business pursuits for the rest of his life until he passed away on August 22, 1943. He lies at Mount Evergreen Cemetery in Millstadt, Illinois.

As the century ended and the new millennium begins, the work of William N. Baltz and the entire Baltz family stands as a testament to the courage and determination of our immigrant past. Their selfless efforts at continuing to support the community both in the last century and this century reminds us of our nation's heritage and the symbol of what makes America the greatest nation on Earth.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the service and memory of U.S. Congressman William N. Baltz.

HONORING JOHN McGUINNESS

HON, SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to remember the life of a man that meant a great deal to the State of Colorado. John McGuinness recently passed away in Broomfield, Colorado. He was 67 years old.

John was born on June 10, 1932 in Queens, New York. He received a bachelor's degree in marketing from Fordham University. He attended graduate school at Columbia University and also worked in live television in the 1950's.

John decided to move to Colorado in 1958. He worked in advertising sales for KWGN-TV, he was involved in early FM stations in Denver and did political consulting for many campaigns. He later founded McGuinness and Associates and returned to consulting for radio and cable television. In the late 1980's, he became the court assigned operator of KDEN, a Denver radio station.

John's marketing degree was helpful when he was appointed to the Colorado State Fair Commission in 1983 by former Colorado Governor Roy Romer. After the General Manager resigned, John took over as the acting director and served with great distinction in that capacity until his resignation in December of 1999. It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer tribute in memory of John McGuinness. He was a great man that will be missed by all those who knew him.

RIGHT-WING EXTREMISM HAS NO PLACE IN AUSTRIA'S DEMOCRACY

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, recent elections in Austria produced the disturbing result of the far right Freedom Party receiving the second most votes among all the parties. The Freedom Party's leader, Joerg Haider, has been an advocate of anti-immigrant policies, and has voiced supportive opinions regarding certain policies of the Nazi era in Austria and Germany. Today, Austrian President Klestil is faced with a choice of accepting a governing coalition that would include Mr. Haider's party as a partner with the center right People's Party.

Such a government would call into question Austria's longstanding reputation for tolerance, and as a haven for refugees from less fortunate countries, its strong championship of human rights, and its repudiation of its own unfortunate past history. As someone who has viewed himself as a friend of Austria, I believe it is incumbent that all of us in this body who value human rights to speak up and urge President Klestil and the Austrian people not to follow the extremist path represented by Mr. Haider and the Freedom Party's followers.

We should be mindful that the Austrian Freedom Party is not a unique political phenomenon in Europe. There are other nations in which far right parties have enjoyed increasing popularity. Our position with regard to the next government in Austria will be closely watched by leaders of those other extremist parties.

Our friends in the European Union have taken a strong position, indicating that they will take all possible steps to isolate Austria within the EU if Haider is part of the Austrian government. As Portugal's Prime Minister Gutteres, speaking as President of the EU, has said "There comes times when we have to be faithful to our values." Our government and the Congress should also be forthright in expressing our views on the unacceptability of views such as those expressed by Mr. Haider throughout his political career.

In doing so we must be clear that we respect the Austrian people, and believe that Austria's rightful place is among those nations that have striven for peace, justice and human rights. We urge them at this critical juncture in Austria's history not to depart from the path they have followed for more than fifty years. Whatever social or other problems they believe they face, the answer does not lie in the kinds of policies and beliefs voiced by Joerg Haider. We want to see Austria anchored firmly in those trans-Atlantic and European institutions that represent a community of shared values and political beliefs, but we will firmly defend those very values and beliefs that give our community its definition and leadership role in the world today. Right wing extremism should have no place in our community of naWASHINGTON & LEE REPUBLICAN MOCK CONVENTION

HON. BOB GOODLATTE

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commend my alma mater, Washington and Lee University, on its recent 2000 Republican Mock Convention.

Every four years since 1908, the students of Washington and Lee have gathered at the Mock Convention to attempt to correctly predict the presidential nominee of the political party currently out of the White House. Over the years, W&L students have had a remarkable success rate in their predictions—in fact, since 1948, the Mock Convention has only erred once in correctly predicting the presidential nominee, when it selected Edward Kennedy over George McGovern in 1972.

Washington and Lee has received national acclaim for its Mock Convention from numerous sources over the years. The Washington Post has declared the Washington and Lee Mock Convention "one of the nation's oldest and most prestigious mock conventions," and Time Magazine has called it the "biggest and boomingest" of all amateur gatherings.

Last Saturday, Washington and Lee held its 2000 Mock Convention, which was a great success. I was privileged to join a very distinguished group of federal, state, and local leaders in addressing the Convention, and the W&L students were as engaged and energized as ever.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend Washington and Lee University on another excellent Mock Convention, and I am confident that the students of W&L have yet again correctly chosen the next Republican presidential nominee. Congratulations to W&L on a very successful 2000 Mock Convention.

HONORING DR. GERALD E. HOWE UPON HIS RETIREMENT

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize a true asset to the medical profession who has recently retired after three decades of change. Dr. Gerald E. Howe officially retired from active medical practice on December 31, 1999.

Born in Deadwood, South Dakota, Gerald undertook his undergraduate studies at the University of Colorado and the University of South Dakota, then medical school at Temple University in Philadelphia. Gerald and his family decided that they wanted to move from the crowed east coast and Vermont. Milder winters and nearby mountains lead them to Montelores, Colorado in 1969.

Gerald has served in many medical staff leadership positions throughout his career. He has been chief of medical staff several times and served on the hospital board. He was on the hospital board which supported the development of Montezuma County Hospital District and was instrumental in the building of the Vista Grande Nursing Home facility at its present location.

Gerald has always considered patient care to be the most important issue in the medical profession. With changes in policy and technology, Gerald still regards the patient as the "hallmark of medical care."

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer tribute in honor of Dr. Gerald Howe's retirement and thank him for his years of hard work, dedication and service.

ELECTRONIC BENEFIT TRANSFER INTEROPERABILITY AND PORT-ABILITY ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. EVA M. CLAYTON

OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, January 31, 2000

Mrs. CLAYTON, Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleagues in support of the electronic Benefit Transfer Interoperability and Portability Act of 1999. This legislation will enable food stamp shoppers to redeem their nutrition benefits electronically in authorized stores located beyond the borders of their states. The need for this legislation is significant.

According to a recent study conducted by Benton International on behalf of the National ClearingHouse Automated Association (NACHA), there were 1,685,857 interstate food stamp transactions during a six-month period. If we assume that interstate food stamp transactions existed nationwide for the entire year of 1999, the projected annual nationwide volume of food stamp interstate transaction would be 5.7 million. Although the vast majority of food stamp recipients spend their benefits at retailers close to home, the Benton study proves that a significant number of shoppers need the flexibility to shop at stores across state lines, which is a program benefit enjoyed without restrictions under the previous coupon redemption system.

When the U.S. Department of Agriculture Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) replaced food stamp coupons with "Electronic Benefit Transfer" cards, program participants and retailers experienced enormous difficulty since there was lack of uniformity among state EBT equipment. Furthermore, FNS incurs additional costs to implement its regulation requiring States to equip authorized food retailers, upon request, with EBT-only terminal. For example, using a leasing fee of $21.50 per month per terminal, the annual cost of the government for EBT-only terminal deployment nationwide may range from $25,000 to 75,000. Even with the EBT-only terminal, the different designs and procedures in state equipment continued to prevent shopping in other states.

S. 1733 is a practical legislative solution to these problems. First it gives the Secretary of Agriculture the authority to develop a national uniform standard of interoperability based on the "QUEST" rules which were developed by retailers, State Food Stamp Program Administrators, and the Food and Nutrition Service under the guidance of the NACHA EBT Council. Although the QUEST rules are being used by a majority of the states, this legislation gives the Secretary authority to make the changes needed to fit the goal of the Food Stamp Program.

Also, S. 1733 limits the annual costs of switching and settling fees at $500,000.00. This is a positive change from the original draft of this legislation because the federal government should not finance new technology utilized by retailers.

From the outset, the Administration has worked tirelessly to ensure the success of the Food Stamp Program's conversion to electronic benefit delivery, and I offer my continued commitment and support in making sure that this critical nutrition assistance is provided efficiently and effectively.

Mr. Speaker, I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. PATRICK J. KENNEDY

OF RHODE ISLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, on January 31, 2000, I was unavoidably detained and consequently missed two votes. Had I been here I would have voted: "Yes" on the passagee of H. Con. Res. 244, rollcall vote No. 2: "Yes" on the passage of H.R. 2130, rollcall vote No. 3.

DAVE M. DAVIS, RECIPIENT OF 2000 GOVERNOR'S AWARD THE FOR EXCELLENCE IN THE ARTS

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the winner of the 2000 Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts, Dave Davis.

Dave was nominated by the Grand Junction Commission of Arts and Culture for his activism as founder of Art on the Corner, a former executive director of the Art Center, a past appointee of former Colorado Governor, Roy Romer, to the Colorado Council on the Arts, and one of the leading artists in the Grand Valley since the late 1970's.

Dave was Executive Director of the Western Colorado Center for the Arts for nine years. During his tenure he created a multitude of innovative programs, quality exhibits, outreach efforts to underserved areas, and expansion of facilities, collections and classes. Dave's belief that the Grand Valley could become a renowned arts community is the foundation of everything he does.

Dave opened an exhibit, Art on the Corner, in downtown Grand Junction in 1984. This unique outdoor sculpture exhibit began as a display of 33 sculptures by Dave and other area artists along Main Street. Every year the exhibit is rotated and has grown to include over 100 works of art.

Dave is a native of Boulder, Colorado who moved with his family to Grand Junction in 1972. He attended Mesa State College. Dave's full-time pursuit of the arts began in 1977. He creates abstract and realistic sculpture. He is adamant in his desire to promote the arts both as a major economic force and as an industry. He is adamant in his desire to promote the arts both as a major economic force and as an industry.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute to Dave Davis with congratulations on being named the recipient of the 2000 Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts.

HONORING THE CONTRIBUTIONS OF CATHOLIC SCHOOLS

SPEECH OF

HON. JUANITA MILLENDER-McDONALD

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 1, 2000

Ms. MILLENDER-McDONALD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the contributions and the importance of education preparation in Catholic schools. For decades, they have enriched the lives of children past and present. I was educated at Holy Family High, a Catholic school in my hometown and I have felt the benefits throughout my life. The importance of education is one value that has remained with me through my years as a parent, an educator, and as a Congresswoman. Education is very significant in the continued success of our great nation. A Catholic institution provides a balance of strong education complimented by the support of a strong moral and spiritual environment to prepare well-balanced young persons for entering our society.

Statistics have shown that the United States has gained immense benefits from the Catholic education system, educating some 2.6 million students at a saving to our nation of more than $17.2 billion dollars. Further, Catholic education has an impressive graduation rate of 95 percent and more than 83 percent of those graduates go on to college. Catholic schools focus not only upon intellectual encouragement and development but also on the moral and spiritual fiber of each student. These students preserve this enriched relationship with their faith, families and community.

Recognizing Catholic schools for their contributions to the community of the United States shows the respect we have for these institutions and to thank the dedicated faculties and administrators for the care they have taken of the students entrusted to their guardianship. Educating our youth is perhaps our greatest responsibility as a Nation, and I am thankful for the daily contributions made by these institutions toward that aim.

TRIBUTE TO THE VIRCO MANUFACTURING CO.

HON. STEVEN T. KUYKENDALL

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. KUYKENDALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Virco Manufacturing Co., an important business within my district. Virco today celebrates its 50th year as the largest manufacturer of educational furniture in the country.

Shortly after World War II, Julian Virtue bought the Slauson Aircraft Co. on February 2, 1950, and converted the war equipment manufacturing company to a firm specializing in the production of educational furniture. It was under the leadership of Julian Virtue and his son Robert, now chairman of the board and CEO, that Virco went on to become an industry leader.

Virco is a leading supplier of tables, chairs, and storage equipment for schools, convention centers, auditoriums, places of worship, and hotels. Virco employs 2,400 individuals nationwide, including 700 jobs at its headquarters in Torrance, CA.

The Virco Manufacturing Co. is a valuable member of the Torrance community. Their contributions have been numerous. I congratulate Virco and its employees on this milestone and I wish them continued success.

1999 CONTRACTOR OF THE YEAR, GREGG RIPPY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the 1999 Contractor of the Year. Mr. Gregg Rippy was nominated for the award by the Colorado Contractors Association.

The Colorado Contractors Association emphasizes skill, integrity and responsibility as key traits of its members. These qualities are also what the association requires for the Contractor of the Year award. Another quality that Gregg displays amply is leadership.

Gregg has been a Colorado Contractors Association member for 17 years and has won numerous awards from both the state and national levels. During his recent presidency of Grand River Construction Company in Glenwood Springs, Colorado, the company was named chapter of the year on the national level by the Associated General Contractors of America and Gregg was named national chapter president of the year. He is now a national director with Associated General Contractors of America and has served as chairman of the Colorado Contractors Association legislative committee for four years. Gregg is also a co-owner of Rocky Mountain Redi-Mix.

A Colorado native, Gregg has followed a family tradition by becoming a contractor. His father, grandfather and uncle were all in the construction business. He first joined Grand River Construction after graduating from Colorado State University and eventually became president of the company.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute to my dear friend, Gregg Rippy, 1999 Contractor of the Year. His commitment to his country, his community and his profession is deeply admirable and highly commendable.

TAIWAN SECURITY ENHANCEMENT ACT

SPEECH OF

HON. THOMAS M. DAVIS

OF VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, February 1, 2000

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support H.R. 1838, the Taiwan Security Enhancement Act.

This legislation is important because it reaffirms our commitment to support democracy and economic stability in Asia. In 1979, Congress passed the Taiwan Relations Act which ensured Taiwan's security by providing it with sufficient defensive weapons so it may protect and maintain its own national defense. While the U.S. and Taiwan do not share full diplomatic ties, our unique relationship with Taiwan demonstrates that Taiwan's security should be reinforced and enhanced.

The government of Taiwan is a representative democracy and the people of Taiwan will elect a new President next month. Taiwan is a bright example of how a democratic government which allows the free market to operate becomes a region of peace coupled with remarkable economic growth. Taiwan is the world's 15th largest economy and is the United States' 7th largest trading partner, while the United States is Taiwan's largest export market.

Given the events which have transpired over the past several years, it is essential that we protect American interests by promoting peace in the Taiwan Straits. H.R. 1838 will augment the process for defense sales to Taiwan by requiring the President to report annually to Congress Taiwan's requests for defense products, detailing why Taiwan needs these items, ad justifying any decision that the United States makes to reject or postpone such arms sales to Taiwan. Furthermore, H.R. 1838 will address the deficiencies in Taiwan's readiness by supporting Taiwan's increased participation at U.S. defense colleges, requiring the enhancement of our military exchanges and joint training, and require the Secretary of Defense to develop a program to enhance operational training and exchanges between the Taiwanese and U.S. militaries on the issues of threat analysis, force planning, and operational methods.

Taiwan is and continues to be a strong U.S. ally. For this reason, I believe the priorities outlined in H.R. 1838 are imperative if we are to maintain peace and stability in this region of the world. Given the People's Republic of China's tendency to engage in aggressive rhetoric and brinkmanship, Taiwan's self-defense capability should be improved and strengthened. A secure Taiwan would provide a better foundation and possible progress for cross-Strait dialogue.

I believe we must honor our commitments in the Taiwan Strait. The Republic of China is a vibrant nation with an expanding economy, and it is my belief that America should support Taiwan in its endeavors to remain free and democratic.

TIME FOR HAITIANS, NICA-RAGUANS AND CENTRAL AMERI-CANS TO ADJUST THEIR STATUS UNDER HRIFA AND NACARA

HON. CARRIE P. MEEK

OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mrs. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, today, I introducing a bill to extend the time for eligible Hatians, Nicaraguans, and Central Americans to apply to adjust their status and become permanent residents under the Haitian Refugee Immigration Fairness Act of 1998

[HRIFA] and the Nicaraguan Adjustment and Central American Relief Act [NACARA]

My bill would extend the time for eligible persons to apply to adjust their status under HRIFA and NACARA to October 1, 2001 or until 12 months after the date that the INS adopts final regulations implementing HRIFA and NACARA, whichever date is later.

Presently, under HRIFA and NACARA, eligible Haitians, Nicaraguans and Central Americans must apply to adjust their status to permanent residency by April 1, 2000 or they will lose their right to do so. The INS estimates that at least 50,000 Haitians are eligible to adjust their status under HRIFA. The Haitian community estimates the number as closer to 100,000 people. To date, only about 18,000 eligible Haitians have applied. Similarly, there are thousands of qualified Nicaraguans and Central Americans who have yet to adjust their status under NACARA.

Qualified applicants must pay very substantial filing fees to adjust their status under HRIFA and NACARA. For large families, these fees can amount to thousands of dollars. I have been told of a case where a person working full-time, earning a $20,000 income, had to pay over $2,000 in filing fees for his family. Many eligible applicants who are working are finding it very difficult to come with the filling fees. These fees are extremely burdensome. We should be reducing them. At a minimum, we should give people more time to earn them

Moreover, because of language and cultural barriers, many eligible applicants are not even aware of their rights to adjust their status under HRIFA and NACARA. Finally, there have been very substantial bureaucratic delays in the issuance of regulations implementing HRIFA and NACARA. The INS received many public comments on its proposed HRIFA and NACARA regulations and these comments are still being reviewed and considered

To date, final regulations have not been issued under either HRIFA and NACARA. As a result, the INS has not even definitively stated the standards that will govern its interpretation and implementation of HRIFA and NACARA. Simply put, the regulatory climate remains unsettled.

Mr. Speaker, HRIFA and NACARA were designed to allow eligible Haitians, Nicaraguans and Central Americans to become permanent residents. We must not allow high filing fees, language or cultural barriers, or delays in the issuance of implementing regulations to frustrate the intention behind these bills. We need to extend the filing deadline to assure that all eligible Haitians, Nicaraguans, and Central Americans receive a full and fair opportunity to adjust their status.

We must assure that all eligible persons are fully informed of their rights to adjust their status, that they know definitively the final regulations under which their rights will be determined, and that they receive an adequate period of time to earn the substantial filing fees that presently must accompany applications under HRIFA and NACARA.

Mr. Speaker, Representatives LINCOLN DIAZ-BALART, ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN, ALCEE HASTINGS and PETER DEUTSCH are original cosponsors of my bill. I urge all my colleagues to support this critically important legislation.

SAN LUIS VALLEY PEACE OFFI-CER OF 1999, GEORGE DINGFELDER

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to congratulate the San Luis Valley Peace Officer of 1999.

Officer George Dingfelder, based in Alamosa, Colorado, has won this disguished award due to his high standard of professionalism and outstanding commitment to his field. George has made it a personal pledge to fight drunk driving and drug use in the San Luis Valley. George has made several contacts with drunk drivers and drug traffickers. He has recorded more than 500 drunk driving arrests and confiscated several hundred pounds of marijuana in his five year career. George was honored by Mothers Against Drunk Driving in 1998 for his efforts stopping drivers from being on the road while intoxicated

George is also a local hero. He and his wife, Stephanie, saved a young boy when his life was threaten by a leopard at the Cheyenne Mountain Zoo. The leopard attacked the boy through a fence, but George and Stephanie were successful at fending off the rather large cat. As a result of their bravery, George and Stephanie were awarded Colorado's Life Saving Award by Colorado Governor Bill Owens.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer this tribute to Officer George Dingfelder for his outstanding bravery and commitment to uphold the law. He has truly made a difference in the San Luis Valley.

HONORING ROBERT H. MILLER, A TRUE AMERICAN HERO

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, February 2, 2000

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to pause and recognize the life of a true American Hero. Robert Miller, who was a World War II veteran, passed away on January 12, 2000. He was 75 years old.

Bob served in the United States Armed Forces during one of the most infamous days in history. On June 6, 1944, Bob made it up only 15 feet on Omaha Beach before a sniper's bullet severed his spine. He was only 20 years old, and he would never walk again.

Bob received the Purple Heart and his unit, B Company of the 149th Combat Engineers, was awarded a presidential unit citation and the French Croix De Guerre. After returning to the United States to recover from his injuries, Bob met his future bride, Pat Korber. They were married in 1950.

Bob attended the Kansas City Art Institute and earned a degree in commercial design. He worked for Goldblatt Tool Company until his retirement in 1978.

Bob and Pat moved to Pueblo, Colorado in 1980.

A very patriotic man, Bob never missed an opportunity to fly the flag or to visit with old military friends. In 1999, Bob drove to Des Moines, lowa for a reunion. He knew no limits when it came to serving his country or staying in contact with those who had served with him. Bob was also in charge of a project to make a memorial to their military unit more conspicuous. The Air Force even flew a piece of granite for them to France.

Bob also liked to play wheelchair basketball. In 1973, he was one of the first people inducted into the National Wheelchair Basketball Hall of Fame. He served as the National Wheelchair Basketball Association's first president Bob was very involved in his community and his parish, Our Lady of the Meadows.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I would like to offer tribute to Bob Miller. He was a man that will be missed by his community and everyone who knew him. He was a great American who deserves our highest praise and regard.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Thursday, February 3, 2000 may be found in the Daily Digest of today's RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

FEBRUARY 8

9:30 a.m.

Armed Services

To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for fiscal year 2001 for the Department of Defense, and the future years defense program.

SD-106

Aging
To hold hearings on certain provisions of S. 1895, to amend the Social Security Act to preserve and improve the medicare program, focusing on its overall restructuring plan, and prescription drug coverage.

SD-562

Appropriations

Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Subcommittee

To hold hearings on suicide, focusing on prevention and awareness.

Room to be announced

10 a.m.

Budget

To hold hearings on the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year

SD-608

Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs

To hold hearings on S. 1879, to promote international monetary stability and to share seigniorage with officially dollarized countries.

SD-628

10:30 a.m.

Foreign Relations

To hold hearings on the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year 2001 for foreign aid, and to review U.S. foreign policy.

SD-419

FEBRUARY 9

9:30 a.m.

Governmental Affairs

To hold hearings to examine the rising cost of college tuition and the effectiveness of the Federal financial aid.

10 a.m.

Budget

To continue hearings on the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year

SD-608

Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs

To hold hearings to examine loan guarantees and rural television service

SD-628

10:30 a.m.

Commerce, Science, and Transportation Consumer Affairs, Foreign Commerce, and Tourism Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for the Federal Trade Commission.

SR-253

Environment and Public Works

Business meeting to consider pending calendar business.

SD-406

Foreign Relations

To hold hearings to examine U.S. foreign policy priorities.

SD-419

FEBRUARY 10

10 a.m.

Governmental Affairs

To continue hearings to examine the rising cost of college tuition and the effectiveness of the Federal financial aid.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings to examine e-commerce, federal policies, and consumer protection.

SD-192

10:30 a.m.

Foreign Relations

To hold hearings on the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year 2001 for foreign aid, and to review U.S. foreign policy.

SD-419

2 p.m.

. Judiciary

Immigration Subcommittee

To hold hearings to examine enhancing border security.

SD-226

FEBRUARY 11

10 a.m.

Budget

To resume hearings on the President's proposed budget request for fiscal year 2001.

SD-608

FEBRUARY 22

3 p.m.

Energy and Natural Resources

Forests and Public Land Management Subcommittee

To hold hearings on S. 1722, to amend the Mineral Leasing Act to increase the maximum acreage of Federal leases for sodium that may be held by an entity in any 1 State; H.R. 3063, to amend the Mineral Leasing Act to increase the maximum acreage of Federal leases for sodium that may be held by an entity in any one State; and S. 1950, to amend the Mineral Leasing Act of 1920 to ensure the orderly development of coal, coalbed methane, natural gas, and oil in the Powder River Basin, Wyoming and Montana.

SD-366

FEBRUARY 23

10:30 a.m.

Environment and Public Works

To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for fiscal year 2001 Environmental Protection the Agency.

SD-406

FEBRUARY 24

10 a.m.

Environment and Public Works

Transportation and Infrastructure Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed legislation authorizing funds for fiscal year 2001 for the Army Corps of Engineers.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget extimates for fiscal year 2001 for the the Department of Commerce.

SD-138

FEBRUARY 29

10 a.m.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 2001 for the Department of Justice.

SD-192

MARCH 2

10 a.m.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 2001 for the Department of State.

S-146, Capitol

MARCH 7

10 a.m.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 2001 for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Drug Enforcement Administration, and Immigration and Naturalization Service, all of the Department of Justice.

SD-192

MARCH 21

10 a.m.

Appropriations Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 2001 for the Federal Communications Commission and the Securities and Excannge Commission

S-146. Capitol

MARCH 23

10 a.m.

Appropriations

Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Subcommittee

To hold hearings on proposed budget estimates for fiscal year 2001 for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration of the Department of Commerce, and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

S-146, Capitol

POSTPONEMENTS

FEBRUARY 8

10 a.m.

Judiciary

Technology, Terrorism, and Government Information Subcommittee

To hold hearings to examine issues relating to identity theft.

SD-226

Daily Digest

HIGHLIGHTS

Senate passed Bankruptcy Reform Act. House Committee ordered reported the Marriage Tax Penalty Relief Act.

Senate

Chamber Action

Routine Proceedings, pages S225-S304

Measures Introduced: Five bills and three resolutions were introduced, as follows: S. 2022–2026, S.J. Res. 38, and S. Res. 251–252. Page S285

Measures Reported: Reports were made as follows: S. 1053, to amend the Clean Air Act to incorporate certain provisions of the transportation conformity regulations, as in effect on March 1, 1999, with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. (S. Rept. No. 106–228)

Page S285

Measures Passed:

Bankruptcy Reform Act: By 83 yeas to 14 nays, 1 responding present (Vote No. 5), Senate passed H.R. 833, to amend title 11 of the United States Code, after striking all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the text of S. 625 (Senate companion measure), and after taking action on the following amendments proposed thereto:

Pages S225-57

Adopted:

Schumer/Durbin Modified Amendment No. 2762, to modify the means test relating to safe harbor provisions.

Page S243

By 80 yeas to 17 nays, 1 responding present (Vote No. 2), Schumer Amendment No. 2763, to ensure that debts incurred as a result of clinic violence are nondischargeable.

Pages S226–32, S247

Rejected:

Feingold Modified Amendment No. 2748, to provide for an exception to a limitation on an automatic stay under section 362(b) of title 11, United States Code, relating to evictions and similar proceedings to provide for the payment of rent that becomes due after the petition of a debtor is filed. (By 54 yeas to 43 nays, 1 responding present (Vote No. 3), Senate tabled the amendment.)

Pages S237-41, S243-45, S248

By 29 yeas to 68 nays, 1 responding present (Vote No. 4), Levin Amendment No. 2658, to provide for the nondischargeability of debts arising from firearm-related debts.

Pages S238-39, S241-43, S248-49

Withdrawn:

Reid (for Harkin) Amendment No. 2770, invalidating hidden security interests on nearly valueless household liens. Pages $232-33, $236-37

During consideration of this measure today, Senate also took the following action:

Reed (for Sessions) Modified Amendment No. 2650, to control certain abuses of reaffirmations, previously adopted on November 10, 1999, was further modified.

Pages S233–36

Senate insisted on its amendment, and requested a conference with the House thereon. Page S255

Subsequently, S. 625 was placed back on the Senate calendar. Page S255

Nomination: Senate began consideration of the nomination of Alan Greenspan, of New York, to be Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

Pages S258–78, S301

A unanimous-consent agreement was reached providing for further consideration of the nomination on Thursday, February 3, 2000, with a vote on confirmation to occur at 10:30 a.m. Page S301

Nuclear Waste Policy Amendments Act—Cloture Vote Vitiated: A unanimous-consent agreement was reached providing that the cloture vote scheduled for today be vitiated. Page S301

Removal of Injunction of Secrecy: The injunction of secrecy was removed from the following treaty:

Treaty with Egypt on Mutual Legal Assistance in Criminal Matters (Treaty Doc. No. 106-19).

The treaty was transmitted to the Senate today, considered as having been read for the first time, and referred, with accompanying papers, to the Committee on Foreign Relations and was ordered to be printed.

Page S301

Sequential Committee Referral—Agreement: A unanimous-consent agreement was reached providing that when the Committee on Governmental Affairs reports S. 1977, Corporate Subsidy Reform Commission Act, the bill then be sequentially referred to the Committee on Finance for a period of up to 45 days during which the Senate is in session. Page S301

Nominations Received: Senate received the following nominations:

Thomas G. Weston, of Michigan, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Minister-Counselor, for the rank of Ambassador during his tenure of service as Special Coordinator for Cyprus.

Susan S. Jacobs, of Virginia, to be Ambassador to Papua New Guinea, and to serve concurrently and without additional compensation as Ambassador to Solomon Islands, and as Ambassador to the Republic

Karl William Hofmann, of Maryland, to be Ambassador to the Togolese Republic.

John F. Tefft, of Virginia, to be Ambassador to the Republic of Lithuania.

Janet A. Sanderson, of Arizona, to be Ambassador to the Democratic and Popular Republic of Algeria.

Donald Y. Yamamoto, of New York, to be Ambassador to the Republic of Djibouti.

Lauress L. Wise II, of Virginia, to be Commissioner of Education Statistics for a term expiring June 21, 2003.

18 Air Force nominations in the rank of general.

1 Army nomination in the rank of general.

2 Navy nominations in the rank of admiral.

Routine lists in the Air Force, Army, Marine Corps. Pages S302-04

Messages From the House: Pages S280-81

Measures Referred: Page S281

Communications: Pages S281-85

Statements on Introduced Bills: Pages S285-92

Additional Cosponsors: Pages S292-93

Authority for Committees: Page S294

Pages S294-S301

Additional Statements:

Enrolled Bills Presented: Page S281

Record Votes: Four record votes were taken today. (Total—5) Pages S247-49, S255

Adjournment: Senate convened at 9:30 a.m., and adjourned at 6:52 p.m., until 10:30 a.m., on Thursday, February 3, 2000. (For Senate's program, see the remarks of the Acting Majority Leader in today's Record on page $301.)

Committee Meetings

(Committees not listed did not meet)

BOSNIA AND KOSOVO SECURITY

Committee on Armed Services: Committee concluded open and closed hearings to examine current security status in Bosnia and Kosovo following U.S. military operations, after receiving testimony from Gen. Wesley K. Clark, USA, Commander-in-Chief, United States European Command, Supreme Allied Commander, Europe.

INTERNET TAXATION

Committee on the Budget: Committee concluded hearings to examine Internet taxation issues, focusing on the implications of State and local government sales taxes applied to purchases made over the Internet, after receiving testimony from Massachusetts Governor Argeo Paul Cellucci, Boston; Michigan Governor John Engler, Lansing, on behalf of the National Governors' Association; Charles E. McLure, Jr., Stanford University Hoover Institute, Stanford, California; and Aaron Lukas, Cato Institute Center for Trade Policy Studies, and Iris J. Lav, Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, both of Washington, D.C.

IRS REFORM

Committee on Finance: Committee held hearings on the status of Internal Revenue Service reform, focusing on the implementation of the Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, receiving testimony from Charles O. Rossotti, Commissioner, and W. Val Oveson, National Taxpayer Advocate, both of the Internal Revenue Service, and David C. Williams, Inspector General for Tax Administration, all of the Department of the Treasury; and James R. White, Director, Tax Policy and Administration Issues, General Government Division, General Accounting Office.

Hearings recessed subject to call.

GENE THERAPY SAFETY

Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions: Subcommittee on Public Health held hearings to examine certain issues regarding patient safety in gene therapy clinical trials, focusing on federal oversight procedures and guidelines for informing patients and their families of potential risks and benefits of gene therapy, receiving testimony from Amy Patterson, Director, Office of Biotechnology Activities, National Institutes of Health, and Jay P. Siegel, Director, Office of Therapeutics Research and Review, Center for Biologics Evaluation and Research, Food and Drug Administration, both of the Department of Health and Human Services; Inder M. Verma, Salk Institute Laboratory of Genetics, La Jolla, California; LeRoy Walters, Georgetown University Kennedy Institute of Ethics, Washington, D.C.; H. Stewart Parker, Targeted Genetics Corporation, Seattle, Washington, on behalf of the Biotechnology Industry Organization; Eric Kast, Norman, Oklahoma, on behalf of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation; and Paul L. Gelsinger, Tucson, Arizona.

Hearings recessed subject to call.

WORLD THREATS ASSESSMENT

Select Committee on Intelligence: Committee concluded open and closed hearings to examine worldwide threats to national security, focusing on traditional and unconventional threats, including proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, state-sponsored terrorism, and non-state terrorists, after receiving testimony from George J. Tenet, Director, Central Intelligence Agency; Vice Adm. Thomas R. Wilson, Director, Defense Intelligence Agency, Department of Defense; and J. Stapleton Roy, Assistant Secretary of State for Intelligence and Research.

House of Representatives

Chamber Action

Bills Introduced: 8 public bills, H.R. 3567–3574; and 3 resolutions, H. Res. 413–415, were introduced. Pages H208–09

Reports Filed: No reports were filed today.

Workplace Goods Job Growth and Competitiveness Act: The House passed H.R. 2005, to establish a statute of repose for durable goods used in a trade or business by a yea and nay vote of 222 yeas to 194 nays, Roll No. 7.

Pages H173-84

Agreed to the Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute as amended. Pages H181–83

Agreed to the Chabot amendment, as modified, that clarifies that the eighteen year statute of repose for durable goods applies to the date when the accident occurs and that provisions do not affect any relief for remediation of the environment.

Pages H181-83

The Terry amendment was offered, but subsequently withdrawn, that sought to exempt durable goods that were not state-of-the-art at the time they were produced.

Page H183

The Clerk was authorized to make technical and conforming corrections in the engrossment of the bill.

Page H184

Earlier the House agreed to H. Res. 412, the rule that provided for consideration of the bill.

Pages H171-73

Legislative Program: The Majority Leader announced the legislative program for the week of February 7. Page H184 Meeting Hour—Monday, February 7: Agreed that when the House adjourns on Thursday, February 3, it adjourn to meet at 2 p.m. on Monday, February 7.

Page H184

Meeting Hour—Tuesday, February 8: Agreed that when the House adjourns on Monday, February 7, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Tuesday, February 8, for morning-hour debate.

Page H184

Calendar Wednesday: Agreed to dispense with the Calendar Wednesday business of Wednesday, February 8.

Page H184

Quorum Calls—Votes: One yea and nay vote developed during the proceedings of the House today and appears on pages H183–84. There were no quorum calls.

Adjournment: The House met at 10:00 a.m. and adjourned at 2:54 p.m.

Committee Meetings

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATIONS

Committee on Appropriations: Subcommittee on Legislative held a hearing on the Office of Compliance, the CBO and the Financial Managers Council. Testimony was heard from Members of Congress; the following officials of the Office of Compliance: Barbara Childs Wallace, member, Board of Directors; and Ricky Silberman, Executive Director; Dan L. Crippen, Director, CBO; the following officials of the Financial Managers Council: Richard L. Brown, Deputy Assistant Comptroller General, Operations, GAO; and John D. Webster, Director, Financial Services, Library of Congress; and public witnesses.

FEDERAL ROLE IN K-12 MATHEMATICS REFORM

Committee on Education and the Workforce: Subcommittee on Early Childhood, Youth and Families and the Subcommittee on Post secondary Education, Training, and Life-Long Learning held a joint hearing on Federal Role in K–12 Mathematics Reform. Testimony was heard from Judith S. Sunley, Interim Director, Office of Education and Human Resources, NSF; Kent McGuire, Assistant Secretary, Office of Education Research and Improvement, Department of Education; and public witnesses.

KYOTO AND THE INTERNET

Committee on Government Reform: Subcommittee on National Economic Growth, Natural Resources and Regulatory Affairs held a hearing on Kyoto and the Internet: The Energy Implications of the Digital Economy. Testimony was heard from Jay E. Hakes, Administrator, Energy Information Administration, Department of Energy; and public witnesses.

GULF WAR VETERANS' ILLNESSES

Committee on Government Reform: Subcommittee on National Security, Veterans' Affairs and International Relations held a hearing on Gulf War Veterans' Illnesses: The Current Research Agenda. Testimony was heard from Kwai Chan, Director, Special Studies and Evaluations Group, GAO; the following officials of the Department of Defense: Lt. Gen. Dale Vesser, USA, Deputy to the Special Assistant, Gulf War Illnesses; Robert Foster, Director, BioSystems; John Mazzuchi, M.D., Deputy Assistant Secretary, Health Affairs; and John Feussner, M.D., Chief Research and Development Officer; Drue Barrett, Chief, Veterans' Health Activity Working Group, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, Department of Health and Human Services; and public witnesses.

NEW CENTURY—CHANGING AMERICAN DIPLOMACY

Committee on International Relations: Held a hearing on Changing American Diplomacy for the New Century. Testimony was heard from the following officials of the Overseas Advisory Panel: Lewis Kaden, Chairman; and Ambassador Langhorne A. Motley, member; and a public witness.

PRIVATE PROPERTY RIGHTS IMPLEMENTATION ACT

Committee on the Judiciary: Subcommittee on the Constitution approved for full Committee action, as amended, H.R. 2372, Private Property Rights Implementation Act of 1999.

COMMON SENSE PROTECTIONS FOR ENDANGERED SPECIES ACT

Committee on Resources: Held a hearing on H.R. 3160, Common Sense Protections for Endangered Species Act. Testimony was heard from public witnesses.

MARRIAGE TAX PENALTY RELIEF ACT

Committee on Ways and Means: Ordered reported, as amended, H.R. 6, Marriage Tax Penalty Relief Act of 1999.

COMMITTEE MEETINGS FOR THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 3, 2000

(Committee meetings are open unless otherwise indicated)

Senate

Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry: to hold hearings to examine the proposed loan guarantee program, focusing on rural satellite and cable system delivery of local broadcast stations to viewers not having access to local television stations, 9 a.m., SR–328A.

Committee on Appropriations: Subcommittee on Treasury and General Government, to hold oversight hearings on the Office of National Drug Control Policy Anti-Drug Media Campaign, 9:30 a.m., SD–138.

Subcommittee on Transportation, with the Committee on the Budget, to hold joint hearings to examine modernizing the Federal Aviation Administration, 10 a.m., SD-608

Committee on Armed Services: to hold hearings on current and future worldwide threats to the national security of the United States; followed by a closed hearing (SH–219), 9:30 a.m., SH–216.

Committee on the Budget: with the Committee on Appropriations, Subcommittee on Transportation, to hold joint hearings to examine modernizing the Federal Aviation Administration, 10 a.m., SD–608.

Committee on Environment and Public Works: Committee on Environment and Public Works, to hold hearings on the nomination of Eric D. Eberhard, of Washington, to be a Member of the Board of Trustees of the Morris K. Udall Scholarship & Excellence in National Environmental Policy Foundation; and the nomination of W. Michael McCabe, of Pennsylvania, to be Deputy Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, 11 a.m., SD–406.

Committee on Finance: Committee on Finance, to hold hearings on the nomination of George L. Farr, of Connecticut, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; the nomination of Charles L. Kolbe, of Iowa, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; the nomination of Nancy Killefer, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; the nomination of Larry L. Levitan, of Maryland, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; the nomination of Steve H. Nickles, of North Carolina, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; the nomination of Robert M. Tobias, of Maryland, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board; and the nomination of Karen Hastie Williams, of the District of Columbia, to be a Member of the Internal Revenue Service Oversight Board, 11 a.m., SD-215.

Select Committee on Intelligence: Select Committee on Intelligence, to hold closed hearings on pending intelligence matters, 2 p.m., SH–219.

Committee on the Judiciary: Subcommittee on Criminal Justice Oversight, to hold hearings to examine the Report of the Commission on the Advancement of Federal Law Enforcement Commission Members, 2 p.m., SD–226.

House

No committee meetings are scheduled.

Next Meeting of the SENATE 10:30 a.m., Thursday, February 3 Next Meeting of the HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES 10 a.m., Thursday, February 3

Senate Chamber

Program for Thursday: Senate will resume consideration of the nomination of Alan Greenspan, of New York, to be Chairman, Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, with a vote on confirmation to occur thereon; following which, Senate will proceed to a period of morning business.

House Chamber

Program for Thursday: Pro forma session.

Extensions of Remarks, as inserted in this issue

HOUSE

Barcia, James A., Mich., E61 Bass, Charles F., N.H., E57, E61 Brady, Robert A., Pa., E56, E58, E58 Clayton, Eva M., N.C., E63 Costello, Jerry F., Ill., E61 Davis, Thomas M., Va., E64 Doolittle, John T., Calif., E60

Gejdenson, Sam, Conn., E55 Gilman, Benjamin A., N.Y., E62 Goodlatte, Bob, Va., E62 Kennedy, Patrick J., R.I., E63 Kucinich, Dennis J., Ohio, E57 Kuykendall, Steven T., Calif., E63 Lantos, Tom, Calif., E56 McInnis, Scott, Colo., E55, E56, E57, E58, E59, E61, E62, E63, E64, E65

Maloney, Carolyn B., N.Y., E60 Meek, Carrie P., Fla., E64 Millender-McDonald, Juanita, Calif., E63 Murtha, John P., Pa., E55 Radanovich, George, Calif., E56, E57, E59 Sandlin, Max, Tex., E55 Skelton, Ike, Mo., E58 Weygand, Robert A., R.I., E59

Congressional Record The public proceedings of each House of Congress, as reported by the Official Reporters thereof, are printed pursuant to directions of the Joint Committee on Printing of authorized by appropriate of the Joint Committee on Printing as authorized by appropriate provisions of Title 44, United States Code, and published for each day that one or both Houses are in session, excepting very infrequent instances when two or more unusually small consecutive issues are printed at one time. ¶Public access to the Congressional Record is available online through GPO Access, a service of the Government Printing Office, free of charge to the user. The online database is updated each day the Congressional Record is published. The database includes both text and graphics from the beginning of the 103d Congress, 2d session (January 1994) forward. It is available on the Wide Area Information Server (WAIS) through the Internet and via asynchronous dial-in. Internet users can access the database by using the World Wide Web; the Superintendent of Documents home page address is http://www.access.gpo.gov/su_docs, by using local WAIS client software or by telnet to swais.access.gpo.gov, then login as guest (no password required). Dial-in users should use communications software and modem to call (202) 512-1661; type swais, then login as guest (no password required). For general information about GPO Access, contact the GPO Access User Support Team by sending Internet e-mail to gpoaccess@gpo.gov, or a fax to (202) 512–1262; or by calling Toll Free 1–888–293–6498 or (202) 512–1530 between 7 a.m. and 5:30 p.m. Eastern time, Monday through Friday, except for Federal holidays. ¶The Congressional Record paper and 24x microfiche will be furnished by mail to subscribers, free of postage, at the following prices: paper edition, $179.00 for six months, $357.00 per year, or purchased for $3.00 per issue, payable in advance; microfiche edition, $141.00 per year, or purchased for $1.50 per issue payable in advance. The semimonthly Congressional Record Index may be purchased for the same per issue prices. Mail orders to: Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, PA 15250-7954, or phone orders to (202) 512-1800, or fax to (202) 512-2250. Remit check or money order, made payable to the Superintendent of Documents, or use VISA, MasterCard, Discover, or GPO Deposit Account. Following each session of Congress, the daily Congressional Record is revised, printed, permanently bound and sold by the Superintendent of Documents in individual parts or by sets. With the exception of copyrighted articles, there are no restrictions on the republication of material from the Congressional Record.